PROVINCIAL ELECTIONS TO BE HELD IN DECEMBER

Sir James Whitney Announces That as Soon as Voters' Lists Are Completed the Legislature Will be Dissolved ---Many Changes in the Cabinet.

Toronto, Oct. 12.—Sir James Whitney has announced that in the near future the Ontario Legislative Assembly will dissolve and that a general election will be held during the early part of December. The exact date of dissolution has not yet been set, nor has the date of the elections.

The Cabinet Ministers held a long conference yesterday afternoon, and later the Premier handed out the following statement:

We have decided to dissolve the House in the near future, and I give this notice now, in order that there may be no suggestion that we desire to hurry the elections. The present Legislature has already existed longer than its predecessor and there are now ten vacant seats. The expense of bye-elections would be large—about $15,000—and this expense would have to be duplicated in less than a year did we not dissolve now.

There are several other very important reasons for our decision—reasons of vital importance to the province—which I shall lay before the public in the course of a week or ten days, or perhaps earlier.

Owing to the length of time necessary for the preparation of the voters' lists in unorganised districts, the polling cannot take place earlier than about the first or second week in December, and the issuing of the writs will be held over until the latest date possible, in order to facilitate the revision of the voters' lists in older Ontario.

I expect that the successor to Mr. Cochrane will be sworn in probably to-morrow.

As was forecasted, W. H. Hearst of the Soo will succeed Hon. Mr. Cochrane.

Many changes in the Cabinet are expected to follow. Hon. J. J. Foy, for some time has been slated for the bench. While the Laurier Government was in power this change was quite improbable, but now that the Conservatives are in control both at Ottawa and in the local House, the improbable has become not only possible, but most likely.

Hon. W. J. Hanna, Provincial Secretary, has been mentioned for the office of Attorney-General, and being the man who comes next in seniority to the present Attorney-General, he will undoubtedly be given that portfolio.

The question arises who shall fill the office of Provincial Secretary should Hon. Mr. Hanna succeed Hon. Mr. Foy.

Two names have been mentioned for the office of Secretary. They are Hon. J. B. Lucas and T. W. McGarry. The whole matter, however, is only conjecture so far, and nothing definite will be known for some time.

Hon. A. J. Matheson, it is reported, will retire in the near future, owing to his failing health. The burden of the Provincial Treasurership is very heavy, and the colonel was forced to take a prolonged vacation during the past summer by reason of a general breakdown. It is hardly likely that he will be desirous of entering upon a campaign which will be followed by a long session.

Owing to Col. Matheson's long and excellent service in Government affairs he will probably be made a Senator, it is said: his many years of experience as Provincial Treasurer and in connection with other Government matters, point him out as a man who would make a strong member of the Senate.

Who the next Treasurer will be is not guessed at yet. The political prophets are silent regarding this portfolio.

Many Messages to the Duke.

Ottawa, Oct. 12.—The following wireless message from the steamer Empress of Ireland has been received:

"The Duke of Connaught is receiving messages of welcome from every station and vessel passed. He received a greeting from Earl Grey, stating that the new Ministry was sworn in, and welcoming him to Canada. Connaught has already Marconied about twenty replies to the messages of courtesy.

"The duchess made a tour of the ship yesterday afternoon, visiting all classes aboard. The duke has already made a similar tour, and has had a cordial reception everywhere. Fine weather continues, and the Empress of Ireland is assuming a festive air. The steamer arrived at Rimouski about ten yesterday morning."

Motor Road to Falls.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Oct. 12.—At a meeting of prominent citizens on the American side yesterday final arrangements were made for building a boulevard between the Falls and Buffalo. The belief was expressed that Canadians would co-operate in the good road movement by shortly building a model highway from here to Toronto, thus connecting Albany and Toronto by motor road.

Paper From Bogs.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Oct. 12.—The announcement was made yesterday that experiments in making building paper from the bogs near Humberstone, in this county, have been successful, and American capitalists would shortly build a large plant to manufacture the strange product.

Memorial to Cardinal Gibbons.

Washington, Oct. 12.—Two thousand clergy and laymen of the Catholic Church will be in Washington to-day to attend the ceremonies of laying the corner-stone of the $240,000 memorial hall to be named in honor of Cardinal Gibbons.

A Plucky Aviator.

Bloomington, Ind., Oct. 12.—Though he had not recovered from a fall at St. Louis some weeks ago, in which both his legs were broken, Horace Kearney, an aviator of that city, attempted an exhibition flight here yesterday and fell again and was seriously injured. He walked with a crutch when he came upon the Indiana University campus to start his biplane. The machine rose fifty feet and then dropped into a brook.

Rogers To Sit For Winnipeg.

Winnipeg, Oct. 12.—The Telegram announces that Alex. Haggart, M.P., has resigned his seat, and that Hon. Robert Rogers will sit for Winnipeg. He was also offered Lisgar and Macdonald by the sitting members. Harry Whitla has been appointed returning officer for the Winnipeg bye-election.

Killed by Falling Brick.

Hamilton, Oct. 12.—David Fedwizi, a foreigner, 27 years of age, was struck on the head by a falling brick at the Hamilton Steel & Iron Co.'s east end plant Tuesday night. His skull was fractured and he died yesterday.

IN SELF-DEFENCE

Arthur Sheridan's Confession Relative to Orillia Tragedy Read in Court

POLICE CHIEF TESTIFIES

Barrie, Oct. 12.—The opening in the trial yesterday morning before Sir John Boyd, of Arthur Sheridan of North Orillia, for the alleged murder of Ross Ford of the same town brought out a crowd that filled the large court rooms to the doors. Peter White, K.C., appeared as crown prosecutor, the prisoner being defended by T. C Robinette, K.C., and J. T. Mulcahy. An hour was spent in empanelling a jury. Ten were challenged by the defence and six by the crown.

Chief Reid of Orillia was the first witness called and told of finding the body of Ross Ford on the road near Geo. Duff's [illegible] after midnight on Aug. 9. The [illegible] a stab wound in the breast and the body was a large pool of blood. Later he noticed three cuts in the back of the coat behind the shoulder. There was no sign of any struggle on the roadway. He told of a confession.

"Orillia. On Wednesday, the 9th day of August, 1911, I was in dancing at Duff's in North Orillia. Ross Ford sent Robert Thoburn into the house to tell me he wanted to see me. I went out to the gate. He said: 'What talk was going around?' I said I didn't know. He asked me to come down the road. He said that some fellow says that I am telling lies. I told him that I didn't know, that I never told lies about anybody. He said we would have to fight it out. I told him I did not want to fight. He said: 'I do not give a damn whether you do or not.' He struck me in the eye and knocked me in the ditch. I got up again and he hit me in the ribs; we clinched and he backed me over a root and we both fell. Then I asked him to let me up and I said: 'I do not want to fight.' He had his hand on my throat. 'I don't give a damn,' he said, 'I will kill you anyway.' I said, 'I do not know about that, Ross; let me up. I have a knife here.' I told him I would put the knife into him if he did not let me up.'

"He still held on. I pulled the knife." I then raised my hand with knife in it and struck him in the breast. I think I stabbed him in the breast first; I only stabbed him twice that I remember. He said then: 'Give me the knife.' I then rolled him over and I got up and he got up also and walked towards Duff's house, about twenty feet and he let a yell out of him and dropped. I went a and got Jim Cable to come down. He called to a crowd of men to come quickly and they came down, some of them.

"I fainted and lay down on the ground for half an hour. Then I got up and looked around and went up the road in a field of shocks and then went to the swamp and met a surveyor and he coaxed me to come back. He said the police were in here after me. It was an old Italian knife I had. The blade was three inches long. I got the Italian knife that I stabbed Ross Ford with down in the Italian swamp. After I stabbed Ford I put the knife under a rail by Duff's gate. I had a fight with Ford about a month ago over some whisky on the 12th of July. At William O'Connor's I had a quarrel with him.

(Signed) "Arthur Sheridan."

James Cable, one of those at the dance, told of Sheridan and Ford going down the road together at invitation of latter, seemingly on good terms. A few minutes later he saw a tussle and the men fell together without making any outcry. Then Sheridan ran toward witness and asked him to "Come quick; I have killed Ford."

George Anderson told much the same story.

Robert Thorburn, a lad of fifteen years of age and a brother of the young girls with whom Sheridan and Ford had been keeping company, corroborated the evidence given by previous witnesses, that he had been asked by Ford to call Sheridan out of the house.

Other witnesses corroborated these stories and the court adjourned.

ITALIANS HAVE LANDED

The First Division of the Army Effect a Successful Landing at Tripoli

WELCOMED BY PEOPLE

Rome, Oct. 12.—The first division of the army of occupation arrived at Tripoli at noon yesterday. The troops were landed safely without incident.

There is a feeling in official circles here that Turkey and her sympathisers, as well as those elements which are antagonistic to Italy, are doing everything possible to engender opposition among the Powers to Italy's plans, and it is believed that certain reports which have been circulated aim chiefly to play on Anglo-German antagonisms. With this object, it is supposed, the report has been spread broadcast that Germany, having planned to obtain Tobruk from Turkey, prior to the beginning of hostilities, will end by obtaining this important strategic point from Italy now as base for operations in the Mediterranean against British supremacy.

All these rumors and reports are officially denied by Italy. It is pointed out by Italian officials that Germany has never taken any step in such a direction in the past and has no intention to ask anything from Italy in the future, while it is also declared that Italy would not dream of being a cat's-paw to draw the chestnuts from the fire for Germany, notwithstanding the alliance.

In connection with this denial, it is stated that the entire situation remains unchanged; that none of the Powers oppose Italy's action and that they have no intention of intervening until Italian dominion in Tripoli is indisputable.

Troops Welcomed.

Tripoli, Oct. 12.—The fast transports bearing portion of the Italian expeditionary forces arrived here yesterday. They were escorted by warships and accompanied by the hospital ship Regina d'Italia. The disembarkation of troops began immediately, the greatest enthusiasm prevailing.

The batteries of the fleet all through the night shelled the surrounding country, which was swept by searchlights. Tripoli has nothing more to fear from Turkish attacks.

Striving For Armistice.

Berlin, Oct. 12.—The armistice between Italy and Turkey, for which German diplomacy has been striving for some time, it is believed here, has practically been concluded, although not yet announced as "official."

It is understood that the transportation of the Italian military expedition will not be interfered with, but that hostilities in all quarters will cease. This is considered in Berlin as equivalent to ending of the war, or at least the warlike movements, which now will be succeeded by negotiations looking to a settlement.

It is regarded as probable that as soon as the strong Italian army has once disembarked at Tripoli, even the young Turk irreconcilables will begin to recognise, as apparently the Ottoman Government already does, that there is no hope of withholding Tripoli from Italy. Then it will be possible for Turkey to enter into peace negotiations, with the prospect of reaching a less unsatisfactory conclusion than would result from a continuation of the conflict.

Holy War Threatened.

Rome, Oct. 12.—Reports from Tripoli yesterday state that the Arabs of the interior are circulating a report that the Great Mandi of the Sahara, having heard of Italian invasion, is gathering arms and men and especially trained horsemen and proclaiming a holy war, which is to be conducted relentlessly until the "infidels" are driven into the sea.

The Italian authorities have found evidence at Benghasi showing that the place was the centre for large importations of rifles for the Senussi and Wadai tribes. The guns were gradually distributed among the tribes of Central Africa.

Strict measures have now been adopted to close this last section of the African coast heretofore free to receive arms and supplies for the tribes of the interior.

Italy's King In Danger.

Rome, Oct. 12.—The Corriere d'Italia says that a patrol of carabineers Tuesday night encountered four men armed with guns in the woods around the castle of San Rossore, where the king is staying. Shots were exchanged. Three of the men escaped, but the fourth was caught. The men are said to be poachers, but the paper points out that they were not known in the neighborhood.

Borrett Must Travel Far.

Ottawa, Oct. 12.—Yesterday's Journal says that Martin Burrell, Minister of Agriculture, representing Yale-Cariboo, will have to do a lot of travelling before he becomes a Minister with the right to a seat. It is necessary for him to come to Ottawa to be sworn in, in order to vacate his seat. Then he will have to go west again to seek re-election.

Attorney-General of Nova Scotia.

Halifax, Oct. 12.—Hon. O. T. Daniels of Annapolis was yesterday appointed Attorney-General of Nova Scotia in succession to Hon. A. K. MacLean, and was sworn in at noon.

Hon. Mr. Daniels was born in 1860 and was educated at Acadia University, where he graduated in arts. He was first elected to the Legislature in 1899.

It is said there will be no opposition to Mr. Daniel's re-election in Annapolis.

SEES BAD WINTER.

J. J. Hill Prophesies Lot of Men Out of Work.

St. Paul, Minn., Oct. 12.—"There will be more idle men this winter than ever before," predicted James J. Hill in discussing the condition of business over the country and particularly in the west.

"This is the reason," continued the chairman of the Great Northern Railroad, "our capacity for production along industrial lines has grown faster than our consumption along the same lines.

"Some years ago the farmer had to raise enough to feed himself and another man in the cities; now he must raise enough for himself, and for two other men, on account of the movement to industry rather than to farms.

"Business is sound," he affirmed, "but, no new enterprises are being started. The politicians and newspapers are to blame. There is too much political ghost dancing. The people are not given the facts. There is uncertainty as to the future on this account, rather than on account of the Supreme Court decisions."

The announcement was made last night that at the next meeting of the Dominion Cabinet — probably next Monday — the matter of providing funds for the payment of the civil service will be taken up.

"The Gun Runner"

By ARTHUR STRINGER

"I'm listening for anything," McKinnon answered, with the "set" over his head. The door shut again. McKinnon turned back to the littered pine table. The foghorn sounded and grew silent: the dynamo purred and buzzed as the starting-box lever crossed down on the contact-pins.

The stranger beside the steamer-chair buttoned his coat. Then he crossed the cabin and turned back to peer at the operator, bent low over his table as he called and listened, and called again.

"So I can count on you in this?" he asked in his quiet and reassuring guttural. His hand was already on the cabin door-knob.

"To the finish," answered the other man pregnantly, replacing his earphones and holding them close to his head with his muffling handkerchiefs.

CHAPTER VI.

THE SECOND VISITOR

McKinnon was oppressed by the thought that the hour was late and his body bone-tired. But he did not close communication with the Royal Mail operator who had "picked him up" through the fog until he had been duly warned of heavy weather south-east of Hatteras. Through the night came also the news that one of the Royal Mail passengers, an American consul from Aregua, had broken his thigh-bone against a bulkhead, and the Laminian was asked to relay the news to New York. This meant a call for ambulance and doctors to be at the landing-wharf, together with an order to have a hospital-room made ready.

So the key was kept busy while the beneficent resources of science were being marshalled so many miles away. The Laminian's operator had bidden his far-off fellow worker a sleepy "good-night," and was still stooping absently over his tuning-box—which had not adapted itself to the thick-weather work—when a knock sounded on his cabin door.

"Come in!" he said, lifting off his earphones with a little sigh of mingled weariness and resignation. He suspected that his undisclosed caller was a junior officer, much given to garrulity. He began to dread the thought of being kept out of bed for another hour or two.

The door opened slowly and the look of frank annoyance as slowly faded from the operator's face, for standing there, confronting him, blinking in the strong glare of his electrics, was a young woman.

Her skirts, gathered up in one hand, and held high from the wet deck, showed in a sweeping cascade of white against the gloom behind them. On her head was a blue sea-going cap, swathed in a long, cream-coloured motor-veil. Behind her stood a stewardess, fat and untidy, carrying a cloak, with the outward and studious solicitude of a servile nature exalted by the consciousness of having been overtipped. She would have made an ideal figure, the operator felt, for the nurse of the Capulets.

McKinnon put down his 'phone and rose from his seat, still peering at the figure nearer him, the woman in the doorway. He looked at her closely, perhaps too closely, for he had not imagined any such woman aboard the Laminian. He noticed that she was wearing a gown of dark-blue pilot-cloth, and that she was younger than he had at first supposed. One of her hands had been thrown out to the door-jamb to steady her against the roll and pitch of the deck. The clear oval of her face—and it seemed more the mature and thoughtful face of a woman than the timid and hesitating face of a girl—was shadowed and softened by a crowning mass of brown hair. Her teeth, as she ventured her sober yet oddly conciliating smile, impressed him as being very white and regular, vaguely hinting at a bodily strength which the softness of her eyes, at a first glance, seemed to contradict. Yet these deep-lashed eyes were alert and alive with the fires of intelligence and set wide apart under the low and thoughtful brow. They carried an inalienable sense of wisdom in their almost austere steadiness of outlook, McKinnon felt, as the woman still stood in the doorway, puckering her face a little at the strong light. Yet what most impressed him was the sense of ebullient vigour, of intrepid and Aquilian vitality, which booded about her. She was by no means Amazonian in stature—she was even smaller than he had at first suspected, but she gave him the impression of being youthfully and buoyantly full-blooded.

Then she stepped boldly in across the high door-sill and held out a tinted form-pad sheet to the operator. The solicitously purring stewardess, at a gesture from her benefactor, had already disappeared.

"You are still sending, are you not?" asked the young woman, stepping still nearer the operating-table.

Her voice betrayed no trace of foreign origin, as McKinnon had at first expected it might. The speech was that of a well-groomed New York girl, the type of girl that McKinnon had so often noted about the Fifth Avenue shops and the theatre lobbies. The voice was the New York voice, yet with a difference. It was the slightest and thinnest substratum of accent, of modulation, that made up this difference. Yet in doing so it imparted to her words a mild and bewitching gentleness of tone that seemed to hint at some indefinitely exotic influence of education or environment. It seemed to impart to her the crisp piquancy of the Parisian, persistently yet mysteriously accounting for her bird-like alertness of poise and movement, for some continuous suggestion of schoolgirl youthfulness that belied her actual years. It seems to convert what he had at first accepted as audacity into fortitude touched with discretion.

"Then you are sending," she said, as if in answer to her own question.

"I'm sorry," said McKinnon, backing away from the chair that she might take it if she chose. "I'm sorry, but I've just stopped for the night."

For the first time he was conscious of the fact that he had been at work in his shirt-sleeves, and that these sleeves were wofully soiled. He took down his coat and struggled into it. The young woman noticed the movement gratefully and sank into the chair he had abandoned for her.

"But can you not get somebody?" she asked. There was no note of pleading in her voice, but the mute appeal of her eyes as they rested on his on him suddenly changed his mind.

"I've been having trouble with that tuner of mine," he explained. "It's rather hard for us to pick up anything on a thick night like this, you know. But I'll try."

She bent a little to one side as he leaned over the table and threw down the switch-lever. They were side by side, almost touching each other.

"Why is it hard?" she asked.

"It's not easy to explain without being technical, but wireless works "heavy" in damp weather. You may have noticed it with telephones even, on rainy days."

"Yes, I have," she said with a preoccupied nod, turning her gaze from the switch-lever to McKinnon's face.

He caught the key in his fingers and the blue spark once more leaped and exploded across the spark-gap. The girl watched him with intent eyes and slightly parted lips as he fitted the "set" to his head and listened with the 'phones pressed against his ears.

McKinnon was keenly conscious of her presence there so close beside him. There was something perversely and insiduously exhilarating in it. It made him forget the hour and the fact that he was bone-tired. The orderlylike stewardess fluttering about, he supposed, somewhere beyond the closed door, alone took the romance out of a visit so deliberately secret. He turned to his key again, and again called through the night. Then he adjusted his 'phones and listened. He finally put down his "set," with a shake of the head.

"I'm afraid we'll have to wait until morning," he said.

"I'm sorry," she answered, with her studious eyes on the dancing-girl lithograph above the faded wall-lamp.

"If you'll leave the message, I'll file it," McKinnon explained, to hide his resentment at the half-derisive touch that had crept into her glance.

The woman handed him the message form, with her intent eyes now on his.

"Must I pay now?" she asked.

"It will be charged against your stateroom; the purser will collect it ator as he jabbed the message on ator as he jabbed the messake on his send-hook with a business-like sweep of the hand.

"But you will see that it's sent?" she asked as she rose to her feet.

"It will be off before you're up," McKinnon answered, watching her as she drew the heavy folds of her veil close down over her face. She looked back, at the door, with a timidly audacious nod of the head. The next moment the door closed and she was gone.

McKinnon, still conscious of the subtle fragrance that filled the room, swung about to his table. He paused only a second to wonder a little at this faint but persistent fume that seemed to have charged and changed the very atmosphere about him. Then he crossed the cabin and reached up and ripped a brightly coloured lithograph from the wall, bisecting the terpsichorean figure with one impatient tear of the paper.

He stood in the middle of the room for a moment or two without moving. Then he crossed to his table, reached out to the send-hook, and quickly unspeared the message.

He looked at it for several moments. Then he passed his hands over his tired eyes and re-read the words. They were addressed to Enrique Luis Carbo, Locombian Consulate, New Orleans, and they said: "Am on board Laminian, bound from New York to Puerto Locombia. Advise necessary quarters.—Alicia Boynton."

McKinnon was still peering down at the message in his hand when he was startled by the sound of someone at his door. Even before he could restore the message to the hook his door was opened and as quickly closed again.

It was the girl who had just left him. He noticed that she held one hand on her breast and that she was panting. She leaned against the jamb for a minute or two, as though weak from fright.

"What is it?" the operator asked.

"Oh, it's nothing," she faltered, struggling bravely enough to regain her composure' Her answer was not altogether convincing'

"What has happened?" persisted the startled operator.

She moved away from the door, in a listening attitude'

"It was a man," she tried to explain, inadequately. "He frightened me."

"But what man?"

"A stranger—somebody outside'"

"You mean that he dared to speak to you?"

There was a moment's silence'

"No," she answered in her low voice. "But it was the shock of seeing him so—so unexpectedly."

McKinnon stepped across the cabin and stood near her. His efforts to catch some clearer glimpse of the veiled face were fruitless. She reminded him of a ruffled bird.

"Won't you sit down until you feel better?"

"No, no! I must go! It's so late! I must go!"

But she still hesitated.

"Shall I take you to your cabin?" he ventured.

She showed actual alarm at this.

"Oh, no; that is out of the question. But if you will turn down your lights until I have slipped away—"

He snapped out the electrics. He could hear her in the darkness opening the door. She stood there looking out for several moments. "Good-night," she whispered gratefully as she slipped across the deck and was gone.

McKinnon stood looking after her, deep in thought.

CHAPTER VII.

THE TANGLING SKEIN

It was early the next morning that the Laminian ran into a coastwise gale that left her decks clear of passengers and her funnels white with salt. The intermittent crackle of "static" from the humming aerials kept obliterating the etheric "splash" of the Laminian's low-powered coils. The ship was left inarticulate and alone on her course. Beyond the erratic "sneeze" and "cough" of the atmospheric electricity there was no answering voice within McKinnon's sternly delimited radius of communication.

The weather disturbed McKinnon much less than did his own state of mind. The day, which was one of brain-fogging pitching and tossing about his cabin, left everything connected with the night before still in suspense. The ship seemed a deserted one. Captain Yandel and his officers sat alone before the "racks" of the musty-coloured tables, between musty-odoured walls that outraged the nostrils like the effluvial dampness of a nighthawk's cab. No one ventured on deck.

McKinnon, during that enforced armistice, escaped a day of total inaction by packing away his belongings. That task accomplished, he overhauled his helix and drafted a casing for his dynamo. As the afternoon deepened into evening, and the wind fell very suddenly, he coerced his attention on his Ruhmkorff-coil models. He was still studying over his reed-disk apparatus when an unexpected tap sounded on his door.

Even before he had time to answer the door itself was opened. It was the girl in the pilot-cloth gown, his visitor of the night before. She looked back one intent moment, as though to make sure she was not being watched or followed. Then she quietly closed the door and as quietly slid the brass bolt that stood under the knob, locking herself in the cabin.

She smiled, a little nervously and yet spiritedly, as she caught sight of the other's concerned and puzzled face. Then her own face became quite sober. Again McKinnon was conscious of a faint perfume pervading the place. It seemed as finely feminine to him as the rustling of skirts. And again he was impressed by the ebullient sense of buoyancy, of youthful vigour, which persisted about her, even in shadow like a penumbra.

"Could I speak to you?" she asked, a little disturbed at the other's continued silence. "I have something to explain," she continued, "something in which you might help me."

The flow of her English seemed as even and liquid as the flow of a river, yet there still remained that puzzling and piquant undercurrent of the exotic.

"You do not mind?" she asked, obviously puzzled by his continued aloofness. It was plain that she was not a woman who frequently asked favours of men.

"Of course I don't mind! It's only that a visit like this might be construed—"

She shrugged her shoulders ambiguously and sank into the steamer-chair. McKinnon discreetly slid back the shutter of his cabin window. He took the further precaution of drawing the faded denim curtain. The woman watched the operation with her mild and meditative gaze still on the figure before her. Then she motioned for him to sit down. She noticed his eyes on the door, apparently in apprehension, and she smiled a little. Then she became serious again and peerd studiously about the room.

"You could put me in there?" she suggested, with a satiric motion towards the operator's closet-door.

McKinnon seemingly took her query in good faith, for he threw open the door and peered inside. His troubled look returned to him.

"There would scarcely be room," he explained. "It's so crowded and shallow, you see."

"It would be an adventure," she maintained, making due allowance for his lack of humour. He could see that she was wringing some inapposite amusement out of the situation. It threw him on his guard for a moment. The open candour of her glance disarmed his abashed suspicion.

He agreed with her that it would indeed be an adventure. He even laughed at the thought of it, infected a little by her spirit of quiet audacity. Yet, in spite of himself, as he let his eyes rest on hers, there remained with him the stubborn yet vague impression that her presence there was the preamble for some deeper and undivulged purpose. The seconds lengthened themselves into a minute, and still neither spoke. They were still gazing at each other when the sound of a quick step on the deck without fell on their ears.

The woman stood up with a little gasp. The look on her face changed into one of appeal. McKinnon, impressed with her fear, also arose to his feet. They could hear the locked cabin door being impatiently shaken.

"What shall I do?" whispered the woman. The oeprator pointed towards his clothes-closet. It was the only resource. He motioned for her to step into it as he himself crossed the cabin towards the outer door, on which someone was now openly and impatiently knocking.

There was a fleeting rustle of drapery, a warning pressure of one slender finger against the woman's lips, and a moment later she had disappeared into her place of hiding and had swung back the door. McKinnon, as soon as he saw she was safe, withdrew his bolt. In the frame of light stood the great, wide-shouldered figure of Duffy. He waited there, without advancing for several seconds. McKinnon could see his slowly roving eye as it took in each detail of the stateroom. He betrayed no surprise and no curiosity but across his face flitted a veiled look of apprehension.

"Are you alone?" he asked.

McKinnon nodded.

"Busy?" he next demanded.

The single word bristled with something more than interrogation. But McKinnon felt that he was not in a position to resent it. He stooped over the last of his wireless models and lifted the box back against the closet door.

"I am packing away my stuff for the night," he answered as he turned back to his operating table and caught up his earphones. His action in doing so was simply a rite of repudiation. The gesture was not lost on the other man.

"I guess you're busy to-night," he said: "I won't take up your time. All I wanted was to close up that agreement of ours."

He reached into his pocket and drew out his roll of bills placidly, with the businesslike unconcern of a man contemptuous of small transactions. He counted off nine hundred and forty dollars ,folded them together, and flung them on the pine table. McKinnon, all the while, was thinking of the half-shut closet door.

"That puts us even, doesn't it?" Duffy said, backing away a little. His movement brought him nearer to the ever-menacing door.

McKinnon was not in a state to argue it out with him. His strangely self-frustrating wish was still to cry everything off. But he was afraid of some second complication. And he had his own reasons why these should not arise.

Psoriasis Was Cured

After Five Years of Suffering —Three Doctors Failed and Said Case Was Incurable

Itching and Burning Was Terrible Until Relief and Cure Was Effected by

Dr. Chase's Ointment

Psoriasis is another name for chronic eczema. It is the worst form of this dreadful itching skin disease. Once eczema has reached this stage it is usually considered incurable.

But here is a case which proves again the wonderful healing power of Dr. Chase's Ointment. Not only does relief come quickly, but the resulting benefits are thorough and lasting.

Mrs. Nettie Massey, Consecon, Ont., writes: "I thought it my duty to write you telling you the great benefit I received from using Dr. Chase's Ointment. For five years I suffered with what three doctors called Psoriasis. I doctored with three different doctors, with no good results, and one of our noted doctors told me if any one offered to guarantee me a cure for $50.00 to keep my money in my pocket, as I could not be cured.

"The disease spread all over me, even on my face and head. The itching and burning was hard to bear. At last my brother read in the paper about Dr. Chase's Ointment as a healer. I got 8 boxes, and I am glad to say I am entirely cured, not a sign of a sore to be seen. I can hardly praise the ointment enough, and you are at liberty to use my testimony, as I hope thereby to induce other sufferers to try the same."

THE BATTLE FOR THE SHAD

HOW UNCLE SAM LOOKS TO THE FEEDING OF HIS FAMILY

STEPS Taken by the Federal Government to Prevent Extinction of This Delicious Fish, the Catch of Which Has Declined Fifty Per Cent in a Dozen Years.

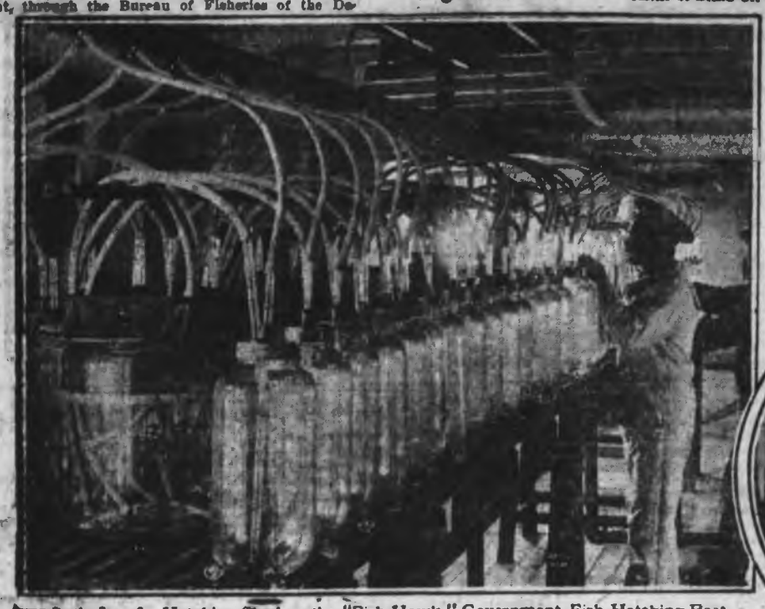
(Copyright, 1911, by the New York Herald Co. All rights reserved.)

Is the shad, that delicious representative of the family of food fishes, to follow the lobster and the diamond back terrapin in their steady progress toward extinction and soon to become like them only the adornment of the tables of the rich? Is man to continue his work of destruction and include this gift of nature among those living creatures which he is willing to slaughter without mercy in order that he may add to his wealth for a little while?

Perhaps not. Perhaps the United States government, through the Bureau of Fisheries of the Department of Commerce and Labor, can stop it. But the time is short. What better evidence of this can there be than the fact that the shad catch declined fifty per cent between the years 1897 and 1910. Some idea of the fate of the shad may be had from the catch in 1897, which was 5,341,751 in Chesapeake Bay, as compared with 3,000,544 in 1901 and 2,960,462 in 1904. Since that time it has been steadily growing smaller. In 1910, the last year of which there is any record, there was a falling off in the number of shad caught in the Chesapeake of 20,474.



Automatic Jars for Hatching Shad on the "Fish Hawk," Government Fish Hatching Boat

The reason is obvious. The officials of the Bureau of Fisheries understand it perfectly. Here is what Mr. George M. Bowers, Commissioner of Fisheries, said about it only a few months ago:—

"This large falling off during these years is due to over-fishing, and to the fact that the large number of pound nets and other apparatus operated prevent the shad from reaching their spawning grounds, thus seriously interfering with both natural and artificial propagation."

Uncle Sam is doing a great deal to stop this evil work. In the last fiscal year he distributed 2,160,000 shad eggs and 80,076,000 fry. If these all live, which, of course, is unlikely, it would mean an increase of 92,236,000 to the number of shad in the rivers of the Atlantic coast, in addition to the natural increase. It must yet be determined whether this work can halt the species on its march to total extinction or toward a point where it will be of little use to man on account of its great scarcity.

He who has experienced the happy circumstance of having his palate titillated and seduced by King Alosa, and peechance comes to know, quite casually or otherwise, the significance of the second name the shad bears, is never so ungrateful as not to enthusiastically aver that science never made a more palpable hit than when it christened him with that pregnant adjective sapidissima—he is beyond cavil superlatively sapid. The flesh is rich but not oily, and the roe holds a place very high in the esteem of all sects of gastronomers. Ever since the days of George Washington and John Marshall planked shad has been regarded as the acme of success in the preparation of a delicious fish for the table, and a planked shad dinner at Marshall Hall, near Mount Vernon, is quite sure to constitute a feature in the spring programme of many Washington societies.

Alosa, however, does not invariably in his vernal advent herald the coming of halcyon days. On the contrary, he has been the cause—innocent, it is true, but none the less a potent cause—of violent outbreaks of sectionalism. It is a very pretty quarrel as it stands, too, and has come about in this way:—

Though there is but one species in Atlantic waters, it is known by almost as many vernacular names as there are rivers which it enters, as Potomac shad, Susquehanna shad, Delaware shad, North River shad and Connecticut shad, and the people along each particular stream regard their shad as the best, hence the strife that sometimes arises when Yankee meets Virginian or Washingtonian meets Gothamite over entrees. But in entire truth and frankness all are right, for its sweetness and delicate flavor, other things being equal, depend much upon its freshness, and those one gets from a near by river are apt to reach the table fresher than those shipped from a distance.

Shad Once Abundant.

In the early history of the country the abundance of the shad excited unbounded astonishment. Nearly every river of the Atlantic coast was invaded in the spring by immense schools, which in their upward course furnished an ample supply of choice food. But for many years fishery interests have exploited it with such greed and shortsightedness there has been a steady decline in the catch. An exquisite food fish, originally liberally overrunning our waters, the most valuable river fish on the Atlantic coast, and next to the Pacific salmon the most important species in the fresh waters of North America, was being exterminated.

At each spawning season, as the shad attempted to ascend the rivers to the spawning grounds, they were caught at the mouth and lower parts of the river and marketed, without the slightest thought of the disastrous results that were worked against their natural increase. In addition to this, from their birth to their return to the rivers shad are preyed upon incessantly by other fish, so that a large portion of the young do not survive their few months' sojourn in fresh water, and of those that leave the rivers each season probably not one in one hundred reaches maturity to deposit its eggs and contribute to the perpetuation of its species.

In the rivers striped bass, white perch, black bass and other predaceous fishes devour the young, and when they reach salt water, sharks, horse mackerel and kingfish undoubtedly destroy many adults. It has been observed by North Carolina porpoise fishermen that as the shad swim close along the shore the porpoises follow and feed on them till they pass into fresh water.

The same conditions existed with regard to the Pacific salmon and several other food fishes, so that it became a matter of the utmost importance to bring about reforms in the industry that would check this appalling waste.

How was this to be done? The various Eastern seaboard States failed to take effective action. Obviously some authority having federal jurisdiction must take up the problem and discover means of artificial propagation.

So the United States Fish Commission, now known as the Bureau of Fisheries, under the Department of Commerce and Labor, was created by Congress, and in its work has an especial and unique claim to the epithet "paternal." And it is to be noticed in passing that this bureau can also lay claim, unusual, if not unique, to the distinction that its work has been singularly free from the criticism and opposition which most of the other paternalistic activities of the government have at times encountered.

Indeed, this point may be given a little stronger emphasis without much danger of furnishing a new issue of dispute among what, it must be confessed, however deprecatingly, seem to be rather hypersusceptible partisans, and the assertion made that there are few federal enterprises that are more popular, meet with more general and generous support and have contributed more to the prosperity and happiness of a large number of people than its fish cultural work.

The work of the Fisheries Bureau has been of great direct financial benefit to the country at large. The results in the cases of some species have been so striking and so widespread that it would be almost as unnecessary to refer to them as to discuss the utility of agriculture. In the cases of other species there can be no doubt of the value of the work, although it may be possible but occasionally to distinguish the effects of natural causes. The outcome of the bureau's efforts to increase the food supply is naturally more evident in the case of small streams, lakes and ponds, of which thousands have been successfully stocked with the most desirable food and game species.

Spawning the Shad

The shad passes most of its life in the sea, migrating each spring to the rivers for the sole purpose of reproduction. The ocean areas to which it resorts are unknown, and what its salt water food consists of has not been determined. In the Gulf of Maine it is known to associate in large numbers with mackerel and herring during June, September and October. In May and June it has been captured with mackerel a few miles northeast of Cape Cod light. Its movements are largely controlled by the water temperature. It is believed it seeks water where the temperature is from 60 to 70 degrees and that its migrations are determined by this factor.

Bites at Flies.

After entering the rivers the shad takes but little, if any, food previous to spawning, but after casting its eggs it bites at flies or any small shining object, and has been known to take the artificial fly. It is a common remark with fishermen that food is rarely found in the stomach of the adult shad in fresh water, but examinations have shown that it does in some instances eat small crustaceans and insects. The only substance commonly found in its stomach in fresh water has the appearance of black mud. It is held by some that the shad swims with its mouth open and may unintentionally swallow the small organisms found in its stomach under such circumstances, but as far as observation of fish in aquariums and experiences of net fishermen go the shad does not swim with its mouth open.

The recently hatched fish remain in the rivers feeding and growing until the cool weather of fall comes on. They then begin to drop down stream, and by the last of November they have passed out into the ocean or bays and are lost sight of until they come back, three or four years after, full grown and ready to spawn.

The "Fish Hawk," Employed as Shad Hatchery on Atlantic Coast Rivers

Largest Seine in the World—9,600 Feet Long and 22,400 Feet of Hauling Rope—Formerly Used to Collect Shad Eggs in the Potomac River

Every river on the Atlantic coast from Massachusetts southward has been examined by some of the agents of State commissions or the United States, or by both, to determine the shad's natural spawning grounds. On nearly every stream hatcheries have been operated at one time or another, but usually eggs were not obtained in sufficient numbers to justify continued operations, except in the Chesapeake and Delaware basins.

The Bureau of Fisheries operates stations at Bryan Point, twelve miles below Washington, on the Potomac; at Battery Island, at the mouth of the Susquehanna, and at Edenton, N. C., on an arm of Albemarle Sound. The hatchery on Albemarle Sound is adjacent to one of the most important shad fishing grounds in the country, and replenishes Albemarle, Croatan, Roanoke and Pamlico Sounds and their tributaries—the Pasquotank, Chowan, Roanoke, Pamlico, Neuse, and various minor rivers. This region annually yields upward of ten million pounds of shad valued at $400,000 and contributes the principal part of the shad found in the Northern and Eastern markets in winter and early spring.

The shad fisheries of New York State are located principally in the Hudson River and the sections of New York Bay leading thereto.

A few are also obtained in the Nissequogue River, Little Neck Bay, Long Island Sound, and Great South Bay, but the catch in the last three bodies of water is merely incidental to the taking of other species. The shad fisheries of lower New York Bay are confined to the use of several pound nets on the shore of Staten Island between Elm Tree beacon and Fort Tompkins light. The season begins about April 1 and ends about the middle of June and average about six thousand roes and four thousand bucks, of a value of $8,000. In the Narrows a large number of drift nets are operated, the season beginning usually about April 1, two or three weeks before the Hudson River season opens, and closing about May 15.

On account of the traffic through this channel the nets are set about twenty-five or thirty feet below the surface, but even at this depth the suction of large steamers frequently tangles the nets in a mass and sometimes lifts them up into the screws. The value of the yearly catch is about $10,000. Most of the fishermen operating in the Narrows live on Staten Island and at Bay Ridge, Fort Hamilton and Gravesend. At one time the Hudson shad fisheries were the most valuable on the Atlantic Coast, but it has gradually dropped back into fifth or sixth place. At Troy there is a dam built in 1824, of log cribwork, filled in with stone, 1,100 feet long and 10 feet high, which forms an impassable barrier to the passage of the shad further up stream, except when the water rises above the crest of the dam during high freshets.

Prior to the construction of this dam shad ascended the Hudson as far as Sandy Hill, fifty miles above Troy, and up to thirty years ago they were taken in some abundance within a short distance of Troy. But during recent years there has been little fishing above Castleton, a short distance below Albany. Shad enter the Hudson usually about the first week in April and remain until the last of June. The legal season extends from March 14 to June 15 of each year, with a close time operative from sunset on Saturday until sunrise on Monday of each week.

All of the eggs for the hatcheries are obtained from the market fish. It is a curious fact that the shad are seldom caught in ripe condition during the daylight until late in the afternoon, and the fishermen's catches of the late morning or early afternoon are not available for the work of the spawn taker. But as evening approaches, during the spawning season, the Bureau's agents distribute themselves on the various fishing boats and go to fishing shores where shad in ripe spawning condition are to be had.

Collecting the Eggs.

Collecting the eggs is the work of experienced watermen, who must be prepared to meet all kinds of weather in open boats. The boats are towed out to the fishing grounds by steam launches, where the spawn takers visit the nets of the market fishermen, obtaining from them the spawning fish. The price for eggs is always above the market price of the shad, and payment is made at the end of the season on the basis of 28,000 to the liquid quart, the price being $16 to $20 a million.

In stripping the eggs the shad is lifted with the right hand and caught above the tail with the left. All slime and loose scales are removed by going over the fish two or three times in quick succession with the right hand. The head is carried to the left side under the arm and there retained by the arm, the tail being bent slightly upward with the left hand. When the fish is properly adjusted its head is nearly concealed.

The fish is held firmly over a moist pan, and with a moderate downward pressure of the right hand the eggs will flow freely if mature. As soon as the eggs have been obtained the shad is discarded, it being impossible to preserve the life of such a delicate fish, even with the utmost care. The usual period for hatching is from six to ten days, sometimes longer, according to the temperature of the water, but with high temperature they will hatch in three days. Fry hatched in less than five days are sensitive, though not always, weak.

The young shad swims vigorously, by rapid and continuous vibration of the tail, from the moment it leaves the egg. It is colorless, transparent and gelatinous. Several hundredsin a dipper are scarcely discernible, as they are under an inch in length for two weeks after their birth.

For ten years two or three million shad fry were reared each year at the Bureau's fish ponds in the national capital. A six-acre pond was used, the water supply being taken from the city water works. Fingerling shad are so tender that the numbers annually liberated cannot be ascertained. They cannot withstand the handling necessary in counting them, not even undergoing transfer in dippers of water, and their scales drop off on being touched. Consequently at high tide they are liberated into the Potomac through a sluice gate with an outlet pipe about two feet in diameter.

The propagation of shad is carried on mainly to maintain or increase the supply in rivers where the species is native, but this fish has been planted in waters in which it was either unknown or found in small quantities. Large numbers of fry have been liberated in tributaries of the Gulf of Mexico but without marked results. The Great Salt Lake and Bear Lake, in Utah, and the Colorado River have been stocked, but the experiments were unsuccessful.

Economic results of great value have come from the transplanting of shad on the Pacific coast. Aside from the financial results, the experiment was noteworthy because of certain changes that have occurred in the habits of the species and because the feat of transporting shad fry across the continent was justly regarded as remarkable and had a marked influence on the development of fish transportation, which has now attained such perfection. Small plants of shad fry were made in the Sacramento River from 1871 to 1880, and in the Columbia River in 1885 and 1886, the aggregate for each stream being less than one million, only a hundredth part of the plants sometimes made in an Atlantic coast river in a single season.

In April, 1873, the first shad was taken in California, and shortly thereafter many more were caught around San Francisco; by 1879 the fish had become numerous, and by 1886 it had become one of the most abundant food fishes of the State. In 1876 shad were first taken in the Columbia River, so it is evident that an offshoot from the California colony soon migrated northward and had already established itself when the new emigrants arrived from the East eight or nine years later. About 1890 the first pioneer was recorded from Fraser River, British Columbia, and in 1904 a fine roe shad, caught at Kasilof, on Cook Inlet, was the first known arrival in that remote region. To the south the fish is found as far as Los Angeles county, the present range of the species thus extending along about 4,000 miles of coast.

From the best information obtainable the entire cost of the experiment was less than $4,000, while the aggregate catch for market in California, Oregon and Washington to the end of 1907 was about 15,000,000 pounds, for which the fishermen received $[illegible].

A BEAUTIFUL FARM HOME

From Farm and Dairy.

Pleasantly situated, overlooking Lake Simcoe, shaded by immense silver poplars and surrounded by a fine old-fashioned garden and lawn planted in old English style, the farm home of R. E. Gunn, whose farm is described elsewhere in this issue, presents a most pleasing appearance. The house itself is old, being built almost 100 years ago. The walls are of logs, plastered and rough cast. The interior has been remodelled, but the old-fashioned effect has been retained.

Most of the conveniences found in an up-to-date city residence are in evidence in this country house. Electric lighting, a completely equipped bathroom, hot and cold water on tap, and the rural 'phone, are a few of the conveniences found in the Gunn home. The house is heated with hot air. Most of the plumbing was done by Mr. Gunn himself, and it could not have been done better by an expert plumber. "I would not live in the country," said Mr. Gunn, "unless I could have these conveniences in my home."

To the rear of the house is a small kitchen garden, which is the special care of Mrs. Gunn. Although the garden is not large, Mrs. Gunn had a great variety of vegetables in sufficient quantities for her small family.

The manner in which Dunrobin Farm happened to be entered in the Interprovincial Dairy Farms Competition bears testimony of the interest that Mrs. Gunn takes in the farm work. Mr. Gunn had almost given up the idea of entering the competition on account of the scarcity of labor. cattle, however, Mrs. Gunn entered When he was absent in Quebec buying the farm herself. And it captured first prize too.

OLDER ONTARIO

From Farm and Dairy.

The depopulation of older Ontario still goes on. Individuals and whole families fall under the lure of new Ontario and North-West prairies. They hence remove to one or other of these parts. Their exodus leaves vacancies that are not filled. Thus churches and schools suffer, and social intercourse is less frequent.

It seems to me that a primary cause of this migration lies in the lack of appreciation of the palpable advantages of the localities whence they depart. If people would look around them and seriously consider the situation fewer would pull up stakes and go forth in quest of the new.

In most parts of old Ontario there are good roads, and near-by markets. Churches and schools are within easy reach. There is a daily mail, and the telephone is a familiar institution. The climate is temperate—neither the cold of winter nor the heat of summer being excessive. The seasons are such, in the elements favorable to vegetable growth, that crop failure is rare. The soil is, in most parts, rich and capable of producing greater harvests. Indeed, the possibilities of larger yields is only beginning to be seen by a few people. When more realise this, and act on it, it will be found that older Ontario, so far from having too many people, has too few.

Once this conclusion is reached we may expect that the present exodus, so discouraging in many ways to those who remain, will cease, and the boys and girls brought up on the farms will look forward to spending their days near the locality where they were born. Families will hence multiply, churches and schools will be better attended and supported, and social life will be more of a kind it should be.—"The Parson."

cool. I have seen roots come into the root house when very warm, and such roots keep badly; but when we put them in cool they almost invariably keep exceedingly well.

It is important, further, to ventilate the root house; especially is this the case if we have a low-lying warm root house, where the walls are, for the most part, under ground. Under such conditions it is almost essential to have some method of introducing air into the lower part of the house. The air passes up and out through the top. A good way to ventilate is by holes in the sides of the walls, through which pipes lead. You do not want the warm air to escape too rapidly or the cold air to enter too freely.

Turnips do not keep quite as well as mangels. Turnips require a little more attention in storing. We have to be careful to keep them as cool as possible. If the turnips freeze a little bit on the surface there is no harm done. Frozen turnips are quite acceptable to almost all classes of cattle, especially sheep, cows or steers, and more or less to swine. We object to putting turnips in the bin frozen if the temperature in the root house is apt to be high.

To enable the air to penetrate through the roots I would take a shaft about a foot in diameter and join it to a box of boards running along the bottom of the root house. In this lower shaft I would bore holes two inches in diameter along the side and have this perforated shaft go out to the end of the root house and up to the ceiling and out there. Then the air will come in and fall down the first tube and then work along.—Extract from an address.

THE VALUE OF A SEPARATOR

From Farm and Dairy.

Any one who has ever used a separator would not again be without one.

When we separate the milk the cream is set in cold water and cooled. It is not added to the old cream until cold, and the two are then stirred together.

Perfect cleanliness is one secret of success in handling cream. Keep it cool, is the other.

We make good, sweet butter, and we find that we have no trouble in disposing of it. We have customers send for butter before it is made.

Too many butter makers are fond of packing butter in tubs. We can get two or three cents a pound more for butter in pound prints, wrapped in printed parchment.

In salting, we go according to the taste of our consumers. Some prefer more than others.

When one gets a name as a good butter maker, it is not necessary to worry about the market.

ECZEMA ON THE HEAD

I got Dr. Chase's Ointment, and it has entirely cured me. I give you my name because I want other sufferers to know about this splendid Ointment."

MILK AND CREAM

From Farm and Dairy.

Milk and cream, more than any other food stuffs, are subject to contamination from everything with which they come in contact. Patrons generally are far too careless in looking after their dairy products. This is particularly true in the case of cream gathering creameries, where the cream is only delivered twice and in some cases once a week. Care should be taken to keep out all undesirable bacteria and odors.

One of the great troubles we have to contend with in the fall of the year is the turnipy flavor of the cream. Through the summer we get good milk. The Victoria Creamery brand of butter gets a reputation, the demand increases, and the prices go up. It takes only a few cans of turnipy cream, however, to destroy this reputation completely, and down drops the price again. Last year I sent out cards to my patrons requesting them to be careful that their milk cows got no turnips. I believe that these cards did good work, as we had very little trouble with turnipy flavors that fall.

When a few patrons will persist in sending in poor quality or turnipy cream, it is rather discouraging to patrons who send in good quality, but receive only the same price. One of my best patrons, Mr. Wm. Payne, lately remarked to me: "What is the use of my going to a lot of trouble to produce first class cream when I get no more for it than the man who does not even cover his cream?" The only way in which we will ever be able to get only first class cream is to keep hammering away on the advantages of producing good cream, until almost all of our patrons are delivering the right article, and then we can well afford to refuse to take cream from those who are still contrary.

The creameryman is not necessarily the only educator, however. Patrons themselves by the force of example, can do a great deal to right conditions. For instance, I used to have a great deal of trouble with thin cream. On one of my routes one woman started to deliver thick cream testing 40 to 45 per cent. She was so proud of delivering the richest cream received at the creamery and talked so much about it that other patrons on the same route began to skim a richer cream also. Pretty soon there was warm competition among the patrons on that route as to who would have the richest cream, and this all originated from the progressiveness of one woman.

I would not, however, advocate such a thick cream. A cream testing 40 per cent. is subject to loss in separation and from sticking to the cans. Cream has come into the factory so rich that it would stand up itself and it had to be scooped out of the can in which it was brought. A 30 per cent. cream can be taken readily by any good separator, pot readily and churns easily.

DAIRY BUTTER

From Farm and Dairy.

C. A. Westover, Missisquoi Co., Que.

At the request of Farm and Dairy I herewith set forth a few details as to the method of manufacture adopted to produce dairy butter which secured the majority of the prizes at our county fair. The cows from which the cream was produced are mostly Jerseys and were being fed bran, oil cake and green clover besides the feed they got in the pasture; that is on high land, fairly free from weeds.

The cream was separated as soon as possible after milking and then cooled to about 62 degrees F. It was allowed to ripen naturally, without the addition of culture. The night before churning it was cooled to 56 degrees and the next morning was churned at the same temperature in 35 minutes.

The butter came in the granular form. It was washed twice in water at 58 degrees F. and salted at the rate of five per cent. It was partly worked and allowed to stand a few hours to allow the salt to dissolve. It was then worked down three times on the worker and packed. Pains were taken to see that the packages were neat and clean and that the butter was firmly packed and neatly finished.

DAIRYING AND ORCHARDING

From Farm and Dairy.

F. W. Foster, Kings Co., N. S.

At no time in the history of Nova Scotia have the prospects for these two industries, dairying and orcharding, been so bright as at the present. A visit to the fairs held in the various parts of the province would convince one that apples can be successfully grown in nearly every county. At the Windsor Horticultural Show in 1910 there were as fine apples as could be produced in the world, not only a few plates, but thousands of them, besides a great number of boxes and barrels packed ready for export. There was also a good display of the more delicate fruits, such as pears, plums, peaches and grapes, all of which can be grown to maturity in the open. There were also to be seen all kinds of grain and vegetables, and one of the largest exhibits of dairy and creamery butter ever shown in this province. This all goes to show that dairying and orcharding are two of the greatest industries in Nova Scotia to-day.

But why couple the two? Because the writer has been successful in both. Starting in a small way, some 16 years ago, on a small farm of 60 acres, with 400 young apple trees, set but a few years, and giving only a few apples a year, I had to make a living as best I could. I soon discovered that the cows gave a good profit when properly housed and fed. The herd was gradually increased, until at present I am milking 17 cows, the butter being made on the farm, and the skim milk fed to calves and pigs. A large number of these animals are finished for market annually.

Right here is where dairying fits into orcharding. A market is made for the cull apples. A large quantity of manure is made from the cows and hogs, which is returned to the soil. If stable manure is not good for bearing orchards, it will certainly make young trees grow, and builds up the farm generally, for in selling butter and pork practically no fertiliser is removed from the farm. While we are waiting for the young orchards to grow to the bearing age, the cows help pay the bills. Then, by raising some cash crops, such as small fruits and potatoes, it enables one to make a fair living, and when the trees begin to bear the apples seem to come as a present to one. Getting but few apples at first, I now raise 600 barrels a year. The yield has been increasing from year to year, and everything being favorable I expect 800 barrels in 1911, as my orchard is growing and the yield has been increasing very rapidly. One lot of 500 trees, set eight years ago, is doubling in crop annually.

I have now 10 acres of orchard in bearing, five acres being 22 years old and five eight years, just coming into bearing. I maintain the fertility of the orchard soil by the use of both stable manure and commercial fertilisers. Of the former, I apply 10 tons per acre annually, and of the latter, 100 pounds of muriate of potash and 300 pounds of acid phosphate per acre each year. The five-acre orchard, eight years old, never, until 1910, had any other fertiliser than stable manure, and I have raised hoed crops in it annually, chiefly corn, and the trees have made good growth, and are a clean, healthy lot.

GIVES STEADY EMPLOYMENT

My plan is to carry on the two industries of orcharding and dairying jointly, giving them as great care as if I were making a specialty of each. It enables me to furnish steady employment for men the 12 months in the year, solving, in a measure, the labor question, for it is when men are idle in the winter months that they become restless, and wish to get away to some other country. But if the average man or boy is kept employed at a job that he likes, he will generally stay with the man who uses him right as long as he is wanted.

I have great faith in dairying as well as in orcharding. I have 900 trees, and if I had more land suitable, I would set more trees. But as I have not, I will strive to take good care of what I have, and keep both cows and orchard up to the highest standard possible.—N. S. Report.

THE HAY CROP

From Farm and Dairy.

While the hay crop was, generally speaking, a light one in Western Ontario this year, it was as generally a good one in the Ottawa and St. Lawrence Valleys. It might be classed almost as a "bumper" crop in the latter section. There is, however, more feed value in the Western Ontario hay crop, light as it is, than there is in the Eastern crop under the conditions of harvesting that prevailed.

Both Eastern and Western farmers had good weather for making first-class hay. Most of the Western men start haying early enough to save it at its best. Especially is this true in handling the clovers. Unfortunately, there wasn't much to handle. In the East, however, both the clover and timothy came on well. The Eastern farmers seem to be so conservative in their methods that most of them would think it a "sin"—I was going to say—to start haying before the "Glorious Twelfth" of July, no matter how the season shaped in maturing it. The result is that about half the timothy had gone to seed before it was cut for hay, and plenty of it is worth more for seed than for hay.

I met a hay buyer in June this year who told me that he had paid demurrage dues on a car of hay for a day or so in order that the farmers of the district where he was buying might see what first-class hay looked like when baled and ready for shipment to "Uncle Sam's" dairy sections. He pointed out why he could pay more for such hay if they would make it that way than for the hay they were making.

ENGLISH APPLES

From Farm and Dairy.

The crop of English apples has turned out larger than was at one time expected and liberal supplies are now on sale in the local markets. The fruit is of varied character, some being exceedingly small in size, while on the other hand, arrivals from certain districts are of satisfactory quality. It is expected that these supplies will be finishing about the time the Canadian apples begin to arrive.

Some local firms have already concluded arrangements with Canadian apple exporters for shipments this season, and others are now in correspondence with exporters on information furnished by this office. Canadian shippers who may be desirous of increasing their business on this side should correspond with this office, giving particulars as to the quantities which they wish to send and other details, which information will be placed before reputable firms.

Local merchants are also looking forward to a continuance this season of the shipments of dessert pears from Canada. The trade in this class of fruit, so far as this district is concerned, was initiated last year, when a number of boxes of fine looking fruit were sent direct to Leeds and disposed of with results which were regarded as entirely satisfactory to the shippers and receivers interested.

Sulphur is a Natural Element of the Hair

When there is not a sufficient amount of sulphur in the hair, it loses its life, color and strength, turns gray, and falls out. There are many forms of sulphur, but only one kind that is suitable for treatment of the hair and scalp, and that is the kind used in preparing WYETH'S SAGE AND SULPHUR HAIR REMEDY.

We Have the Secret, and We Give You the Benefit of It at an Exceedingly Low Price

BALDNESS CURED

For two or three years my hair had been falling out and getting quite thin, until the top of my head was entirely bald. About four months ago I commenced using Sage and Sulphur. The first bottle seemed to do some good and I kept using it regularly, until now I have used four bottles. The whole top of my head is now fairly covered with hair, and it keeps coming in thicker. I shall keep on using it a while longer, as I notice a constant improvement.

CHARGED WITH DYNAMITING.

James B. and John J. McNamara Are Being Tried at Los Angeles.

Los Angeles, Cal., Oct. 12.—Yesterday began the fight of the State of California to hold James B. and John J. McNamara responsible for the death of nineteen men in the explosion in The Los Angeles Times' plant on Oct. 1, 1910.

A severance of the case against the McNamaras, both of whom were indicted five months ago on 21 counts for murder, has been the announced desire of the defence, and the prosecution awaited the formal request in court yesterday to that effect before disclosing which of the two brothers it had elected to try first.

When court opened, District Attorney Fredericks declared that should the defence exercise its privilege of having the brothers tried separately, he elected to begin by placing James B. McNamara in the prisoner's box.

James is the younger brother of the accused secretary of the structural iron workers, and is alleged to have been one of the men who bought the dynamite and participated directly in the deeds which led to the explosions.

Twelve veniremen were placed in the jury box out of the venire, which originally numbered 128, but which contained less than forty men when the proceedings started.

District Attorney Fredericks read the indictment to the veniremen, pointing out the prisoner and explaining the case briefly, "so that the veniremen might know in a general way what it was about should they be called upon to become trial jurors."

Lecompte Davis, for the defense, asked the usual questions concerning qualifications.

Court adjourned at 3.55 p.m., until 10 o'clock Friday morning, because of the legal holiday to-day.

Writs For Bye-Elections

Ottawa, Oct. 12.—Writs will be issued to-day for ten bye-elections in the constituencies represented by these members of the Borden Government, who were elected on Sept. 21, and have been assigned portfolios. They include Hon. Messrs. Borden, Monk, Doherty, Pelletier, Nantel, Foster, Reid, Crothers, Rooks and Hughes. Nominations will be held on Oct. 26 and elections on Nov. 1 if there are to be contests. This much was decided upon at yesterday's Cabinet council, and to-day the order-in-council goes to the clerk of the crown in chancery.

Nothing has been determined as to the seats to be occupied by Messrs. Hazen, Cochrane, White and Rogers. The probability is that Mr. Hazen will take the St. John City and county seat, and that Dr. John Daniel will wait for the Senate. It is also pretty well understood that Hon. Robert Rogers will sit for a Manitoba constituency, and will not move into Saskatchewan. It is said that he has been offered the Winnipeg seat, now held by Alex. Haggart. There is a vacant Senatorship in Manitoba since the death of Senator Chevrier, and it might go to Mr. Haggart, although it has been regarded as a French appointment, and Hon. A. Larivierc, former member for Provencher, wants to get it.

Foreigners Are Safe.

Hankow, Oct. 12.—The foreign consuls at a conference yesterday, decided not to comply with the Chinese request that they employ foreign gunboats to prevent the revolutionaries from crossing the river to Hankow. The revolutionaries sent a circular out to the consuls asking that foreigners remain neutral and assuring them that they would not be harmed.

Yesterday the loyal troops fled across the river followed by the bullets of the insurgents.

A fugitive colonel of the Chinese army informed the correspondent of the Associated Press at Hankow that the entire provincial army at Hupeh with the exception of two or three men, mutinied.

The proclamation of the revolutionary committee threatened with decapitation anyone who assaulted a foreigner. The movement aims at the overthrow of the Manchus, the reigning dynasty.

Bid For Winnipeg Railway.

Winnipeg, Oct. 12.—E. J. Mackenzie is authority for the statement that local capitalists, including Messrs. Mulr, Reece and Mather of the Manitoba Power Co., allied with New York capital, have made a bid of $300 a share for the purchase of the plant of the Winnipeg Street Railway Co. This is $50 a share more than what Sir William Mackenzie asked for the property from Winnipeg City, to whom he would have preferred to sell.

London Has Fever Scare.

London, Ont., Oct. 12.—Colon bacilli in two of the collecting ponds of the Springbank water supply caused the immediate cutting off of these ponds yesterday morning. London has had a typhoid scare, due to the existence of colon bacilli in the city drinking water, and to several deaths. Samples were forwarded to the provincial analyst at Tor to last week, and his report was received yesterday. The remaining sources are absolutely pure.

Murder Mystery Explained.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Oct 12.—When the police yesterday investigated the finding by Dr. Cook and Robert Murphy of a supposed unmarked grave in the woods near here, they found it was a hole in which campers had deposited refuse during the summer. The city was much agitated over locating supposed evidence of an infanticide.

British ex-M.P. Dead.

London, Oct. 12.—Mr. Henry Broadhurst, for many years a Liberal-Labor member of Parliament, and formerly Secretary of the Parliamentary Committee of the Trades Union Congress, died yesterday. He was born in Oxfordshire in 1840, and in early life was employed as a blacksmith and later as a stonemason.

Kingston, Oct. 12.—In addition to cost, $60,000 will be built to Notre Dame Convent. It will contain a gymnasium, lecture halls and class rooms.

Blizzard in Montana.

Pocatello, Idaho, Oct. 12.—Southwestern Montana is in the grip of a terrific snow storm that has cut off Butte from communication with the outside world to-day.

MARKET REPORTS.

Liverpool and Chicago Wheat Futures Close Lower—Live Stock—Latest Quotations.

CHICAGO, Oct. 11.—Because frost in the Argentine failed to work any injury to crops there was a generally weak tone to-day in the market for wheat, while evening-up of trades brought about a rally in the last half hour. Compared with last night the close was 1-4c lower to a shade advance. Corn finished 1-8c to 1-4c down, oats at a 1-16c loss to 1-4c gain, and hog products varying from unchanged to an increased cost of 7 1-2c to 15c.

The Liverpool market closed to-day ¾d to 1d lower than yesterday on wheat, and ¼d higher on corn. Berlin wheat closed ½c higher, Budapest 1c higher, Antwerp 1½c higher.

Montreal Grain and Produce.

MONTREAL, Oct. 11.—On more favorable advices from the Argentine on crop conditions, cables came weaker, and the prices bid for Manitoba spring wheat were ¼d per quarter lower; consequently, outside of sales of a few loads of feed grades, little business was done. Notwithstanding this fact there was an increased demand for ocean grain room, and a fair amount of space was engaged to Glasgow and Avonmouth.

The local demand for oats is fairly good at firm prices. Malting barley is in demand at 56c per bushel, ex-store. Demand for flour is good for both export and local account. Millfeed is fairly active and strong. The trade in cheese, butter and eggs is fairly active. Potatoes have advanced, with sales of car lots at 97½c to $1 per bag. Dressed hogs were weak, and prices have declined 50c to 75c per 100 pounds.

Pork—Heavy Canada short cut mess, barrels, 35 to 45 pieces, $30.50; half-barrels, $13; Canada short cut and back pork, 45 to 55 pieces, barrels, $33; Canada clear pork, barrels, 30 to 35 pieces, $30.50; bean pork, small pieces, bbls., $27, barrels, $14.50.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, Oct. 11.—At the Canadian Pacific live stock market the receipts of live stock to-day were 1350 cattle, 1200 sheep and lambs, 2700 hogs and 400 calves.

A feature of the trade was the weaker feeling in the market for cattle, and prices since Monday show a decline of 25c per 100 pounds, which was attributed to the much larger supplies than was generally expected and the fact that a large percentage of the stock was only of medium quality. At the reduction the demand was fairly good from butchers and packers, and a good clearance was made.

Choice steers sold at 6½c; good at 6¼c; fairly good at 5¾c; fair at 5c; common at 4½c to 4¾c, and inferior at 3½c to 4¼c per pound. Cows brought from 3c to 4½c, and bulls from 3½c to 5½c per pound.

The market for sheep and lambs was also weaker on account of the increased offerings, and prices for the former were 25c per 100 pounds lower, while the latter declined 25c to 50c. The demand was good and an active trade was done, with sales of lambs at 5c to 5¼c, and sheep at 3c to 3½c per pound. The trade in calves was fairly active at prices ranging from $3 to $10 each, as to size and quality.

The weak feeling in the market for hogs continues, and prices have scored a further decline of 25c to 50c per 100 pounds, which is due to the very large supplies coming forward and the lower prices ruling in other markets. The demand from packers was fairly good, and sales of selected lots were made at $6 to $6.25 per 100 pounds, weighed off cars, and heavy weights at $5.75.

At the Montreal Stock Yards west end market the offerings of live stock to-day were 800 cattle, 250 sheep and lambs, 2000 hogs and 125 calves. The trade in hogs was active at the decline in prices noted above, and sales of selected lots were made at $6 to $6.25 per 100 pounds.

Lusitania.

Portugal was formerly known as Lusitania. The present name is derived from Porto Calle, the ancient name of the town now known to us as Oporto.

HOUSEHOLD ECONOMY.

The English Method of Seeing Out Supplies by the Week.

In the matter of small savings and watchfulness of expenditure the English housewife is ahead. For example, the English housekeeper sees out to her servants the week's allowance of sugar, rice, flour, coffee and all other household provisions that are kept in quantity, and requires an account of it all to be rendered, the thing having been brought to so fine a point that she knows the exact amount of each article requisite for her family, allowing so much to each individual and that quantity being sufficient, as she knows by experience, two ounces of tea, for instance, being regarded as a week's supply for each single individual, one-half pound of sugar, three and one-half pounds of meat for a woman and five and one-fourth for a man—facts which the housekeeper probably learned from her mother before her—knowing, moreover, the greater variety of the simpler kinds required.

All of these stores she sets down in her housekeeping book as she gives them out, and she does not fail on the next dispensing day to consult her dates and if anything be left over in the cook's hands not accounted for to subtract that from the amount to be newly issued. And in England servants expect this. So far from being indignant with it they would feel as if there were no guiding hand behind them if left undone and they given their head in an overflowing storeroom, as servants are with us.

In fact, there is no saving which the housewife across the water considers too small to practice or as beneath her dignity.—Exchange.

Sir John Rose at Great Length.

An accomplished English barrister was Sir John Karslake. In height he was six feet four inches.

A provincial newspaper in reporting a case in which he was engaged on circuit laconically described the opening for the complainant as follows:

"Sir John Karslake, as soon as the defendant's case was concluded, rose at great length to reply."

Keep Fleet Ready.

Lisbon, via Frontier, Oct. 12.—The Government has recalled in an urgent command all warships that have been operating north, and the whole fleet is now anchored in the Tagus with steam up night and day ready to sail.

This is accepted as confirmation of the report that the Royalists have something armed afloat against which precaution must be taken.

The Monarchist adventure on land is regarded as lost. The Government forces are concentrated on three sides of the enemy, which is entrenched near the Spanish border. The loyal troops forbear to attack, as it is not quite certain whether the position actually occupied by the Royalists is Spanish or Portuguese. The frontier in that direction has never been clearly demarked, and if the spot should prove to belong to Spain, fighting in the vicinity might start a serious controversy.

Double Murder?

Kingston, Oct. 12.—Although the penitentiary authorities say there is no truth in the report, Dennis Babcock, Sharbot Lake, is in the city endeavoring to probe a story to the effect that a prisoner in the penitentiary had confessed to a double murder, one of the victims being a son of Babcock. About eight years ago, Morris Babcock and a companion named James Martin, both young men living near Sharbot Lake, mysteriously disappeared, and as they were on a fishing trip it was believed they had been drowned. The story sent abroad was that a man named Bedore, serving a term for manslaughter, had confessed to double murder, stating that the bodies had been buried in a creek swamp. Babcock is having a lawyer take up the case.

Big Electric Merger.

Brantford, Oct. 12.—It is reported here that negotiations are now in progress in New York for the merger of the Grand Valley and Brantford Street Railway lines into a big system of electric roads to extend from Toronto to Detroit, and it is said the deal will be consummated with a number of American capitalists.

G. T. R. Piers Have Sunk.

Winnipeg, Oct. 12.—Owing to contractors for the national transcontinental bridge over the Saine River, just east of here, not having gone deep enough for their piers, these have sunk several feet and will have to be taken down. This will mean some months' delay to the opening of the [illegible]

Wealth For the Swiss.

Water Clocks.

Among the curious features of ancient Toledo which unfortunately remain no longer were water clocks, devised by a Moorish genius named Azarcal, who placed them on the banks of the Tagus so that the people could read the time. They were run by water power and were so famous that Daniel Merlac, an English astronomer, went all the way from Oxford in 1255 to study them.

PETERBOROUGH THURSDAY OCTOBER 12 1911

COL. SAM HUGHES NEW MINISTER OF MILITIA WAS ENTERTAINED IN PETERBORO'

Was Given a Reception at Oriental Hotel and Extended an Informal Welcome by the Officers of Militia Corps.

GUARD OF HONOUR

Hon. Sam. Hughes of Lindsay, the newly-appointed Minister of Militia and Defence for Canada, was in Peterborough last night, motoring here from Lindsay, and was given an informal reception by a number of the citizens. Col. Hughes arrived at the Oriental Hotel shortly before six o'clock and was kept busy shaking hands and receiving the congratulations of his friends here. At 7.30 o'clock the 57th Regimental Band, under the direction of Mr. Gliddon, serenaded the new Minister, who afterwards thanked the director for his kindness. Later on in the evening Col. Hughes was the guest of the officers of the 57th Regiment, 24th Battery, and Third Prince of Wales Dragoons, in the officers' quarters, at the Armouries. Informal speeches of congratulations were made by Col. Clegg, Commanding Officer of the 57th; Mr. R. R. Hall, ex-M.P., Mr. John Nugent, who was an officer in Col. Hughes' regiment, the 45th and others, to which the new Minister replied. Recitations were contributed by Col. Miller, Col. Hughes, and songs given by Capt. Watt, Capt. Cluxton and Capt. McPherson. At the conclusion of the reception the officers formed a guard of honour and escorted Col. Hughes to the C. P. R. station, where he took the midnight express for Ottawa, leaving amid cheers for the new head of the Canadian militia.

UNCLAIMED WEALTH OF FOREIGN AND AMERICAN HEIRS

Well-Known "Next of Kin" Agency in Pittsburg Is Looking Up Money and Estates That Have Been Left.

In an effort to trace heirs who, unknown to themselves, are in positions to claim fortunes in foreign lands and this country, the International Claim Agency has an old-established office at Pittsburg, Pa., and is prepared to trace claims to foreign estates. While it is not generally known, there are many fortunes awaiting Canadian and American claimants, according to the data secured by this agency.

To aid in the work, the agency has issued a publication of 400 pages, containing in alphabetical order names of persons who have been advertised for in the last 200 years up to the present, including many names from the chancery courts of England and Ireland and lists of lost relatives, unclaimed bank dividends, etc. Thousands of names appear in the book which may lead to clues to unclaimed estates. Correspondents have long been established by the agency in Europe to aid in the work. By writing to the International Claim Agency, Pittsburg, Pa., inclosing stamp, anyone may secure one of their free booklets.

PLAN FOR NEW BRIDGE

Mayor Morrow Unable to Discuss Matter With C. P. R. Officials

Mayor Morrow returned from a business trip to Toronto last evening. He had intended laying the plan of the new foot bridge across the C. P. R. bridge, before the railway officials, but was unable to do this, as some of the officials were out of the city, and the others rushed with business. Even if the plan had been presented, the Mayor could not have got anything definite, as the plan will have to go to the officials in Montreal.

NEW YORK, OCT. 11.—Long before the hour for the commencement of the sale of tickets for the world's baseball series, the sidewalks were lined with purchasers for several blocks from the ticket office. When the office opened there was a rush which the police were unable to cope with without reinforcement. A rugby scrimmage is tame compared to the struggles for advantageous places. Special Wire to The Examiner.

PEKIN, CHINA, OCT. 12. — This morning's despatches from outlying provinces of the Chinese empire, indicate that the revolutionary movement is gaining in strength every hour. The trouble is that the government cannot rely on their own troops, whole regiments of which are going over to the rebels, some of them killing their officers as they do it.

Renewed fighting has occurred around Chentu, where Canadian missionaries are. It is thought, however, that the foreigners are generally safe, as the revolutionary propaganda is especially warned against attacks on them.

BOURASSA'S PAPER HAD CORRECT CABINET LIST SIXTY HOURS AHEAD OF THE OTHER CONSERVATIVE JOURNALS

MONTREAL, OCT. 11.—Who formed the Borden Cabinet?

While Conservative papers in Ontario were considerably in the dark as to the final personnel until the official list was given out at Ottawa some time after midnight Monday, Le Devoir, Henri Bourassa's paper, was able to call the turn to a nicety on Saturday. On that day fully sixty hours before the list was handed out at Ottawa the Nationalist organ assigned the different Quebec Ministers to their proper places and didn't make a mistake.

In its issue of yesterday Le Devoir, in its despatch from Ottawa, pats itself on the back for having been such a good guesser (?). Here is what it says:

"Mr. Borden has formed his Cabinet. Le Devoir's information was exact. The list of the Cabinet representatives from Quebec, which Le Devoir gave on Saturday is in accord with the official list, given to the press at midnight."

Knowing our Saturday what Mr. Borden doesn't appear to have known until the first hours of Tuesday, it seems quite fitting that Mr. Bourassa should exclaim, as he did, "Quebec y obtient justice." (Quebec has obtained justice).

Le Devoir in its issue of yesterday had a front-page editorial signed by George Pelletier as follows. The caption is "Quebec has obtained justice."

"On the 21st of September last, Mr. R. L. Borden, victorious, said: 'Quebec has done a great deal; she will obtain' justice.'

"He has just carried out his promise.

"During the tenure of office of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, our Province had two French speaking Ministers in the Cabinet, without counting in the Prime Minister, Mr. Lemieux, of the Department of Marine, and Mr. Beland, in the Post Office Department.

"In the new Administration Quebec has three French-speaking Ministers, Monk in Public Works, Pelletier in the Post Office, and Bruno Nantel in the Interior Department.

Laurier's Quebec organs were quite eager, since the day following the defeat to proclaim the coming decay of our Province in the new regime, but it does not now appear that our new Prime Minister is disinclined to render justice to us and to give us our due. It is fitting to underline the first public act which Mr. Borden carries out in his official capacity: in it he manifests clearly his desire to be just in our regard.

Ontario Not to Dominate.

"He has also shown that he does not intend to administer the affairs of Canada by a single Province, but that he wishes to call them all together in the Government of the country. To Quebec, as to the other Provinces, he gives an equal voice, and he does not lessen the French-Canadian representation in his Cabinet in spite of the advice of certain partisans, hostile to our Province. He does not wish to govern without Quebec.

"We shall have, then, in the Cabinet, as in the past,—since the Solicitor-General takes no part in Cabinet deliberations,—three representatives of our race, all firmly decided to accept no compromise on questions of importance to our national interests. Messrs. Monk and Nantel, in the course of their careers at Ottawa have shown that they know how to submit ideas which they think best to the general interest of Canada. And as far as the new Postmaster-General is concerned, even if it is his first appearance in Federal politics, nevertheless we feel assured that he will show that he has the same firmness of character and breadth of vision which his French-Canadian colleagues possess.

Rights of Ministry.

"We do not know what the future has in store; likewise we do not know what arduous questions will arise in the next few years; but we have confidence that Mr. Borden will continue to be just to our province and that he will always respect the rights of the minority, whether they be French or English, as he has done in the present case."

LEADER OF OPPOSITION CALLS ATTENTION TO THE CONDITION OF TEACHING STAFF IN EAST PETERBORO'

Hon. A. G. MacKay, leader of the Opposition in the Ontario Legislature, in an interview in regard to the coming elections, has the following to say of education matters in which East Peterborough schools figure prominently.

"The inexplicable bungling of the Education Department has its most serious effects in the rural districts. Owing to the stubborn attitude taken by the Department against all pleading and warning, there is and has been a lamentable scarcity of qualified teachers with the result that a large percentage of our schools are in the hands of untrained and unqualified teachers. Years ago the Opposition made it perfectly plain that if the model schools were wiped out at one blow this would of necessity lead to the scarcity now experienced in the rural districts. It was then pointed out that numbers of our normal-trained teachers go to the west, where, without further examination, they are qualified to teach. Six hundred of such went west last year. A plea for even a survival of the fittest of the model schools was in vain. The Government were deaf to warning, impervious to knowledge, with such deplorable results that last year we find in the riding of East Peterborough, for example, that 42 per cent. of the rural schools were in the hands of untrained and non-qualified teachers, holding only what are usually called 'permits.' From Inspector Tilley's report submitted to the Counties Council of Northumberland and Durham we find that in 1909 there were seventy rural schools in this inspectorate, in which schools there were two first-class, twenty-one second-class and forty-six third-class teachers, and not a single teacher holding any kind of a temporary certificate or permit. In 1910 in the same seventy schools there were two first-class, twenty-seven second-class, twenty-two third class and not less than nineteen teachers with no regular qualifications whatever. Thirty-one unqualified teachers in East Peterborough and nineteen in the west inspectorate of Northumberland and Durham are but specific illustrations of what is prevalent over the whole Province.

The Text-books.

"The deliberately false claim of the Government that the Public School Readers cost but forty-nine cents is now pretty well understood. The facts are that the Province employed and paid a large committee to collect and select all reading matter for the Readers, paid for all illustrations, such as cuts and lithographs and, it is said, actually set up the type, and then handed all these over to a departmental store to run the books off, paying forty-nine cents for this work, at the same time telling the people of the Province that this was the whole cost of the Readers. In other respects the nature of the bargain made with this departmental store is extremely objectionable. It is expressely provided that a person in any part of the Province may purchase direct from the departmental store at exactly the same price that he pays in his own home retail store. The result of this is evident. It tends to place every hearthstone in the land on the mailing list of a Toronto departmental store, to the great disadvantage not only of the retail bookseller, but of every other retail shop in the Province. What the Opposition contended was that, if the Government decided thus to cut out the retail trade, the Province should have published the books and given them to the people of the Province at actual cost.

OVER FOUR THOUSAND WERE IN ATTENDANCE AT NORWOOD FALL FAIR YESTERDAY

Annual East Peterborough Exhibition Yesterday Was Grand Success in Spite of the Threatening Weather.

THE AMUSEMENT FEATURES

The crowd which filed through the turnstiles at Norwood yesterday, proved unmistakably that it takes more than threatening clouds to keep people away from the annual East Peterborough Exhibition. As usual the event was a big success in every particular. The attendance, in spite of the unpromising appearance of the skies in the morning, was very big, over four thousand paying admission to the grounds, while in point of entries and of amusement features the Exhibition was fully up to the high standard set in the past. There was a magnificent showing in all lines of live stock and poultry and finer horses have never been seen in Norwood, the judges in the different classes having their work cut out for them in awarding the ribbons.

Peterborough people turned out in large numbers. The morning C. P. R. express carried over two hundred from the city, and many others from the country nearby. At Indian River another large quota boarded the train.

There was a steady stream of vehicular traffic into Norwood from early in the morning and the surrounding countryside for many miles around must have been depopulated to a large extent. The popular sign of the times was the "Hot Meal" banner, which was displayed everywhere. With only one hotel, the village would have been unable to provide anything like the accommodation required, had it not been that the churches went into the restaurant business for the time being and served meals. Private houses were converted into temporary "quick lunches" and every place seemed to have all the patronage that could be looked after.

A feature of the Norwood fair has always been the Midway and the array of amusement attractions yesterday lived up to previous records. There was a "Gay Paree" show, featuring "Miss Jennie Foy, sister of the famous Eddie Foy"—there was the same snake show that occupied a place on the Peterborough Midway — there were dozen of cane racks and hoop-la games and a score of refreshment booths selling everything from cigars to the luscious weiner. The attractions were all well patronized, the Midway proving a magnet all through.

An interesting event in the early part of the Exhibition was a review and drill by the Norwood Boy Scouts under the direction of their scout master, Rev. Mr. Pickford. The little fellows wore the conventional khaki uniform and Stetson hats and went through their drill smartly and well, evidencing careful training.

The Norwood High school cadets in their neat gray uniforms also turned out and performed some manoeuvres in a soldierly manner. The Norwood Cadets stand very high among similar organizations in Ontario and their work yesterday was a credit to themselves and their instructors.

The horse races brought out two good fields and although won in straight heats, gave the crowd some exciting racing. Thanks to the good work of the judges, the races were run off in quick style with little delay and the programme was all over before 4 o'clock.

Charlie Fife's "Ora Tariff" carried off the green race with little difficulty, showing a nice burst of speed and she never was in trouble at any stage of the three heats. The other three entries, however, provided some keen racing and there was some exciting brushes and changes of places among them.

Silver Jim was late in making an appearance and the other horses were sent away without him, but he got away in the rear and qualified afterwards, landing second money by taking the place in the two final heats. Following was the summary:

Ora Tariff	1	1	1
Silver Jim	2	2	4
Silver Dick	3	4	3
Tom O'B.	4	3	2

There were four good horses in the free-for-all and there was some real racing before the result was finally known. "Jimmy Direct," "Dot L.," "Orillia Belle" and "Adrian Pointer" were the quartette that faced the starter, and the result was a good race, in which the ground took great interest. Jimmy Direct had the speed of his field and won handily but there was a contest for the other positions.

Jimmy Direct	1	1	1
Dot L.	4	2	2
Adrian Pointer	2	4	4
Orillia Belle	3	3	3

The Marathon Race.

Harold Smith, of the Peterborough Y.M.C.A., who will be starter in the coming Examiner road race on Thanksgiving Day, won the Marathon race in clever fashion. The other starters were W. J. McBurney of Havelock, who will be remembered as running fourth behind Ray Best, Ernie Wilson

ELECTIONS ON DECEMBER 5

As will be seen in another column, Sir James Whitney, premier of Ontario, has announced the early dissolution of the Ontario Government and has intimated that the elections will be held in December—the first or second week. The Examiner has learned from a reliable unofficial source, that the polling will take place on December 5th, and that the date for the elections will be announced in the course of a few days. A meeting of Liberal supporters has been called for Saturday night of this week in the Central Canada board room to fix the date for the Liberal convention and to discuss Provincial issues. All Liberals are invited.

DISCUSSED IMPORTANT MATTERS

Trades and Labour Council Talked About Milk By-law and Meat Inspection—Municipal Coal Yard

WILL MEET COUNCIL

The Trades and Labour Council met last evening and some very important matters were discussed, with the result that a committee will wait on the city council to try and have a few very necessary matters brought to a head.

The question of milk and meat inspection is one of the questions which was discussed at some length. It was claimed that some of the milk men who are delivering milk in bottles have been noticed filling the bottles out of milk cans on the streets and then delivering to the next customer. This is where, the speakers thought, trouble comes in delivering it in bottles.

Another question brought up was that of a municipal coal yard. At the present time it was pointed out, you can buy coal cheaper in Lakefield than you can in Peterborough. The council thought that this was something that was rather hard to understand.

The question of meat inspection was also touched on, and it was claimed that if a thorough inspection of the different butcher shops in the city took place, some of the meat that is at present being disposed of would be condemned.

The matter of a frontage tax came up also and was gone into at some length. All those matters will be gone into with the city fathers at an early date.

Case Again Appealed

Special to The Examiner

Reason vs. Canadian Chicle Company.—An appeal by plaintiffs from the judgment of the County Court of Middlesex of the 3rd of August, 1911. The plaintiffs, paper box manufacturers of London, brought action against defendants, manufacturers of Peterborough, to recover $113.85, the price of 25,300 folding gum boxes. Defendants claimed that the boxes were negligently and unskillfully made and were unfit for the purpose for which they were intended by defendants, to the knowledge of the plaintiffs. At the trial the action was dismissed without costs. Appeal dismissed with costs.

The case is again being appealed. O'Connel and Gordon are appearing for the Canadian Chicle Co., and Gibbons, Harper and Gibbons, of London, are appearing for the Reason Co.

Procure Your Hunting Licenses

Mr. John Watt, game and fisheries overseer, desires, through the columns of the Examiner, to call the attention of hunters to the fact that they must procure hunting licenses, in compliance with the game regulations. There have been instances in the past where this rule has been violated. Without any unpleasantness on his part, Mr. Watt wishes to intimate that all offenders will be strictly dealt with.

Licenses can be procured at Mr. Sam Ray's, or in the event of a club meeting being held, Mr. Watt will be pleased to supply them personally, should they communicate with him by phone, No. 342, or call at his home, 263 Rubidge street.

TWO CABINETS.

Some enthusiastic Conservative journals are declaring that the cabinet chosen by Hon. Premier Borden is superior to that named by Sir Wilfrid Laurier, when he took office in 1896. Here is a list of both cabinets and they furnish material for comparison by those who have kept in touch with public men ad public affairs the past score of years:

1896	1911
Wilfrid Laurier	R. L. Borden,
W. S. Fielding	W. T. White
Oliver Mowat	C. J. Doherty
J. I. Tarte	F. D. Monk
F. W. Borden	Sam Hughes,
A. G. Blair	F. Cochrane
Sydney Fisher	Martin Burrell
Richard Cartwright	Geo. E. Foster
W. H. Mulock	L. P. Pelletier
Wm. Paterson	J. D. Reid
Louis H. Davies	J. D. Hazen
C. Sifton	R. Rogers
R. W. Scott	W. J. Roche
	T. W. Crothers

H. Joly de Lotbiniere, W. B. Nantel

The reader may make his own comparison, not forgetting to contrast the loyalty to British institutions of the members of the two cabinets. There was no Minister of Labour in 1896.

STATESMEN ARE HUMAN.

There is a good deal of honest, and even human nature in politicians. The mutual political antagonism that necessity induces, often overlies even personal friendships and mutual feelings worthy of our best praise. Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Hon. R. L. Borden have been the leaders in one of the bitterest political fights of our history. Yet their personal friendship and mutual sense of regard have not been affected by the triumph of the one nor the defeat of the other. By virtue of his success, to Hon. Mr. Borden falls the duty of welcoming our new Governor-General, a duty which, under other circumstances, would have fallen to Sir Wilfrid Laurier. Here is where a fine trait of Mr. Borden's character came out, where his heart spoke. He did not forget Sir Wilfrid and Lady Laurier among those invited, though those in charge of the arrangements for welcoming the Duke, appear to have done so. When he learned of this, Mr. Borden at once directed the Under Secretary of State, Mr. Thos. Mulvey, to issue invitations to Sir Wilfrid and Lady Laurier. He also ordered a private car to be attached to the special Government train leaving for Quebec on Thursday and placed the same at the disposal of the ex-Premier. In an interview Mr. Borden said: "I can not understand why the names of Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Lady Laurier were excluded from the list of those invited to witness the swearing-in of the new Governor-General at Quebec. I was only too happy to rectify the error. Sir Wilfrid and I have always been personal friends, and he has shown me every kindness, both before and since the election. I regret exceedingly that he cannot see his way clear to come with us on the special train for Quebec. He feels that it would not be in good taste for him to do so. I need not say, however, that he would be most welcome."

This incident and this evidence of the warm personal relations between two great public men show that the man is greater than the politician.

THE PERFECT TO BE PERFECTED

It was to be expected that Conservative journals would be enthusiastic over the cabinet selected by Hon. Premier Borden. Many of them can—or do not—see any flaws, in it, no matter what their underlying misgivings may be; some declare it an incomparable cabinet, and employing the highest standard of comparison, assert that it is better than the Laurier cabinet at its best. But through all these comments runs the idea that Mr. Borden's new cabinet is not so good that it cannot be improved; the confession is inferentially made, that it is only a temporary arrangement and that in the near future it will be brought up to the standard. The Ottawa Citizen, the Conservative organ at the capital, says:

"From the number of appointments without portfolio, it is evident that readjustments are contemplated when the government has settled down to work."

This is a confession that the perfect new cabinet is not perfect. That new as it is, it will soon need patching. To show that the Conservative press is not quite comfortable, that it needs to do a little whistling to keep its courage up, the Citizen, in the next sentence to that quoted above, says in effect that the cabinet is satisfactory—

"In the distribution of portfolios evident care has been taken in their allotment, and on all sides, satisfaction is expressed at the suitability and capability of the gentlemen selected for the various departments."

What more is needed? If there is "satisfaction on all sides" with the "capability and suitability" of the members of the new cabinet, why these dark hints at readjustment and veiled threats that, as soon as these "capable and suitable" men are settled in harness, they will be displaced by bringing forward the reserves kept ready, and with truly great statesmanlike prevision pre-empted for service — to replace a cabinet, or sections of a cabinet, of perfectly suitable and capable men—to perfect the perfect.

A REAL "EYE-OPENER."

In an article upon our first page, there is further confirmation of the fact, that Henri Bourassa, the high priest of Nationalism, the protagonist of the Empire-wrecking, anti-British and anti-Imperial movement, to throw off the bonds of British influence and erect Quebec into an independent state, is the real premier, the Warwick of cabinets. Hon. R. L. Borden, in making his cabinet, has succumbed to the threats, more or less veiled, as to what would and would not be done to him if he failed to amply recognize the help the Nationalists gave the other elements of auxiliary influences that in Ontario and elsewhere won his election. This is shown by the fact that he has placed in his cabinet, three chief representatives from Quebec, of the Nationalist propaganda of treason to Canada and the Empire; and in contemptuous defiance of the overwhelming loyal Canadian and British sentiment, not only of Quebec, but of Ontario and all the provinces of the Dominion.

That Bourassa is the master of the new administration is further shown by the fact that his newspaper, Le Devoir, contained the announcement, literally exact, of the personnel of the Borden cabinet, sixty hours ahead of any of the important newspapers that have fought the battles of Conservatism for a generation. Either Mr. Bourassa's paper was unduly favoured ,or he had dictated the composition of Mr. Borden's cabinet and justifiably felt his power to have it adopted. In either event, Mr. Bourassa has shown himself to be the power behind the throne, that he is pledged and is working to overthrow in Canada. He selects, in effect, the advisers of the Crown, which he is striving to cast down.

How is this relished, by those Peterborough pillars of threatened Protestantism, who moved heaven and earth, who made appeal to every anti-French and anti-Catholic prejudice to dethrone a Canadian Premier, truly loyal to Canada and the Empire, with a name honoured at home and abroad? What do the men think who did all this to elevate to power, Mr. Borden, who in his first official act, not only despises the Ontario ladder of 73 rungs, by which he climbed into power, but adds insult to injury by placing in the seats of the mighty as advisers of the king and members of his Privy Council, three men—who have denied their allegiance to their king, and have talked and acted as traitors, talk and act? What does Mr. Burnham think, whose shameless and long engineered campaign of race and religion, apparently triumphant for the moment, has been neutralized in a moment, by one sweep of Mr. Bourassa's powerful hand?

What do the electors think, who followed these blind leaders of the blind, through the dark underground courses they pursued in the last election, and voted against their political convictions ;and what for? To place a man in office whose first act was to give power and prominent recognition in the councils of the king, to the very men, against whom and their principles of all kinds, they voted under the delusion that they were voting in the welfare of religious interests, that, as recent events demonstrate, would be in less danger from a whole parliament of Lauriers than from the three anti-British, disloyal, ultra-montane and unworthy French Canadians, to whom, at Mr. Bourassa's command, Mr. Borden has given cabinet positions of the first class.

Is the Borden-Bourassa pact a satisfactory substitution for the reciprocity pact?

SAY THAT PREMIER WEAKLY SURRENDERED TO PRESSURE

Even Conservatives Are Not Enthusiastic Over It—With Material at Hand and Majority at His Back, Borden Should Have Done Better

OTTAWA ,ONT., OCT. 11—After the excitement and rush of yesterday, Ottawa is extremely quiet this morning, not to say stagnant. The frock-coated and silk-hatted Ministers who were to be seen everywhere yesterday have disappeared. There was a meeting of the new Cabinet yesterday afternoon and another again this morning at which the new Ministers got used to the feeling of the leather chairs in the council chamber, and discussed some small matters which demanded immediate attention. After it was over they went off to their respective departments to become acquainted with their staffs. They leave in a body this afternoon for Quebec to greet the new Governor-General, and Ottawa will be dead till their return.

Comment on the new Cabinet even in Conservative quarters, is far from enthusiastic. The best that is being said of it is that it will be well to suspend judgment for the time being, but that certainly Mr. Borden has not succeeded in getting together as strong a group as he might have done with the material at hand and with the majority behind him. It is felt that the new Premier has not displayed much strength, and has allowed himself to be swayed by elements that he was strong enough to disregard. That was a criticism that was frequently leveled at Mr. Borden in his opposition days, but it was then said that were he given the power that goes with the Premiership he would go his own way uninfluenced. Now it is said he has shown that even with this power he has not been strong enough to stand out against real sources of weakness which have pushed their way into his Cabinet. Both sides are content, however, to withhold judgment for the present and to give the new Cabinet a chance to prove up.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier returned to Ottawa from Montreal last night. He would not express any opinion for publication on Mr. Borden's advisers.

Saskatchewan Chagrined.

REGINA, OCT. 11.—People here regard with extreme disappointment two of Borden's appointments, Rogers and White. The inclusion of the former in the Cabinet is regarded as a confession of weakness, while White's appointment is generally looked upon by both Conservatives and Liberals as a concession that the big interests are in practical control of all financial matter. The inclusion of the Nationalists is a further disappointment to adherents of both parties.

HON. MR. BORDEN'S SURRENDER TO LEAST WORTHY PARTY ELEMENTS

(London Advertiser)

Mr. Borden has yielded to the Nationalists. The articles of capitulation have been signed and sealed by the inclusion of Messrs. Monk, Pelletier, and Nantel in his cabinet.

A year ago no English Conservative would have thought such a situation possible.

A year ago Mr. Monk was read out of the Conservative party by the Toronto News, at the prompting, it was thought at the time, of Mr. Borden himself. The ground of attack was Mr. Monk's hostile attitude toward the policy of Imperial naval defence.

A year ago the country was ablaze over the bitterly anti-British campaign in Drummond and Arthabaska over the naval issue. Messrs. Monk and Nantel were among the orators, who inflamed the French-Canadians of that riding by shameful misrepresentations and appeals to race prejudice.

Less than a year ago, on Nov. 23, 1910, Mr. Monk denounced the naval law in the House of Commons in these words:

"Under this new arrangement, it is not to the crown of England that we become subject, but WE BECOME THE SLAVES OF THE ENGLISH ELECTORATE. That is what we become. In the most important part of our national life—our relations with foreign countries, our wars, if wars should be a necessity—in all these things we shall be controlled by men elected by the English voters in the British Isles and not elected by ourselves."

As for Mr. Pelletier, he declared himself only a week ago a follower of Bourassa and Lavergne, that industrious pair of strife-breeders. He shook the club over Mr. Borden's head, with this language:

"We shall have a referendum on the marine question. I am sure that Mr. Borden will carry out this promise that he has made.

"We have been elected on the ground that the Canadian people would have a navy only if the majority were willing to have it, and if these men now in possession of the power neglect to carry this article of our programme we shall take means to have it carried."

Mr. Borden has yielded to the threat.

Mr. Nantel is an out-and-out Nationalist, a disciple of Bourassa. In the Drummond by-election he paraded the scarecrow of conscription before the eyes of the simple habitants. Reproached with this gross deception, he replied in the House of Commons on Nov. 23, 1910:

"We have not deceived the people, we have been honest enough to state the facts. For myself, I have declared that conscription was not obligatory by virtue of the naval law, neither in Canada nor in Britain, but that it would perhaps become so in Canada the moment it became so in England. This opinion has been expressed over there; it has been said that if England wished to repel Germany it would be necessary to adopt enrollment by force. And I added that if England adopted conscription, and if she demanded of the Prime Minister its establishment in Canada, he would establish it, just as he sent contingents to South Africa after having refused to do it, and just as he has accepted the navy after having spoken during a great part of his career against Imperialism."

These are the men whom Mr. Borden calls to his councils to consort with men who boast of their superior loyalty and ultra-Imperialism!

Against some of Mr. Borden's selections there is nothing to be said. Messrs. Doherty, Hazen, Burrell, Cochrane and Roche are men who are entitled to portfolios by ability and party service, and whose names have not been smirched. Mr. George E. Foster is discredited, and his inclusion in the cabinet is an affront to the moral sense of the Canadian people. The same may be truthfully said of Hon. Robert Rogers, of Winnipeg, an unscrupulous and scheming politician of the machine type. Mr. Crothers, of St. Thomas, is the man who on the eve of the election tried to bribe the depositors and shareholders of the Farmers' Bank with a promise to repay every dollar of their losses. Mr. W. T. White is the nominee of the financial magnates of Toronto, who engineered the anti-reciprocity campaign. His choice for the ministership of fiance is ominous. It has already caused a revolt in the Conservative party. Colonel Sam Hughes who gets the portfolio, is one of the harlequins of Parliament. His ungovernable recklessness of tongue and temper, illustrated recently by his attack upon the clergymen of Canada, has brought down on him more than once the rebuke of his colleagues. Dr. Reid is the head of the starch trust, and a confidential agent of Rodolphe Forget, the Quebec multi-millionaire. Places in the cabinet without portfolio are given Mr. Kemp, of Toronto, Mr. Perley of Quebec, and Senator Lougheed, of Alberta. Their preferment is merely a solatium and a confession of Mr. Borden's difficulty in reconciling conflicting claims.

Mr. Borden has accomplished his first task. He had a free hand, and he has chosen to surrender to some of the worst elements in his party, or, rather, in the coalition. It is not a promising beginning.

THE NEW REGIME.

(Toronto Star.)

On behalf of the new Government, the Mail and Empire and the News make the promises that are made on behalf of all Governments. It will avoid all the faults of its predecessors. It will be honest and economical, it will serve the people. It will deal justly with vested interests and yet keep them under control. It will be stable and yet progressive. These are policies that command universal approval, like the convention plank that declared for upholding the rights of labour while not unjustly assailing capital.

While it is to be hoped that the Government will keep those good resolutions, something more will be required. Constructive, original work was done by Mr. Borden's predecessors of both political parties. Difficulties were met with that could not be solved by declarations of the general principles of good conduct. It required something more than this to bring the scattered Provinces of Canada into confederation, to unite the Western prairies with Canada, to form the first Governments of Canada, Federal and Provincial and equip them with institutions and a body of wor king laws. It required boldness and constructive ability to conceive and carry out the policy of building the Canadian Pacific Railway.

The Laurier Government had many difficulties to contend with, and much pioneer work to do. It had to settle the Manitoba school question. It had to establish the two new Provinces of Saskatchewan and Alberta. It gave Canada its first Railway Commission, its first Labour Department, its first system of Government annuities. It overcame the obstacles which had checked the settlement of the West. It introduced civil service reform. It found a deficit in the national revenues. It left an over-flowing treasury.

It was also the first Government which was called upon to deal with Imperial defence. The South African war was the first case in which the participation of Canadian troops in wars outside Canada became a practical question. Ontario was eager; Quebec held back. It was Sir Wilfrid Laurier who had to reconcile these differences of opinion and sentiment.

It was under Sir Wilfrid Laurier that the question of establishing a Canadian navy, and aiding in the naval defence of the Empire became a practical question. A navy was established and naval law was placed upon the statute book, with great opposition from a large element in Quebec, and with opposition of another kind from Ontario. Mr. Borden may improve the law and enlarge the navy, but the pioneer work has been done; the initial difficulties have been overcome.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Mr. Fielding were the pioneers in British preference. After others had talked for years of a sort of bargain with Great Britain, the Liberal Government took the bold and original step of establishing a voluntary preference.

Mr. Borden has so far done nothing but reap the harvest sown by his predecessors. He has faced no difficulty; he has done no pioneer work. It would be absurd to contend that in the recent election he achieved a victory for British or Canadian ideas. He merely profited by the strength of ideas developed under men who had fought real battles for unity. There was no enemy to be fought. The minority in the recent elections were just as strongly British and Canadian as the majority, and disagreed only as to the effect of trade upon nationality.

With a prosperous and united country and a full treasury Mr. Borden's position will be like that of the fortunate heir of ancestors who have built up a great estate by hard work or hard fighting. His path ought to be easier than theirs; yet the country will not be satisfied unless he makes some contribution of his own to constructive statesmanship.

WORLD'S SERIES WILL BE AN EVEN-MONEY CHANCE

Mathewson and Bender Will be on the Firing Line for the Opening Game---Players of Both Teams Agree That the Battle Will be a Hard Struggle.

NEW YORK, OCT. 11.—"Managers have their troubles, but the physical condition of the players probably will be the least of them in the world's series of baseball," remarked John McGraw, manager of the New York Nationals, as he dropped in to the club headquarters on Broadway today.

In this respect, at least, the coming games between the Giants and Philadelphia Athletics will be unusual, for both teams expect to take the field with their regular line-ups in fine fettle. In other years injuries and ailments of players have had managers on the anxious seat, because of the fear that the substitutes might break up the team-play or crack under fire.

If the weather clears the Giants will play Brooklyn a double-header to-day, and the games will be nothing more than exercise for those whom McGraw wants to keep on edge. The New York club has no players who will be incapacitated from playing against the Athletics.

Mr. McGraw will probably announce the following batting order for the Giants on Saturday:

Devore, l.f., Doyle 2b., Snodgrass, c. f.; Murray, r.f.; Merkle, 1b.; Herzog, 3b.; Fletcher, s.s.; Meyers, c.; Mathewson, p.

Reports from the Athletics' camp indicate that 'Firstbaseman "Stuffy" McInnes will be back on the bag when the team meets the Giants. McInnes received a nasty welt on the wrist from a pitched ball in one of the recent Detroit games. Manager Mack's batting order probably will read as follows:

Lord, l.f.; Oldring, c.f.; Collins, 2b. Baker, 3b.; Murphy, r.f.; McInnes, 1b.; Barry, s.s.; Thomas, c.; Bender p.

All the Giants are hoping to win, but at Herzog remarked: "The series is an even-money chance." And the third baseman's opinion is said to be the feeling of most of the Giant club.

PROFESSIONAL HOCKEY

TORONTO, OCT. 11.—Now that Toronto is assured of a new and up-to-date Arena, hockey fans are wondering what kind of a professional hockey team they will have the coming winter, and what league they will be in.

The National Hockey Association, composed of Quebec, Wanderers and Canadiens of Montreal, Ottawa, and Renfrew, will surely welcome a team from the Queen City, which will likely be the Torontos. It is also said that the Tecumsehs have secured a franchise from O'Brien of Renfrew. This is said to be one of the many franchises held by Ambrose O'Brien, but not the Renfrew franchise.

Ottawa have expressed the opinion that Quebec and Renfrew should be dropped, and the two Toronto teams taken in. As long as the "Millionaire Team" desires a berth in the N. H. A. they will certainly be there, Ottawa or no Ottawa.

Want Toronto In.

With five clubs and a Toronto team with a double schedule, the N. H. A. would surely make some league. The Eastern Clubs have always wanted a Toronto team in with them, as has been proven in lacrosse.

At the present time Ottawa seems to be in the best position as to players, they having all their team intact, with the possible exception of Bruce Ridpath, who will look after the Toronto team. However, it is said that Ottawa will not let him go without the Toronto team buying his release. It is also reported that Ottawa will have another net guardian as Percy Leseur is slated for another team.

Wanderers Need Players.

The Wanderers of Montreal will need three if not four new players this winter, as Walter Smaill has already gone West, and it is reported that Hyland and Johnson will follow later. Quebec will have to be patched up as Barney Holden and Joe Hall will not likely come east this winter. Renfrew will have pretty much the same team as last winter, which by the way, should be well up in the running this winter, as they are all young players. In the past Renfrew has had too many managers looking after their team.

Canadiens of Montreal will surely be without their old leader, "Newsy" Lalonde, who will likely stay out in Vancouver and play for Frank Patrick. Lavigolette and Pitre, two of the most sensational players in the game, will hold down their positions, cover point and rover on the French team, the remainder of the team being in doubt.

Expect to get O. H. A. Players.

The Toronto team will practically have to build a team around Bruce Ridpath, but with the material in and around Toronto they should not have the least trouble in placing a seven on the new arena that will make the Eastern cracks sit up and take notice. There is no need of going outside of the O. H. A., as most of the leading players in the Eastern League have been taken from the Ontario Association and more will follow.

The Western League.

The Western League is to be composed of Vancouver, Nelson, and Victoria, with Calgary and Edmonton also mentioned, but these latter can hardly support a team, where the jumps are so long. Frank Patrick will look after the Vancouver team, where he is also managing director of the new arena which has been erected this summer. Brother Lester will look after the Nelson team, and another Eastern man will run the Victoria end.

Fred Taylor for Ottawa.

While the Ottawa and Wanderer teams were playing in New York, and Boston, last spring, it was whispered that the only Fred Taylor would be seen in an Ottawa uniform this coming winter, as he played with his old team mates in Boston. However, Geo. Martel, says he had his trouble getting 'Frederick the Great' away from the Capital and they will have their troubles getting him back. It is said Taylor has a three-year contract with the millionaire team at no small figure.

No. 1 Company Will Be Here

"The Arrival of Kitty," which is to be seen at the Grand Opera House, Peterborough, Saturday, Oct. 14, matinee and night, is considered one of the best farce comedies that has ever been written within the past few years. It is an up-to-the-minute comedy and its bright lines are heard for months afterwards in the cities where it is played. This season, Norman Lee Swarton, the author, has been obliged to divide up the territory for the producing managers, as three different companies are playing the piece. In this, Canada has been fortunate in securing the number one company, known as the North Western "Arrival of Kitty," which is on its way to the Pacific Coast. This is positively the best cast that has ever played the piece, and is guaranteed to make even the first nighters laugh. Special prices will prevail for the matinee. Adults 25c., children 15c. Evening, 35c., 50c. and 75c. Gallery 25c. The seats are now on sale.

WEDDING BELLS

WILKINSON—HAWTHORNE.

St. Paul's Church, Haileybury, was the scene of a pretty wedding when Lily M. Hawthorne, of Peterborough, was united in the bond of holy matrimony to Thomas Wilkinson of South Lorraine, Ont., by the Rev. E. J. Harper.

Miss Hawthorne was accompanied to Haileybury by her little niece. A few friends were present to witness and congratulate the young couple, who go into housekeeping near the Wettlaufer mine, where the groom is employed. The good wishes of their friends accompany them.

EDMISON—SIPPI.

A very pretty wedding took place in an Anglican church in Winnipeg, yesterday, when Miss Minnie Sippi, youngest daughter of the late Dr. Sippi of London, Ont., and Mr. Herbert H. Edmison, youngest son of Magistrate Edmison, were united in the holy bonds of matrimony. The church was beautifully decorated for the occasion with floral decorations, and a large number of guests witnessed the ceremony. The young couple were unattended. After the ceremony, a reception was held at the home of a friend, "Albany," 91 Edmonton street, and after the reception the happy young couple left for New York, on their honeymoon, and upon their return will visit the groom's parents, Magistrate and Mrs. Edmison, Rubidge street, city. They will reside in Winnipeg. The bride had been visiting her married sister, in Winnipeg, and the wedding was arranged for yesterday.

HICKSON—ENGLISH.

St. John's Church, Norwood, was the scene of a very pretty wedding when Miss Katherine English, a popular young lady of that town, and Mr. Robert Hickson, of Ennismore, were united in the bonds of holy matrimony by the Rev. Fr. Kelly. The bride was given away by her brother, Mr. Edward English, and was attended by her cousin, Miss Jessie O'Donnell of Peterborough. The groomsman was Mr. J. Killin of Ennismore. Among the numerous guests were Miss Julia O'Donnell of Toronto, Miss M. Fee and Miss Josie Fee of Winnipeg, and Miss M. Cowley, of Chicago.

RINGER—HENRY.

A quiet, but pretty, wedding, was solemnized this morning, when Miss Minnie Henry, daughter of Mrs. Geo. Henry, of Bethune street, was united to Mr. Arthur A. Ringer, son of Alfred Richard Ringer, of Aylmer St. The Rev. H. J. Keith performed the ceremony. The bride was assisted by her sister, and the bridegroom by Mr. George Metheral. Only a few immediate friends were present.

Mr. and Mrs. Ringer will reside on Stewart street.

A FAST FLIGHT

On Sunday afternoon, Mr. Joe Kelly, local bird fancier, released three carrier pigeons, the property of Mr. Frank Bortrell, Bowmanville. He has since received a letter saying that the birds had arrived home safely. Their time for the fifty-three miles, was one hour and fifteen minutes.

ACTUAL STARVATION

Facts About Indigestion and Its Relief That Should Interest You.

Although Indigestion and Dyspepsia are so prevalent, most people do not thoroughly understand their cause and cure. There is no reason why most people should not eat anything they desire—if they will only chew it carefully and thoroughly. Many actually starve themselves into sickness through fear of eating every good-looking, good-smelling and good-tasting food, because it does not agree with them.

The best thing to do is to let yourself to digest any good food.

We believe we can relieve Dyspepsia. We are so confident of this fact that we guarantee and promise to supply the medicine free of all cost to every one who will use it, who is not perfectly satisfied with the results which it produces. We exact no promises, and put no one under any obligation whatever. Surely, nothing could be fairer. We are located right here and our reputation should be sufficient assurance of the genuineness of our offer.

We want every one troubled with Indigestion or Dyspepsia in any form to come to our store and buy a box of Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets. Take them home and give them a reasonable trial, according to directions. Then, if not satisfied, come to us and get your money back. They are very pleasant to take; they aid to soothe the irritable stomach, to strengthen and invigorate the digestive organs, and to promote a healthy and natural bowel action, thus leading to perfect and healthy digestion and assimilation.

A 25c. package of Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets furnishes 15 days' treatment. In ordinary cases, this is sufficient to produce a cure. In more chronic cases, a longer treatment, of course, is necessary, and depends upon the severity of the trouble. For such cases, we have two larger sizes which sell for 50c. and $1.00. Remember, you can obtain Rexall Remedies in this community only at our store.—The Rexall Store, McDermid and Jury.

Feeling Him.

The season of fall fairs has opened, and once more we hear stories of unhappy householders in the big cities sleeping in the bath-tub, in the dog's kennel, or on the dining-room table.

Certainly some houses in the larger cities do become badly crowded with country cousins, aunts, uncles, other relatives, and friends. The city people would have a hard time proving that the country people, whom they have visited during the summer holidays, haven't the right to expect to be given lodgings while the fair is on. A certain Toronto man, whose house could scarcely accommodate all the country people whom he was to entertain during the time of the Exhibition, put off, in a funny way, a country man with whom he had become but slightly acquainted.

"I won't give you my street number," said W——, the city man, "because you would probably forget it, but I live on the east side of —— street, and if you walk up the street you'll easily find my house because my initials—T. W. W.— are on a metal plate in the sidewalk."

If the country man tried to find the other, he discovered that such a metal plate was in front of every house, and probably somebody explained to him that the metal plate marked the spot where water is turned on and off, and that T. W. W. stood for Toronto Water Works.

WORLD'S SERIES WILL BE AN EVEN-MONEY CHANCE

Mathewson and Bender Will be on the Firing Line for the Opening Game---Players of Both Teams Agree That the Battle Will be a Hard Struggle.

NEW YORK, OCT. 11.—"Managers have their troubles, but the physical condition of the players probably will be the least of them in the world's series of baseball," remarked John McGraw, manager of the New York Nationals, as he dropped in to the club headquarters on Broadway today.

In this respect, at least, the coming games between the Giants and Philadelphia Athletics will be unusual, for both teams expect to take the field with their regular line-ups in fine fettle. In other years injuries and ailments of players have had managers on the anxious seat, because of the fear that the substitutes might break up the team-play or crack under fire.

If the weather clears the Giants will play Brooklyn a double-header to-day, and the games will be nothing more than exercise for those whom McGraw wants to keep on edge. The New York club has no players who will be incapacitated from playing against the Athletics.

Mr. McGraw will probably announce the following batting order for the Giants on Saturday:

Devore, l.f., Doyle 2b., Snodgrass, c. f.; Murray, r.f.; Merkle, 1b.; Herzog, 3b.; Fletcher, s.s.; Meyers, c.; Mathewson, p.

Reports from the Athletics' camp indicate that Firstbaseman "Stuffy" McInnes will be back on the bag when the team meets the Giants. McInnes received a nasty welt on the wrist from a pitched ball in one of the recent Detroit games. Manager Mack's batting order probably will read as follows:

Lord, l.f.; Oldring, c.f.; Collins, 2b. Baker, 3b.; Murphy, r.f.; McInnes, 1b.; Barry, s.s.; Thomas, c.; Bender p.

All the Giants are hoping to win, but at Herzog remarked: "The series is an even-money chance." And the third baseman's opinion is said to be the feeling of most of the Giant club.

PROFESSIONAL HOCKEY

TORONTO, OCT. 11.—Now that Toronto is assured of a new and up-to-date Arena, hockey fans are wondering what kind of a professional hockey team they will have the coming winter, and what league they will be in.

The National Hockey Association, composed of Quebec, Wanderers and Canadiens of Montreal, Ottawa, and Renfrew, will surely welcome a team from the Queen City, which will likely be the Torontos. It is also said that the Tecumsehs have secured a franchise from O'Brien of Renfrew. This is said to be one of the many franchises held by Ambrose O'Brien, but not the Renfrew franchise.

Ottawa have expressed the opinion that Quebec and Renfrew should be dropped, and the two Toronto teams taken in. As long as the "Millionaire Team" desires a berth in the N. H. A. they will certainly be there, Ottawa or no Ottawa.

Want Toronto In.

With five clubs and a Toronto team with a double schedule, the N. H. A. would surely make some league. The Eastern Clubs have always wanted a Toronto team in with them, as has been proven in lacrosse.

At the present time Ottawa seems to be in the best position as to players, they having all their team intact, with the possible exception of Bruce Ridpath, who will look after the Toronto team. However, it is said that Ottawa will not let him go without the Toronto team buying his release. It is also reported that Ottawa will have another net guardian as Percy Lesueur is slated for another team.

Wanderers Need Players.

The Wanderers of Montreal will need three if not four new players this winter, as Walter Smaill has already gone West, and it is reported that Hyland and Johnson will follow later. Quebec will have to be patched up as Barney Holden and Joe Hall will not likely come east this winter. Renfrew will have pretty much the same team as last winter, which, by the way, should be well up in the running this winter, as they are all young players. In the past Renfrew has had too many managers looking after their team.

Canadiens of Montreal will surely be without their old leader, "Newsy" Lalonde, who will likely stay out in Vancouver and play for Frank Patrick. Laviolette and Pitre, two of the most sensational players in the game, will hold down their positions, cover point and rover on the French team, the remainder of the team being in doubt.

Expect to get O. H. A. Players.

The Toronto team will practically have to build a team around Bruce Ridpath, but with the material in and around Toronto they should not have the least trouble in placing a seven on the new arena that will make the Eastern cracks sit up and take notice. There is no need of going outside of the O. H. A., as most of the leading players in the Eastern League have been taken from the Ontario Association and more will follow.

The Western League.

The Western League is to be composed of Vancouver, Nelson, and Victoria, with Calgary and Edmonton also mentioned these latter can hardly suppo m, where the jumps are so long. Frank Patrick will look after the Vancouver team, where he is also managing director of the new arena which has been erected this summer. Brother Lester will look after the Nelson team, and another Eastern man will run the Victoria end.

Fred Taylor for Ottawa.

While the Ottawa and Wanderer teams were playing in New York, and Boston, last spring, it was whispered that the only Fred Taylor would be seen in an Ottawa uniform this coming winter, as he played with his old team mates in Boston. However, Geo. Martel, says he had his trouble getting 'Frederick the Great' away from the Capital and they will have their troubles getting him back. It is said Taylor has a three-year contract with the millionaire team at no small figure.

No. 1 Company Will Be Here

"The Arrival of Kitty," which is to be seen at the Grand Opera House, Peterborough, Saturday, Oct. 14, matinee and night, is considered one of the best farce comedies that has ever been written within the past few years. It is an up-to-the-minute comedy and its bright lines are heard for months afterwards in the cities where it is played. This season, Norman Lee Swarton, the author, has been obliged to divide up the territory for the producing managers, as three different companies are playing the piece. In this, Canada has been fortunate in securing the number one company, known as the North Western "Arrival of Kitty," which is on its way to the Pacific Coast. This is positively the best cast that has ever played the piece, and is guaranteed to make even the first nighters laugh. Special prices will prevail for the matinee. Adults 25c., children 15c. Evening, 35c., 50c. and 75c. Gallery 25c. The seats are now on sale.

WEDDING BELLS

WILKINSON—HAWTHORNE.

St. Paul's Church, Haileybury, was the scene of a pretty wedding when Lily M. Hawthorne, of Peterborough, was united in the bond of holy matrimony to Thomas Wilkinson of South Lorraine, Ont., by the Rev. E. J. Harper.

Miss Hawthorne was accompanied to Haileybury by her little niece. A few friends were present to witness and congratulate the young couple, who go into housekeeping near the Wettlaufer mine, where the groom is employed. The good wishes of their friends accompany them.

EDMISON—SIPPI.

A very pretty wedding took place in an Anglican church in Winnipeg, yesterday, when Miss Minnie Sippi, youngest daughter of the late Dr. Sippi of London, Ont., and Mr. Herbert H. Edmison, youngest son of Magistrate Edmison, were united in the holy bonds of matrimony. The church was beautifully decorated for the occasion with floral decorations, and a large number of guests witnessed the ceremony. The young couple were unattended. After the ceremony, a reception was held at the home of a friend, "Albany," 91 Edmonton street, and after the reception the happy young couple left for New York, on their honeymoon, and upon their return will visit the groom's parents, Magistrate and Mrs. Edmison, Rubidge street, city. They will reside in Winnipeg. The bride had been visiting her married sister, in Winnipeg, and the wedding was arranged for yesterday.

HICKSON—ENGLISH.

St. John's Church, Norwood, was the scene of a very pretty wedding when Miss Katherine English, a popular young lady of that town, and Mr. Robert Hickson, of Ennismore, were united in the bonds of holy matrimony by the Rev. Fr. Kelly. The bride was given away by her brother, Mr. Edward English, and was attended by her cousin, Miss Jessie O'Donnell of Peterborough. The groomsman was Mr. J. Killin of Ennismore. Among the numerous guests were Miss Julia O'Donnell of Toronto, Miss M. Fee and Miss Josie Fee of Winnipeg, and Miss M. Cowley, of Chicago.

RINGER—HENRY.

A quiet, but pretty, wedding, was solemnized this morning, when Miss Minnie Henry, daughter of Mrs. Geo. Henry, of Bethune street, was united to Mr. Arthur A. Ringer, son of Alfred Richard Ringer, of Aylmer St. The Rev. H. J. Keith performed the ceremony. The bride was assisted by her sister, and the bridegroom by Mr. George Metheral. Only a few immediate friends were present.

Mr. and Mrs. Ringer will reside on Stewart street.

A FAST FLIGHT

On Sunday afternoon, Mr. Joe Kelly, local bird fancier, released three carrier pigeons, the property of Mr. Frank Bottrell, Bowmanville. He has since received a letter saying that the birds had arrived home safely. Their time for the fifty-three miles, was one hour and fifteen minutes.

Facts About Indigestion and Its Relief That Should Interest You.

Although Indigestion and Dyspepsia are so prevalent, most people do not thoroughly understand their cause and cure. There is no reason why most people should not eat anything they desire—if they will only chew it carefully and thoroughly. Many actually starve themselves into sickness through fear of eating every good-looking, good-smelling and good tasting food, because it does not agree with them.

The best thing to do is to let yourself to digest any good food.

We believe we can relieve Dyspepsia. We are so confident of this fact that we guarantee and promise to supply the medicine free of all cost to every one who will use it, who is not perfectly satisfied with the results which it produces. We exact no promises, and put no one under any obligation whatever. Surely, nothing could be fairer. We are located right here and our reputation should be sufficient assurance of the genuineness of our offer.

We want every one troubled with Indigestion or Dyspepsia in any form to come to our store and buy a box of Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets. Take them home and give them a reasonable trial, according to directions. Then, if not satisfied, come to us and get your money back. They are very pleasant to take; they aid to soothe the irritable stomach, to strengthen and invigorate the digestive organs, and to promote a healthy and natural bowel action, thus leading to perfect and healthy digestion and assimilation.

A 25c. package of Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets furnishes 15 days' treatment. In ordinary cases, this is sufficient to produce a cure. In more chronic cases, a longer treatment, of course, is necessary, and depends upon the severity of the trouble. For such cases, we have two larger sizes which sell for 50c. and $1.00. Remember, you can obtain Rexall Remedies in this community only at our store,—The Rexall Store, McDermid and Jury.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

MOOSEJAW IS BECOMING RAILWAY CITY OF WEST ENORMOUS DEVELOPMENT

The Moose Jaw Times says: "The Railroad City." This is the appellation with which Moose Jaw has been decorated, and nothing more fitting could be suggested to describe the important position which Moose Jaw possesses among the cities of Western Canada. Situated midway between Winnipeg and Calgary, it is but natural that Moose Jaw should have been selected as the headquarters of the C. P. R. in Saskatchewan. Surrounded by an unsurpassed farming country, the products of which all pass through Moose Jaw to the markets of the East, the development of the city as new transportation lines tap this El Dorado of wheat, flax and other grains must be enormous. As yet, but one line is in Moose Jaw and the great expenditure to which they have gone in making this "The Railroad City," is evidence of the great destiny which confronts the city is as the centre of a great network of lines covering all of Saskatch an. It has been well said that where the C.P.R. establishes a railroad centre, the other transportation lines are bound to follow, knowing that this point is where the greatest development is to take place. No wonder then that Moose Jaw is now the mecca of all the railroads.

Investment of $4,000,000.

$4,000,000 represents an approximate of the outlay involved in the investment of the C. P. R. in Moose Jaw at present. Employing a veritable army of men, the monthly pay roll approaches close to $200,000. More railway lines are now operated out of Moose Jaw than any other city in the two provinces of Saskatchewan and Alberta, for Moose Jaw and Winnipeg are the only two cities in Western Canada with direct railway connection to Minneapolis, St. Paul and Chicago. And with the numerous lines now projected into the city, Moose Jaw promises to rival Winnipeg as the great railroad centre of Western Canada. Not mentioning the C.N.R. and G.T.P. which will add many thousands of miles of lines, the C.P. R. are busy building new lines which will add much territory to that already served by their present lines. The new line forming a loop to Swift Current, the construction of which is already well under way, will bring a hitherto untapped country into close connection with the city and will furnish a ready outlet for the great quantities of grain now grown there, but which hitherto has been handicapped on account of absence of a transportation line. On the outlook line, work is now being pushed to rush to completion that part north of the Saskatchewan River. With the completion of the bridge over the river, which is hoped to be attained by spring, a new highway will be opened up which promises to result in immense benefits for Moose Jaw. This line will undoubtedly be pushed through to Edmonton in the course of a short time. What this will mean for Moose Jaw is beyond estimating. By this, it will be placed on a highway from Edmonton to the southern cities, Chicago, Minneapolis and St. Paul. The great benefits accruing to the city through the completion of the Soo line have been of the highest kind, and no one will doubt but what the completion of this line to Edmonton and later, perhaps, into one fertile Peace river district, will witness as great, if not greater, progress in the history of the city.

Improvement in Main Line.

Not only on these branch lines is the faith of the C. P. R. in the future of Moose Jaw being exhibited, but also on the main line. Traffic in and out of the city on the main line during the last few years has increased enormously. Hand in hand with this has gone a great increase in the rolling stock and accommodation for this in the local yards. This has reached such an extent that Moose Jaw to-day boasts of the second largest individual railway yard in the world, covering some forty miles in area. An engine house housing three dozen locomotives has been found necessary to handle the locomotives used in hauling the traffic in and out of the city. Despite these immense facilities, the single track leading out of Moose Jaw has been found inadequate for the traffic on it. As a result, double tracking operations are now being pursued both east and west of the city. This double track will extend to Pasqua on the one side and to Caron on the other. Improvement on the line between here and Pasqua, which has hitherto been nearly 1 p.c. grade, is being made also. The grade is being reduced to 4-10 of one per cent. making a great reduction on hauling expenses out of the city east.

Enlargement of Buildings.

In fact in most every department of the railroad's activities enlargements in keeping with the strides being made by the city along so many lines have been made necessary. The station, which not so many years ago served as hotel, waiting room, baggage and express room combined, is now found to be much inadequate. Consequently a large brick building, 180 x 40 feet has been erected for the purpose of handling baggage. What was formerly the baggage and express room, is to be included as additional waiting room space. The arch now separating the waiting rooms from the express office is to be closed in, and the news stand and ticket office will be established one on each side of this. At the west end of the general waiting room will be a smoking room and lavatory. A room for the checking of parcels is to be placed at this end. A large space is being arranged as a ladies' retiring room? This will be on the north side and will open off the general waiting room. The lunch room is to be moved from its present site and will be established in the east of the general waiting room, occupying partly the space of what is now the ladies' waiting room.

This will provide somewhat like adequate accommodation for the telegraph staff, which is at present contained in half of the building containing the lunch room.

Railway Yards.

In the railway yards, improvements have been made to the east and west. In front of the station the concrete flooring is to be extended out to a distance covering four tracks. Extensive work has been pursued on the tracks between the station and tenth avenue. In order to bring that portion of the track near the bridge on a level with that at the station, a fill of some seven feet has been made. An elaborate refrigerator has been installed. This is in connection with the dining car storage supplies. By this, meats and other perishable eatables are preserved in as efficient a manner as in the most modern cold storage plant, thus ensuring fresh, relishable, eatables for the dining service.

In the west end of the yard extensive improvements have been made, in keeping with Moose Jaw supremacy in railroad facilities. In virtue of the fact that all the cattle raised on the Western Saskatchewan, and Alberta ranches, must pass through her on their way to the eastern cattle markets, the C .P. R. have established in Moose Jaw a stock yard, representing an outlay of $30,000, which has been handling more or less adequately for the last several years an immense number of cattle. Some idea of the magnitude of the business may be gained from the statement that it is the largest stock yard between Winnipeg and Calgary. Remarkable to relate, the present stock yard is now found to be totally inadequate for the requirements, and as a result, it is being doubled in size. What an idea does this fact in itself convey of the enormous progress made in the city? Can anyone presume to calculate the future development (attributed to new C. P. R. lines alone) when Moose Jaw is situated on the main line of a system connecting the virgin north country with the big cattle markets of the continent.

Car Repair Shop Established

But a short distance from the stock yards in the new car repair shop just recently erected. The need for such a building has always been felt here, in view of the great amount of traffic handled, some of which is certain to need repairing. Hitherto no equipment commensurate with this need has been available in the city, but a most modern and complete outfit has now been secured. This repair shop is the largest and most complete of its kind, between Winnipeg and Calgary, employing nearly 100 men. Now repairs from those of a mere trivial nature to ones more extensive and complicated can be effected as well here as in any repair shop in the west. This will be of great benefit as any equipment which is damaged on any of the lines entering Moose Jaw can be brought here and repaired as speedily as the necessary machinery can do it.

Greater Development To Be.

From the above some idea may be gained of the great amount of work that the C.P.R. has done and is doing in the city. That these operations are but fore-runners of greater and more elaborate ones, no one will doubt As to what these will be they are as yet known only to the select few, but the citizens are content to wait, knowing well that what is done will be commensurate with the spirit of progress characteristic of the C. P. R. and so admirably evidenced in the past work of the company in the city We have the words of Sir William Whyte himself that: "The new system of divisional points destines Moose Jaw to be the most important city between Calgary and Winnipeg." A statement which as time passes, is coming more and more to be fulfilled

A Lesson In Conservation

The aggregate area of the state forest of Saxony is less than 450,000 acres. The yield of the state forests in the year 1908 was 226 million feet board measure. In this total are comprised eighty-three per cent. of wood and timber fit for technical use and seventeen per cent. of firewood. The age of final maturity beyond which trees are not allowed to remain is, for spruce, eighty years; for pine, eighty years; for all hardwoods, one hundred and twenty years. The diameter of the trees measured at four and a half feet above the ground at these ages depends entirely on the quality of the soil. It varies for spruce between eight and ten inches; for pine, between six and ten inches. The entire gross expense for forestry in 1908 was a million and a half dollars; forty per cent. for salaries; forty per cent. for logging and forest experiments, and twenty per cent. for planting and road building. The entire gross revenue from forestry in 1908 was three million, nine hundred thousand dollars. The net revenue was as a consequence, two million, four hundred thousand dollars, equal to five dollars and thirty-two cents net per acre.

The Peterborough Radial Railway Co. made application to the township for a franchise agreement, similar to those previously entered into for the extension of their Canadian General Electric branch out Chamberlain St. and down Monaghan road to the C. P. R. tracks, where they propose to build a Y. at Lundy's Lane or on other property between there and the railway.

The township solicitor's advice in the matter states that the council could only sanction an agreement, and that a by-law would have to be submitted to the ratepayers, according to law.

The meeting then adjourned.

WEST ENDS ARE IN GOOD SHAPE FOR BIG O.R.F.U. GAME SATURDAY

The West End Rugby Club had another lively practice at Central Park last night and with a work-out at Riverside Park this afternoon, when they are lining up against the Collegiate Institute team in a practice game, they should be in the best of shape for their hard game with Toronto Central Y.M.C.A. here on Saturday, which opens the local O.R.F.U. season. The advices from Toronto are that Centrals have a fast and heavy team and that they are pretty confident of getting away with a victory here. Capt. Denison and his team cannot see it that way, especially after the form shown by the locals in their last few practices. The team has been changed considerably since the experimentary line-up of last Saturday. George Minorgan will play centre half and his good booting ability will make itself felt. Capt. Denison will play right half, sending Johnston up to quarter and playing Hogan at middle wing. The line-up will be announced to-morrow.

Duke Of Connaught Arrives In Canada

Special to The Examiner.

RIMOUSKI, QUE., OCT. 12.—Magnificent Canadian weather greeted the Duke of Connaught, when the Empress of Ireland, with the new Governor-General and party aboard, slowed down off Father Point, at 9.15 o'clock this morning, to be inspected by the immigration authorities, and passed by the Customs officers. The whole population of Rimouski made its way early to the landing, but none were allowed to take a tug to the side of the steamer except the Inspector and certain minor officials of the Canadian Pacific Railway. Half way up the river this afternoon, Earl Grey, in his private yacht, homeward bound, passed the Empress and salutes were exchanged.

Matriculation Class At Y. M. C. A. Splendid Opportunity For Education

The prospects are bright for a good class this year for those young men who want to write off their matriculation. At the meeting of the class which was held last night plans were talked over and the courses decided upon for the term of forty weeks. Of course it will be necessary to have sixteen men or the work will have to be dropped, and it is encouraging to know that twenty-four men have signified their intention of taking up the studies this year. However, the Association cannot go ahead on good intentions and these men must turn up at the meetings of the class or they cannot expect the class to go ahead.

In this Matriculation Class a splendid opportunity is presented to the young men of Peterborough who are engaged in business to prepare for College. This year the subjects will be English Literature, Composition, Physics and Algebra. If the Class is started at once it will be possible for the candidates to write papers in these subjects at the July examinations and failing that the papers can be written in the fall of 1912. The candidate will receive credit for a subject or subjects on obtaining 40 per cent in each paper and an aggregate of 60 per cent. of the total marks assigned to such subject or subjects.

The purpose of the Educational Department of the Association is to make this class a permanent feature so that the young men of the city may count on being able to take up this work from year to year.

It would be a matter greatly to be regretted if, with this opportunity before them, the young men of the city failed to take advantage of this class.

The charge has been put at so low a figure that no young man ought to feel that he is hindered by the cost from taking his Matriculation. There will be four lessons each week and forty weeks in the term, making 160 lessons for $10.00. It will not matter where a young man stands now, provided he has passed his entrance Each will be given careful instruction in the subject he needs most.

The next meeting of the class will be held next Monday night at the Y. M. C. A., and if the required number is present that will be a regular class night.

Drop in and see the General Secretary of the Y. M. C. A. and have your name enrolled at once.

MUSIC AND DRAMA

The people of Peterborough have few opportunities offered to hear an artist such as will appear at the Grand next Tuesday night, in the person of Mr. Mark Hambourg. Mr. Hambourg made a through tour of Canada last year from the Atlantic to the Pacific, during which his work met with much favour, resulting in a demand for a return engagement, which opened in Halifax, Oct. 2nd, to a large and most representative audience, and the recital was reported the following morning as being a musical triumph for this great artist. The tour will extend again, to the Pacific Coast, in addition to which some twenty concerts will be given in Oregon and California. It is indeed seldom that Peterborough gets the opportunity to hear so great a master, and it is hoped the music lovers of the city and district will show their appreciation by giving Mr. Hambourg a good reception next Tuesday evening, when he will render a varied and most interesting programme at the Grand Opera House. Mrs. Hambourg, who is a daughter of Sir Muri Mackenzie, Private Secretary to the Lord Chancellor of England, is accompanying her husband, and renewing acquaintances which she made on her former tour.

and Fred Simpson in the first Examiner race and Robert Anderson of Norwood. Smith was entirely too speedy for the other pair and won as he pleased by a quarter of a mile. He took the lead at the start and after loafing a half a lap to size up his field, went away from the other pair and steadily increased his lead, finishing with a hundred yards sprint. McBurney and Anderson stayed together most of the distance, having a battle all to themselves. Anderson had the most left and took second place. The distance was a little over two miles.

ABOARD A LINER

New Governor-General Spent Night Technically "At Sea."

OFFICIALS GAIN ENTRANCE

Quebec, Oct. 13.—The Duke of Connaught is here.

Quietly, without firing of guns or blowing of whistles, the Empress of Ireland at six o'clock last night rounded the buoy in the channel and proceeded to dock at her wharf. It was a small crowd that waited to greet the boat which carried Canada's new Governor-General. The announcement which had been made in the afternoon papers, to the effect that the duke would not disembark until Friday morning, had kept the curious mob from gathering about the gates.

Those who did come were subjected to a careful scrutiny by police placed on the wharf for the purpose of keeping out only those who had business inside the enclosure.

At the foot of the gang-plank waited the small, silk-hatted, frock-coated group who were to be the first to greet H.R. H. on his arrival at Quebec. The group consisted of Thomas Mulvey, Under Secretary of State; Col. Sherwood, Dominion commissioner of police; Capt. Malcolm, Col. Sladen and the A.D.C. of the duke, who had come on ahead to prepare for his arrival. As soon as the way was cleared they went aboard. In the large saloon above, the Duke of Connaught, the Duchess of Connaught and the duke's staff were waiting.

As the visitors entered the duke greeted them with a hearty smile and a handshake all around. The meeting was most informal, and a stranger would never have suspected that the genial, white-moustached gentleman talking so affably was the duke of royal blood and Governor-General of Canada.

When Col. Sherwood was introduced to him as the Dominion commissioner of police, he at once was interested and asked the colonel many questions as to exactly what the position meant, and the general policing system of Canada.

Several messages were brought to him during the half hour following his arrival, and several were despatched to different parts of Canada, replying to the congratulations which he had received. Col. Lowther, military secretary to His Royal Highness, was a very busy man. He was not too busy, however, to give a short audience to the newspaper men who had come aboard.

"No," he said, when asked if the duke would say a word of greeting to the Canadian people, through the newspaper men present, "royalty never gives interviews."

He was quite willing, however, to talk about the trip across. "We had only one bad day," he said. "Otherwise the trip was delightful." The duke and duchess showed the keenest interest in everything on the boat. The duke examined the third-class section on Sunday and was given a rousing cheer by the passengers there, who had been notified of his coming. On Wednesday the duchess made a tour of the ship. They were both very affable and chatted freely with the passengers throughout the voyage.

"The duke received messages of congratulation from almost every ship that passed; I think there were 17 in all. Coming up the river he had a message from Lieutenant-Governor Gibson of Ontario, and Col. MacNaughton of Cobourg. Incidentally, I have just wired Col. MacNaughton that the duke bears with him the order of C.V.O. for him, in recognition of his services in connection with the trip of the artillery team to England recently."

The duke invited Sir Charles and Lady Fitzpatrick, Col. Sherwood, Col. Sladen and one or two others to dinner with him on board ship.

At 11 o'clock Premier Borden arrived in Quebec with the members of the Cabinet. They went to the Chateau Frontenac, where an impromptu reception was held in the lobby.

Everything is in readiness for the swearing in and reception yesterday. The city is in gala attire, the stores, the stations, the wharves, being covered with bunting. The City Hall has been especially decorated with colored lights, and altogether the ancient capital has an appearance worthy of the momentous occasion.

There was a well-defined rumor that Earl Grey had dined with the Duke of Connaught on board the Empress of Britain. The statement of the secretary was that, according to etiquette and custom, the two Governor-Generals are not supposed to be on colonial territory at the same time. This rule was not broken. It is claimed that until the Duke of Connaught leaves the steamer and puts foot on land, he is still theoretically at sea, and to avoid criticism, however, the visit was made as secret as possible.

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES.

After serving ten days less than a year, the Los Angeles grand jury which indicted John J. McNamara, his brother, James B., has been discharged.

Charles Wise, a young Englishman, was found guilty yesterday of burning the barns of William Wallace, Stoney Creek, Ont., and also of stealing a gold watch. Wise will likely be deported.

The official returns announced yesterday give Dr. Gauthier (Conservative), member-elect for the County of Gaspe, 574 majority.

A concern known as the Hamilton Steel Co., has secured options on $600,000 worth of New Westminster, B.C., water front for industrial purposes.

Mrs. Mary Frances Gurney, wife of Edward Guerney, of the Gurney Foundry Co., Toronto, was seriously injured in New York yesterday in a taxi-cab collision.

J. A. Ellis, city treasurer and president of the Conservative Association of Ottawa was last night selected to contest the riding of West Ottawa for the Legislature.

Roy Brintnell, whose motor car fatally injured Mrs. Elizabeth Salter of Oshawa in Toronto, was committed for trial to the criminal assizes from the Police Court yesterday.

Pearl Heustin, the 15-year-old daughter of William Heustin, living near St Eugene, Ont., was accidentally killed yesterday afternoon while leading a horse from a nearby pasture to her home.

Elections In New Brunswick?

Hon. J. K. Fleming, or Hon. W. C. H. Grimmer, will be his successor. It is also likely to be determined at once whether or not the new Premier will make an immediate appeal to the people.

The last election was held in 1908, when the Conservatives turned out the Liberal Administration, the results showing: Conservatives, 31; Liberals, 10; Independents, 5.

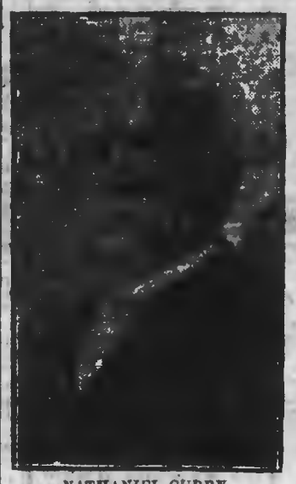
Toronto, Oct. 13.—After a three days' session of strenuous work, during which an amazing amount of important business was transacted, the 40th annual meeting of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association was brought to a close yesterday. Next year the C. M. A.'s annual meeting will be held in Halifax, N.S. The officers for 1911 are as follows:

President, N. Curry, Montreal; vice-president, R. S. Gourlay, Toronto;



NATHANIEL CURRY.

Ontario vice-president, R. McLaughlin, Oshawa; Manitoba vice-president, M. E. Christie, Winnipeg; British Columbia vice-president, Jas. Ramsay, Vancouver; Nova Scotia vice-president, J. P. Edwards, Londonderry; New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island vice-president, John Palmer, Fredericton; Alberta and Saskatchewan vice-president, W. H. Clarke, Edmonton; treasurer, George Booth, Toronto.

REPUBLIC PLANNED.

Revolution In China Is Just Beginning In Earnest.

Hankow, Oct. 13.—The revolution which has been hanging over China for months past, and of which the rising in the Province of Sze-Chuen was only a small part, has begun in earnest. It is a concerted movement to take the empire and declare a republic. The noted exiled revolutionist, Dr. Sun Yet Sen, leader of the anti-Manchu party, if the plans do not miscarry, is to be elected president.

The revolutionaries have captured Wu-Chang, the native section of Hankow and Han-Yang, all adjoining cities in Hu-Peh Province. Chang-Sha, capital of Hunan, is reported to have risen in revolt, and Nanking, capital of the Province of Kiang-Su, is on the verge of a rising, several public buildings having been destroyed.

Troops Are Sent.

Peking, Oct. 13.—An imperial edict issued yesterday ordered the immediate despatch of two divisions of troops to the disaffected provinces. At the same time orders have been issued for the assembling in the Yangtse-Kiang of a fleet of warships which are to unite with the land forces against the rebels. According to the official report at least ten thousand, and possibly fifteen thousand troops have mutinied in the Province of Hu-Peh alone. It is said that they captured thirty modern guns at Wu-Chang. There is an unconfirmed report that the revolutionists occupied Chang-Sha on Oct. 1.

Extraordinary precautions have been taken in Peking to prevent a rising, and large bodies of troops are guarding the palace.

Kidnapper Gets Life Sentence.

Chicago, Oct. 13.—Giuseppi Nicolasi and his brother, Carmello, were yesterday sentenced to life imprisonment after they had been found guilty by a jury of kidnapping five-year-old Angelo Marino on August 5. Mrs Colegaga Nicolasi, wife of Carmello, was sentenced to seven years in prison for complicity.

WAR TO CONTINUE

Italy Makes Extensive Preparations to Attack the Turkish Land Forces

MORE TROOPS DISEMBARK

Tripoli, Oct. 13.—Gen. Caneva, commander-in-chief of the Italian expedition, has decided to act quickly, and it is believed that the troops under him will march immediately against the positions occupied by the Turks. A reconnissance of the desert yesterday disclosed the central body of the Turkish troops with field guns not far from the city.

Nineteen more Italian transports, escorted by warships and carrying the second division of troops, arrived yesterday morning. The men were hastily landed. This division is 15,000 strong, and there are now 23,000 Italian soldiers on the coast of Tripoli for its defence.

Ian occupation joyfully, but some of the warships remain in the harbor in readiness for emergencies. Troops were landed yesterday also at Benghazi, Derna, Tobruk and Bomba.

Although the utmost precautions have been taken looking to the perfecting of sanitary arrangements, cholera has broken out, and it is reported that four deaths have occurred.

Gen. Caneva has addressed a proclamation to the inhabitants, assuring them that they have not been enslaved by Italy. On the contrary, they have been liberated from the yoke under which they have been laboring for years. They will be ruled by their own chiefs under the patronage of the King of Italy. The religious and civil laws will be respected and taxes will be reduced or abolished.

The proclamation concludes by announcing that Italy desires that Tripoli shall remain the land of Islam, under the protection of Italy.

A part of the force landed yesterday will be sent to occupy Benghasi and Derna, Bomba and Tobruk. Smaller garrisons will be established at Marsa, Susa, Tokra, Medina, Leida, Hissa, Mesurata and a few other points.

No Armistice.

Rome, via frontier, Oct. 13.—That an armistice has been arranged between Italy and Turkey, as reported from Berlin, is strenuously denied by the Italian Government.

A despatch from Trpioli to The Giornale d'Italia says that the Turkish Government, being unable to communicate directly with Munhir Pasha, commander of the former Turkish garrison at Tripoli, has telegraphed to the Turkish consuls at Tunis and Malta to instruct him to resist as long as possible.

Pelletier Unopposed.

Montreal, Oct. 13.—Hon. S. N. Parent, ex-chairman of the Transcontinental Railway Commission, who was here yesterday, stated that he was not going to run against Hon. L. P. Pelletier in Quebec County, and he was going to use whatever influence he had to prevent opposition to any of the new Ministers. This, of course, puts a quietus to the story that Sir Charles Fitzpatrick would resign and contest Quebec County with the Postmaster-General.

International Bank License.

Montreal, Oct. 13.—It now looks as if the International Bank of Canada would open its doors for business on Tuesday morning next. Rodolphe Forget, M.P., the president, stated last evening that it was expected that the long-delayed license would be granted on Monday. It is understood that Hon. W. S. Fielding has left a memorandum in the department giving the reasons for his persisting refusal in granting the license.

CHANGES HIS PLEA

Arthur Sheridan Gets Life Imprisonment for Deed

GUILTY OF MANSLAUGHTER

Barrie, Oct. 13.—Arthur Sheridan, who has been on trial for his life here for the stabbing of Ross Ford, near Orillia, last August, was yesterday sentenced to life imprisonment.

The jury after being out three hours and 20 minutes, returned and reported that they had been unable to reach a verdict.

Asked by the court if they were given a little more time to deliberate, did they think they would be able to reach a verdict, James Findlay, the foreman, said that there might be a possibility. His lordship then ordered refreshments served to the men in their rooms, and they were asked to retire again.

One hour later they came in and reported that they had agreed to disagree, 11 standing for a verdict of willful murder and one for manslaughter.

The court then informed the jury that counsel for the defence, with the consent of the crown, had agreed to withdraw the plea of not guilty to the charge of murder, and would plead guilty to manslaughter.

After complimenting the jury on the way they had handled the case, his lordship said he was sure they would be satisfied with the sentence he would impose and that the ends of justice would be just as well met.

He then sentenced Arthur Sheridan to imprisonment for the rest of his natural life.

The prisoner, while hearing the verdict, retained the composure which has characterized him throughout the trial. His broter, who was standing near, seemed to show disappointment at the change of plea.

Evidence given by Drs. Kelly and Carson, who made post-mortem examinations of the body of Ford, showed that there were three wounds, one on the lower part of the back, one on the shoulder and the fatal one in the chest. Dr. Carson said the bent blade of the knife could have been caused by the force used in inflicting the wound.

The prisoner took the stand in his own defence at the morning session and, while he owned to the stabbing, contended that it was in self-defence. His testimony was substantially the same as that brought out yesterday in the confession made to the constable who arrested him.

Robert Thorburn said that on the night of the dance Ford had a pair of steel knuckles and said he was going to the dance, and if anyone said anything to him he would split the devil's mouth open.

T. C. Robinette, K.C., counsel for defence, made an eloquent, thoughtful and spirited appeal to the jury. He dealt on the comparative natures of his client and the murdered man. His client was quiet and inoffensive. Ford pugnacious and boasting. Apparently Ford sought the quarrel and his client tried to avoid it. There was no motive apparent for such a crime admittedly no jealousy between the men, who were courting two sisters. It was the murdered man who called Sheridan out from the dance. Sheridan made no effort to conceal the knife, which was one he used in ordinary ways and there was no evidence of premeditation to murder anyone.

His lordship in instructing the jury took a very decisive stand favoring the crown's case. He read the prisoner's written statement and compared it with his cross-examination, picking out discrepancies.

Cardinal Gibbons' Jubilee.

Baltimore, Oct. 13.—Archbishops, bishops, priests and laymen of national prominence, who are members of the Catholic Church, will gather in Baltimore next Sunday to attend the elaborate religious celebration of the dual jubilee of Cardinal Gibbons, marking the 50th anniversary of his ordination to the priesthood and the 25th year of his cardinalate.

Mgr. Falconio, the papal delegate, will represent the Pope and bestow the pontiff's blessing.

Canada will be represented at the ceremonies by Archbishop Bruchesi, while the Archbishop of Mexico will come in person as the representative of his country and the other Latin American countries.

Many of the visiting churchmen will remain and participate in the first national congress of the Holy Name societies of the United States, Canada and Mexico, which will be held on Monday and Tuesday.

Big Fellow Meets Tragic Death.

Ottawa, Oct. 13.—John Phair, aged 46, an Ottawa bridge inspector, was instantly killed 150 miles below Quebec city. He was on what is known as a gasoline speeder, on a bridge, when it collided with a train. He was a man of exceptionally fine physique, being 6 feet 4 inches in height and weighing 275 pounds. He leaves a widow and several children here.

Klaus Larsen Recovered.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Oct. 13.—Capt. Klaus Larsen of Cleveland, who last year navigated the whirlpool rapids in a motor-boat, and came here two months ago to repeat the feat, was yesterday discharged from the General Hospital, where he has been confined with typhoid since coming here. He says he will make the trip next summer.

Oldest Oddfellow Dead.

St. Catharines, Oct. 13.—Samuel G. Dalson, for 41 years city assessor, passed away yesterday morning after a brief illness brought on by age. He had attained his 85th year. He was educated and spent his entire life in St. Catharines, figuring prominently in the construction of most of the large buildings, either as contractor or architect. He was a prominent member of the Masonic and Oddfellow orders, being at the time of his death the oldest Oddfellow in all Canada, having been initiated in Union Lodge in this city on January 12, 1850, and held membership continuously ever since. He served as grand secretary in 1859 and nine years as Ontario grand master.

The deceased built the public arches in the city used at the time of the visit of the late King Edward as Prince of Wales in 1861. He was also the builder of the court house, Masonic Temple, Oddfellows' building, four churches and six schools. He served in the council and was deputy reeve in the old days. Besides being assessor he was a member of the local Board of Health for years. When the Government expropriated Queen Victoria Park, Niagara Falls, some years ago, he acted as valuator.

Can't Find Murdered Man.

Ottawa, Oct. 13.—Felix Drouin, charged with the murder by shooting of an unknown man at his home in Pooonby, Que., was arrested yesterday and is being brought to Hull. The arrest was effected by Sheriff Wright of Hull and Detectives McCaskill and Brousseau of Montreal.

A strange point about the case is that the body of the supposed victim has not been found and is thought to have been hidden.

The shooting took place Monday night, and while Drouin maintains he only fired into the air, three witnesses were in obtaining the warrant that they saw the man fall, after which Drouin carried off the body. The place is isolated.

Scarcity of Laborers.

Montreal, Oct. 13.—A great scarcity of laborers is reported by George Barlow, city surveyor. He said yesterday morning that he could find employment for 300 or 400 more easily. "I wanted fifty and and got thirteen to-day. One of my foremen who wanted a gang, only secured one man, and he practically a cripple."

Mr. Barlow attributed the shortage of laborers to the great number of young men who have learned trades in the past few years. "We are paying twenty cents an hour, that is $2.00 per day for ten hours' work, and I consider it good pay for unskilled men."

The Season for Coughs and Colds
Is at hand and everybody is liable to catch them. Of course you may get some Blackberry Candy, a box of Cough Drops, have mother make some Pine Tree Spruce Tea with a little of Lydia Pinkham in it, rub on some Turpentine, take a dose of Kerosene; and if all this fails you may ask your neighbor what he uses, etc. These remedies may be all right to use at times and under certain conditions. But if they fail to give relief, why do you go on experimenting when you can get almost instant relief from

"The Gun Runner"

By ARTHUR STRINGER

"Yes, that makes us even," he admitted, suddenly remembering he had a witness to the strange business in hand. The intruder stepped back to the table again.

"Then we'll both sign this slip of paper, so we'll know where we stand," he suggested.

After Duffy had ponderously signed his name with a heavy, gold-banded fountain-pen, the operator took his place. The paper seemed nothing more than a receipt, yet something about its wording was repugnant to him. He did not take time to analyse his feeling; he was too oppressed by the thought of the woman and the near-by door. He ventured one half-hearted objection, however, as Duffy thrust the pen in his hand.

"I can't say I altogether like this," he complained.

"Why not?"

McKinnon forced a laugh.

"It sounds like an army commission."

"Where d'you want it changed?" Duffy demanded as he fell to pacing the cabin. His wandering threw McKinnon into a sudden panic.

"It's not the wording, it's the signing of a thing like that."

"Of course it is," the other agreed mild and indulging, as a doctor might be with a peevish and restless patient. "But weren't you saying you wanted to make this everyday work of yours a little more romantic?"

He had stopped in front of the closet door and was apparently studying the faded map of the Caribbean. The position was perilous.

"Where do I sign?" demanded McKinnon, bringing the other man back to his side at the table.

The ink was scarcely dry on the paper before a change crept into Duffy's manner. He seemed more sure of himself, more conscious of mastery over an ally, who, if a reluctant one, was still an ally.

He folded the receipt and dropped it into his leather wallet. Then he placed the wallet in his breast pocket; his movements were always ponderous and deliberate.

"Remember, this means a devil of a lot to me. I'll have to depend on you to do the right thing when the time comes."

"It's not that bad, is it?" the operator asked, still with an effort at humour.

"It may be as bad as either of us could imagine," Duffy retorted.

"If that's the way it's shaping I'd better draw out of it."

McKinnon seemed more and more resentful of the other's attitude of masterfulness.

Duffy slowly tapped the pocket which held his wallet.

"It's too late for you to draw out of it," he declared with heat. Then his mounting tinge of anger went suddenly out of his face.

"Pshaw! what're we squabbling about, anyway?" he cried. "We're both making easy money out of this, and that's the end of it. We'll have time to talk later on. And I guess you're busy to-night."

There was a veiled tone of mockery in his voice that seemed to leave McKinnon a little troubled. He followed his visitor to the stateroom door in silence.

"We'll pull together," assuaged Duffy largely, suavely, as he stepped out on the deck. "We've got to, eh?" He laughed a little as he said "Good-night."

"Good-night," answered the operator.

The stateroom door had scarcely closed before the woman had pushed aside the model-case and was out of her hiding-place. Her face had lost its last vestige of colour.

"Oh!" she cried pantingly, and nothing more.

"Hush!" said the alarmed operator, listening at the closed door.

She stood there, breathing hard, with her hand on her breast. Her attitude reminded him of the night before, when she had so suddenly and disturbingly stepped back into his cabin.

"What is it?"

"That man!" the woman exclaimed. She looked older now under the trying white light of the electrics. Her aura of belated youth had in some way fallen away from her. "Madre de Dios! Do you know who that man is?"

"He's an agent named Duffy," explained McKinnon.

"Duffy-"

"Yes—he is acting for the information bureau of the Consolidated Fruit Concern."

He was about to say more, but on second thoughts he kept silent.

"Duffy!" once more cried the woman in derision, "Duffy!"

Then she drew herself up and gazed at her companion with what seemed a look of mingled wonder and contempt wrinkling her low, white brow.

"And you two are working together?" she murmured.

"Yes, in a way."

"But how?" she demanded. "How are you acting with him?"

Her alarm did not seem to disconcert him.

"It's not exactly a partnership. He's simply shadowing a man on this boat. I've promised to help him out when the time comes."

"How help him out?"

"Only in a trivial way."

"But how?"

"If you must know, by holding back certain despatches."

"But whose despatches?" still demanded the woman.

"Despatches for the man he's shadowing, of course."

"But still you don't tell me who this man is!" cried the impatient woman. McKinnon obviously found it hard to fathom the source of her anxieties.

"I mean this man called Ganley," he explained, concealing his growing impatience.

"Ganley!" echoed the woman.

"Yes, Ganley," retorted the other. He noticed that her breath was coming in short gasps by this time and that her face was as white as his cabin walls.

"Ganley!" she cried. "Why, the man who went out of this cabin five minutes ago is Ganley!"

CHAPTER VIII.
THE PAWN AND THE BOARD

There was a silence of several seconds.

"That man was Ganley?" foolishly repeated the operator. His eyes, as he peered back at the woman, were almost vacuous. He studied her face, perplexed and uncertain, like a traveller studying a road-map. He had expected surprises, he had prepared himself for emergencies; but this, apparently, was more than he had counted on.

The frightened-eyed woman still confronted him, her face seeming one of pity touched with fear. When she next moved, her gesture was almost that of a person wringing their hands.

"And you have promised to act with this man?" she little more than whispered.

"But he came to me as a man named Duffy, the man's who's got to turn Ganley over to the authorities at Puerto Locombia."

Still again the woman's wide and pitying eyes rested on his face.

"They are making a tool of you," was all she said.

"Of me?"

"Of you! They are deceiving you—they mean to make use of you."

"But how?"

The woman remained silent. McKinnon stood before her, lost in a moment of troubled thought, puzzled as to how much he should say and how much it would be best to leave unsaid.

"But who are you?" he suddenly demanded, noting her quick glance down at her little jewelled watch. He felt, as he stood there compelling herself to calmness, that there was something epochal in the moment, that in some way the uncomprehended was about to reveal itself.

He turned slowly about and relocked the cabin door. Then he sat down opposite the broken steamer-chair in which she was already seated.

"You want to know who that man is?" she said at last, perplexed a little by his sudden decisiveness, disturbed by the hardening of his face.

"I want to know who you are."

"That will come later," she explained.

McKinnon studied her face, line by line, from the pale ivory of her dark-browed forehead to the tender curve of her almost statue-like chin, for the shadowy and thick-planted lashes did not lift from her cheek until she began to speak again.

"You want me to explain everything?" she asked.

"Everything!"

"The man who was in this room is Kaiser Ganley—King-maker Ganley they call him everywhere south of Guatemala. His business is to make revolutions. He has agents in almost every one of the Central American republics, in New York, in Cuba, in New Orleans—everywhere. When he sees signs of unrest he sends a man to strike a bargain with the enemies of the government. He waits like a buzzard on a housetop until his meal is ready. Then he is given money, and he brings so many men and so many carbines, and so many mules and machine guns. Sometimes it's for the patriots, sometimes it's for railway charters or for mine rights. Sometimes it's for rubber and coffee concessions. A more conciliatory man must be made dictator, or a more dependable friend must be set up as president. That's the way he won the Caqueta Asphalt concession: that's why he never dares land in Brazil or be seen in Venezuela again."

She paused for a moment. Then she added:

"And now he has the rebellion in Locombia. The Locombian president has been called the 'Friend of Foreigners'; he has been good to the Americanos. He is modern and progressive; he is—"

"Are you a Locombian?"

"I am not a Locombian," answered the woman, after the slightest pause, "but I have my interests in that country. Oh, believe me, I know this man to be its enemy. He is fighting for the downfall of its government. His plan is made. He is only waiting for the end. Now, to-night, while we sit here, his men—deluded peons and beachcombers and paid mercenaries—are drawing up closer and closer on Guariqui. They are to wait there: they are to be moved, like wooden pawns on a chessboard, when he orders it, and in the manner he orders."

"Can't you tell me how or when? Can't you be more specific?"

"On the thirteenth of the month a revolutionist, wearing the uniform of the government, is to assault an American citizen in the Prado of Puerto Locombia. A Mobile oreboat is to take the assaulter on board openly. He is to be dragged ashore again by government officers. Roof-tiles are to be flung down on these officers as they pass through the town. Arrests, of course, will follow. That will arouse the people—they are so foolish in their hate for the Americanos! And while this is going on, many miles up the coast machine guns will be landed, and tubs of cartridges, and two thousand rifles."

"But how do you know all this?"

"It became my duty to know it."

"But why?"

"Because my brother is Arturo Boynton, the Locombian Minister of War," she answered after a moment's silence.

McKinnon gazed at her in a mingling of wonder and perplexity.

"Is he a Locombian?"

"No."

"Then why the Arturo?"

"That was a concession to local prejudices," she answered, after still another moment's pause.

"But why such concessions? You see, you'll have to be perfectly frank with me."

She smiled a little. It was not a smile of condescension, for her earnest eyes were almost deprecative as she looked at him.

"That will mean a sad lot of family history," she said with a little shrug as exotic, almost, as the Southern inflection of her voice.

He laughed a little, too, for all the anxiety that was weighing on him.

"But you see we have to understand each other's position in this."

"My brother went to Guariqui seven years ago," she said, quite sober by this time. "He was compelled to go there to look after my father's nitrate claims."

"Your father, then, was an American?" interrupted McKinnon. He felt glad, in some vague way, as he saw her headshake of assent.

"He was an American soldier," she said, and McKinnon noticed the almost phosphorescent kindling of her eyes as she uttered the words.

"Yes," he responded encouragingly.

"We are—or, rather, we used to be the New Orleans Boyntons," she answered. "But father had interests in Argentina, cattle lands and things, and property in Belgrano, where the English-speaking colony is, just outside Buenos Ayres. So for nine years Buenos Ayres was our home—if you could say we ever had a home. But as I wanted to tell you, my brother Arturo was a mining engineer. I think, too, he had a good deal of father's spirit of adventure. He saw great chances in Locombia, but what was more important, he found that the altitude of Guariqui agreed with him. So he stayed on and on, and kept working harder and harder and getting newer interests, until finally he undertook to work the abandoned government mines with Doctor Duran. They were copper mines."

"Do you mean Duran the president?"

"Yes; but that was before he had been made president. Indeed, when Duran first actively entered Locombian politics he persuaded my brother to join him. I was at school then, in France—but I knew that when their party came into power my brother found himself in Duran's cabinet, as minister of war."

"And you are going down there to face all this?" McKinnon asked, with a vaguely comprehensive wave of the arm.

The woman said "Yes." She looked, for all her inalienable aura of vitality, very slender, and unsuited to the ways of war, above all things, to the ways of Latin-American guerilla war.

"But that seems as brutal, as unthinkable, as a girl going into a ring with two prize-fighters," he tried to explain to her.

"Yes, I know; but I'm not going into the ring," she answered. "All I can do is hover about the outside edges of it, and do what I can when I know there is underhand work, when there is foul play like this going on."

"Foul play like what?"

"Like this!" she averred, tapping the deck with her shoe-heel.

"Do you mean the Laminian? Or do you mean certain persons who are in the Laminian?"

"Both," she retorted.

"Then that brings us to the question of just why you are going back to Locombia in such a way and at such a time," McKinnon patiently insisted.

"But Guariqui is my home—it is the only home I have now." She noticed the fleeting look of concern, that amounted to anxiety, overspreading his face, and she hastened to add, with her slow and almost mournful smile: "You know, they often speak of it as the Paris of America! We don't actually tattoo each other down there! And there's something appealing in the life, when you've got used to it—the stir and colour and romance and movement of it all."

"But you see you haven't yet quite explained why you are going back to Locombia."

Her deep and troubled eyes seemed to be weighing him; she seemed to be pondering his possible weakness and strength.

"How can I explain to you, when you're a paid agent of Ganley's?"

"Don't be too sure of that!" McKinnon ejaculated, with more feeling apparently, than the woman had expected.

"You mean you may not work with him?"

"If you like to take it that way."

"But he has won you over to his side—he has captured you against your will."

"I don't quite understand," persisted the operator.

"No; but Ganley does. That's why he has bought you over, and led you into his power in this way." She was speaking more rapidly now; a brightened colour had come into her cheeks.

"But how am I in his power?" McKinnon asked.

"What was the paper you signed? What have you promised? What was the money paid over to you for?"

"To hold back certain messages."

"Yes, to hold back messages. And why do that?"

"So that this man Ganley—the man he calls Ganley—can be held at Puerto Locombia."

"You mean the other man, the man in the cabin? Then you don't believe what I have said about the real Ganley?"

"I don't know what to believe," the non-committal McKinnon complained, studying the woman's face. The only conclusion he came to was that it was a disturbingly beautiful one.

She was silent for a moment, apparently deep in thought.

"I don't ask you to believe me now—it's not fair. But do you realize where you stand?"

The solemnity of her manner, more than her words, prompted McKinnon to ask: "Where do you think I stand?"

"Before danger you scarcely dream of," answered the young woman, returning his gaze. "It's not so much that you have formed an alliance with a criminal, an outlaw, who would have to face a fusilado the moment he was caught in Guariqui. But it's the fact that he's as treacherous with his friends as with his foes. You have declared yourself his partner. He will hold you to it. He will use this paper you signed as a proof that you accepted hush-money, if it suits his purpose to do so. He will claim you agreed to work with him. He will hold this over you and force you to act for him."

"But why should I stand coercion like that?" asked the undisturbed McKinnon.

"What would you do? You can't go to your captain; nor to your company. It's too late for that. You've cut yourself off from them. But that isn't the real danger. The real danger is that Ganley's the actual head of the revolutionary Junta, and that he can now show that you, too, are one of them!"

"That I'm one of them?" almost laughed the other.

"He holds a document which practically brands you as a Locombian revolutionist. We are being carried to a country where things move strangely and quickly. If Duran has the upper hand when we reach Puerto Locombia, you dare not make one move against this man Ganley."

"I dare not, you say."

"If you do, he will have you handed over to Duran's officers as an enemy of the government—and he will have his document to prove it. If Duran has been deposed, then Ganley is the open and undisputed master, and what he orders you will have to carry out."

"But I'm not going down there to be that government's catspaw!"

"How will you escape it?"

"Well, one way would be to call Ganley up here and get that paper back."

Alicia Boynton laughed quickly and quietly, with an upthrust of her shoulders.

Sciatica AND Lumbago

Suffered for Twenty-five Years and Could Get No Relief

Now Tells of the Wonderful Results Obtained by the Use of

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

Sciatica, neuralgia and sciatic rheumatism are the result of a run-down nervous system. For this reason all treatments must necessarily fail which do not build up the nervous system.

Mr. Collins suffered for twenty-five years and never was able to obtain satisfactory treatment until he began the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and Kidney-Liver Pills. While the Nerve Food forms new blood and restores the exhausted nervous system, the Kidney-Liver Pills invigorate the action of kidneys, liver and bowels.

Mr. W. T. Collins, Morpeth, Ont., writes: "It affords me pleasure to be able to speak favourably of two of Dr. Chase's medicines—the Nerve Food and Kidney-Liver Pills. I had been a sufferer for twenty-five years from sciatica, lumbago and neuralgia and tried almost all the medicines I could hear of, without one particle of benefit, until I commenced to use Dr. Chase's. I noticed an improvement before I had used two boxes, and the benefits obtained by continued use have been wonderful. I have so much confidence in these two medicines that I have recommended them to dozens of my friends, and I have yet to hear of a single case in which they failed to give satisfaction."

Dr. Chase's medicines are for sale by all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

SEA CAPTAIN HAD INDIGESTION.

Calls Morrisey's No. 11 Tablets Magic Remedy.

FORBES POINT, N. S., July 5, 1910.
"Previous to taking your No. 11 Dyspepsia Tablets I had been undergoing treatment with my family physician for three months, and at an expense of about $100. I was suffering so badly that I could not sleep. Fortunately for me a friend recommended your No. 11 Dyspepsia Tablets. I tried them, and they acted like magic. After the first dose I began to feel better, and that very night I slept soundly, and it was the first time for weeks that I was able to sleep. I used altogether 3 boxes of the remedy, and am entirely cured. Needless to say, I think No. 11 Dyspepsia Tablets are great, and anyone suffering from Dyspepsia or Indigestion should try these Tablets by all means, as I consider them a magic remedy.

Capt. Norman Davine.

The above prescription is not a "Cure-All" or so-called patent medicine. Dr. Morrisey prescribed it for 44 years, and it cured thousands after other doctors failed.

Boy Scouts Enjoying a Melon Feast in Camp.

© 1911, by American Press Association.

Reports to national headquarters show that thousands of the Boy Scouts of America now are in camp in various parts of the country. The encampments vary from a troop of twenty-four to a thousand boys. The leaders of the Boy Scouts of America appreciate the danger of large encampments and for that reason announced some months ago that they would have no national encampment. They pointed out that it is much wiser for the boys to get their first experience in camping in small groups. They also have sent out bulletins to the scout masters of the extreme necessity of using all sanitary precautions in camping and warning the scout masters not thoroughly versed in methods of having camps sanitary against taking the boys into camps of more than two or three days. The illustration shows a couple of New York boy scouts enjoying a feast of watermelon beside their tent.

Magnetic Currents.

Procure a gold ring, the more massive the better, and attach it to a silk thread about a dozen inches long. Fasten the other end of the thread around the nail joint of the forefinger of the right hand. Rest your elbow on the table to steady your hand and hold the thread in such a position as to allow the ring to hang about half an inch above the surface of the table. Hold your finger out straight and throw back your thumb as far as possible. So long as there is nothing on the table the ring will remain stationary.

Place some silver coin immediately below it, when the ring will begin to oscillate back and forth, to and from you. If you bring your thumb in contact with your forefinger the oscillations will become transverse to their former swing. This may also be effected by allowing some one to take hold of your disengaged hand. These effects are produced by the animal magnetic currents given forth by the hands of the experimenters.

Sewing by System.

A business girl claims to have solved the sewing question for business women by a little plan of her own. Everybody knows how many times one might put in fifteen or twenty minutes, or even half an hour, sewing, if only the work were "handy." But the time would be largely spent getting things together, so no effort is made.

This girl condenses her sewing room into two pasteboard boxes. One contains materials and patterns and a smaller box holding thread, needle-case, scissors, thimble, etc. A garment is cut out and laid in box No. 2, with the trimmings, etc., to be used in making it up. It is but a moment's work to get out the part of the garment on which one is working; all the implements are at hand, and it is surprising how much headway can be made in a few spare moments.

THE STANDARD OIL'S GIGANTIC SPIDER-WEB OF PIPES

Group of Oil Wells Near Oil City, Pa.

TRANSPORTING 70,000,000 Barrels of Crude Petroleum a Year, Constructed at a Cost of $61,000,000, and Spanning the Furthest Reaches of the United States, This 55,000 Mile System Spells the Story of the Company's Supremacy.

FIFTY-FIVE thousand miles of steel and wrought iron pipes, covering the whole eastern half of the United States like a net and stretching for hundreds of miles inland from the Gulf of Mexico and the Pacific Ocean; conduits that stretch in an unbroken line from Oklahoma to Long Island and from the Great Lakes to Tennessee; pumping stations at every sixty or seventy miles along the entire route of this mase of tubes; a private telegraph system that touches every joint and corner of the great web; huge tanks and reservoirs with a storage capacity of 85,000,000 barrels—that is the outline, in the barest skeleton form, of the great pipe line system whereby 70,000,000 barrels of crude petroleum are transported [illegible] to the twenty-one refineries of the Standard Oil Company.

FLOWING steadily, day and night, week in and week out, a stream of oil, the combined volume of which would equal that of a good sized river, is constantly being pumped in every direction across the continent of America. But so silently and quietly is this enormous traffic conducted, so obscure are the little towns that form the way stations on this great underground transportation line, so unostentatious are the preparations for the building of a new pipe line, that few apart from those directly engaged in the oil business have the slightest conception of the magnitude of this enormous system, built up with forty-five years of far sighted, painstaking business instinct and the expenditure of more than $61,000,000.

Yet this pipe line system is the very heart and centre of the whole Standard Oil monopoly—the most complete monopoly in American business history. Upon these arteries of traffic, and upon these alone, its enormous trade has been built up. Covering great sections of the United States so completely that one cannot move a hundred miles in any direction in New Jersey, Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and sections of some other States without crossing a pipe line, the map of this great system might well be likened, by those who rail at monopolies, to the web of some huge spider, seeking to devour all who fall into its entangling threads. But to the oil producer it is more like the silken meshed scarf of a good fairy, converting dross into gold. And to any one who has a taste for the marvellous and the stupendous the story of the Standard Oil pipe lines is a wonder book, full of surprising and gigantic revelations.

Of all the problems ever propounded to puzzle the human brain the most difficult is that which the United States Supreme Court set before the Standard Oil Company—the problem of how to separate this great pipe line system into its component parts and apportion them among the thirty-three subsidiary companies of the great trust, without impairing the efficiency of the pipe line service or increasing the cost of transporting crude oil to the refineries. That is what the court directed to be done before the end of November, 1911.

Contrary to the prevailing impression among the uninformed, the Standard Oil Company is not, and never has been, an important producer of crude oil. Its business is primarily refining oil, and, secondarily, transporting oil to the refineries. Though held by the laws of many States to be a common carrier, the Standard carries little oil but its own in its great pipe line system, yet it owns so few oil wells that it produces less than twelve per cent of the total annual production of about 150,000,000 barrels that are drawn from the ground in the United States.

But the Standard Oil Company stands ready to buy every drop of oil produced at the wells for cash, and so great are its purchases that it sometimes has as much as $100,000,000 invested, in actual cash, in crude oil stored in tanks and reservoirs, awaiting the time when it can be carried through the pipe line to the refineries. In 1909 it thus held $5,000,000 barrels more than its total refining capacity, and still was prepared to pay cash on the nail for every drop of oil offered to it. And it is because the Standard is a cash customer and has the facilities for handling all the oil that may be offered to it that it has built up its business to the point of practical monopoly and has paid thirty per cent and more dividends on its stock for years.

Location of Refineries.

With nearly ninety per cent of the oil produced in the United States absolutely independent of the Standard Oil Company, independent refiners have found competition impossible, because there has been no way of getting the crude oil to their refineries as cheaply and as quickly as the Standard could carry it. Only a few hundred miles of independent pipe lines exist in the whole country. By controlling the means of transportation, then, the Standard has gained control of the entire industry.

Tanks in Which Oil and Water Are Separated, Water Flowing from the Bottom, Oil from the Top.

The Standard Oil Company's twenty-one refineries are situated at strategic points to enable the refined product and the byproducts to reach the consumer by the easiest and cheapest routes. Seven of them are on the Atlantic seaboard—one at Baltimore, one at Philadelphia and five grouped about New York Harbor, at Brooklyn, Long Island City, Hunter's Point and, largest of all, at Bayonne. From these the enormous export trade in petroleum products is supplied and the Eastern markets. The huge refinery at Whiting, Ind., on Lake Michigan, gives access by water to all lake ports and by direct rail communication with the whole Middle West and South. Refineries at Sugar Creek, near Kansas City; at Neodesha, Kan.; at Port Richmond, on San Francisco Bay, and at Corsicana, Texas, serve huge stretches of thickly settled territory, while several others at interior points combine with these to reduce the rail haul of the finished products to the minimum.

The fields in which oil is produced in commercial quantities are six in number. Oldest of all is the Appalachian field, centring in Western Pennsylvania, and covering some fifty thousand square miles of oil producing territory stretching along the Appalachian mountain system from Southern New York to Tennessee. Then there are the Ohio-Indiana field, the Illinois field, the mid-continent field, which includes parts of Kansas, Oklahoma and Missouri; the Texas field and the California field.

To get the crude oil from the hundreds of thousands of wells in these fields—there are 150,000 wells in the Appalachian field alone—to the sea coast and lake shore refineries by the cheapest possible method is the object of the great pipe line system. And so completely has this system been organized, so rapidly has it been extended as new oil discoveries have been made, that to-day every corner of every one of these fields is directly connected with not only one but many Standard refineries. Moreover, with the exception of the Texas and California fields, which are isolated by thousands of miles from the rest of the territory, every part of every field is connected with practically all of the refineries of the system, and oil pumped from the ground in Oklahoma not only can be, but actually is, transported to Long Island before it is refined.

The only part of the oil business which is at all speculative is the first part—the prospecting and the drilling of wells—and with this phase of the business the Standard has practically nothing to do. In the field in which it owns a larger proportion of the wells than anywhere else—the Illinois field—it owns but a third of the wells and produces less than a fifth of the oil.

But the minute a well begins to flow a Standard pipe line is run to it and the Standard is ready to buy the oil, be the flow great or little, be the well a thousand barrel "gusher" or a ten barrel "pumper." By far the larger proportion of the pipe lines—more than forty-five thousand miles out of the total of about fifty five thousand—are "gathering" lines, connecting individual wells or groups of wells with central points in the fields, where storage tanks and reservoirs hold the oil until it is pumped into the ten thousand miles of trunk lines.

Let John Smith "strike oil" on his farm, and if it is within reaching distance of an oil field already known he will see the employes of the Standard running a pipe line to his tank or reservoir within a day or two. If the well is a "gusher" the pipes will be larger and they will be laid faster, for the Standard hates to see oil run to waste—waste has no place in the economy of the great company, and the producer may not be able to provide tanks or earthwork reservoirs fast enough to hold all the oil the well brings up. And if it is a real "strike"—the discovery of oil in a place where oil was unknown before, as in the new Illinois field—besides the two inch "gathering" lines, laid on the surface of the ground, the Standard will run its trunk lines—huge tubes running to as much as twelve inches in diameter—to the new field, and hurry to the spot carload after carload of pipe for "gatherers" to new wells and materials for the scores and hundreds of tanks and pumps that will be required to handle the output of the wells which are sure to follow the first one.

The minute the valves are opened that let the oil out of the producer's tank or reservoir into the Standard's pipe lines the oil becomes the Standard's property and the Standard becomes the producer's debtor. The oil has first been tested as to quality by the company's own gauger. On his signal the valves are opened and the oil begins to flow seaward—perhaps from far off Oklahoma. The next day the gauger returns and computes from the depth of oil remaining in the producer's tank the total that has been drawn off. This amount he enters on his "run ticket," and at night the figures from every "run ticket" for every producing well in the country are telegraphed over the company's private telegraph system that follows the pipe lines to the central office of the company for that particular field.

Payments to Producers.

Here each producer is credited with the amount of oil he has supplied. If the producer is a lessee, operating the well on a royalty to the owner of the land, the company figures up the amount due to the lessor as well as to the producer. At any time within two months the seller of the oil may call for his money, in cash, at the price of oil prevailing on the day when he calls for it, and he always gets a check within twenty-four hours. If he does not call for his money within two months the Standard Oil sends him a check on the first day of the third month at the rate prevailing on that day. It may be many months, even a year or more, before that particular run of oil is sent through to a refinery, and millions and tens of millions of dollars are thus tied up, invested in crude oil for future use—but the seller gets cash.

From its own storage tanks and reservoirs the Standard pumps the oil as needed into the main trunk lines that lead to the refineries. The "gathering lines" operate largely by gravity, but the trunk lines, from four to twelve inches in diameter and buried underground for the most part, require pumping stations every thirty to seventy miles to accelerate the flow of the heavy oil. These trunk lines are generally straight lines—air lines—as direct as if laid out with a ruler. Taking no account of rivers, hills or even mountain ranges, they travel by the most direct routes to their destinations.

Often they are laid along the rights of way of railroads. Paralleling each trunk line at intervals are other pipes, connected with the main line, called "loops," for equalizing the pressure, and at each pumping station the oil passes through large tanks. So self-contained is the entire mechanism of the Standard Oil Company that it even manufactures the great pumps for propelling the oil through the pipe lines at its own factory at Oil City, Pa., where nearly six hundred skilled mechanics are employed in its great shops.

Some of the pipe line systems are organized as separate corporations; some are merely operated under the names of subsidiary refining and distributing companies. Most important of all of the pipe line companies is the National Transit Company, whose lines are those that reach the Atlantic seaboard. In the mid-continent field the pipe lines are operated by the Prairie Oil and Gas Company, a subsidiary of the Standard. In the Ohio-Indiana field the Buckeye Pipe Line Company is the principal transportation corporation.

To describe in detail the routes of these trunk lines would take several newspaper pages. It is of interest, however, to make a quick survey of the principal lines connecting the larger fields with the main refineries.

Starting at Tulsa, Okla., a trunk line runs to Caney, Kan., with branches to Cleveland and Chelsea, Okla., thence it runs to Independence, Kan., and to the refinery at Neodesha, with branches to Peru, Coffeyville and Cherryville, all Kansas towns. Continuing, the main line runs to Humboldt, Paola and Redel, Kan., where it crosses the Missouri State line; thence to Independence, Mo., with a branch to the Sugar Creek refinery, and it crosses the Missouri River at Independence. Through Carrollton, Marceline, La Plata, Adrian it reaches the Mississippi River at Fort Madison, Mo., and crosses it to Illinois. Thence the trunk line runs to Galesburg, Wilbern and Kernan, Ill., and to Griffith, Ind., near Chicago, whence a branch runs to the great refinery at Whiting. From Griffith the trunk line continues to Kankakee, Laketon and Preble, Ind., where it is joined by another trunk line that runs from Casey, Ill., through Catlin, Ind.; Jamestown, Elmwood and Montpelier. Another trunk line also joins the main line at Preble, coming from Broad Ripple, Ind., immediately north of Indianapolis, and at Montpelier the Casey line is joined by another trunk line from the south field of Indiana.

Trunk Lines Like a Fish Net.

Continuing east from Preble, the main line runs to Lima, Ohio, where a branch joins it from St. Mary's, Okla. It runs up to Findlay and Van Wert, Ohio, where it takes in a branch from Haskins and sends one up to Toledo. Then, turning east, the main line runs through Green Spring and Wakeman to Berea, where a branch goes to the great Cleveland refinery, which is also connected with the main trunk line by another branch from Mantua. The main line runs straight from Berea to Mantua, then down to Warren, Ohio, and to Bear Creek, Pa., with a branch to the refinery at Franklin, Pa.

At Bear Creek several other pipe lines connect with the main trunk. Indeed, trunk lines are so thick in every direction from this point that a map of them looks almost like a fish net. One line runs from Bear Creek to the Titusville (Pa.) refinery. Most important of the new lines joining the main trunk here is the one that starts at Olympus, Tenn. and runs up through Kentucky and West Virginia with connections from the Eastern Ohio field. This line carries a branch to the Pittsburg refinery and from it branches off the line that runs through Morgantown, W. Va., and eastward through Southern Pennsylvania to Millway, Pa., whence branches diverge to Baltimore and Philadelphia refineries and by way of Centerbridge, Pa., to Bayonne, N. J. Another branch runs across Central Pennsylvania to the tanks at Marcus Hook, on the Delaware River. Neither of these, however, is the main route to the Atlantic seaboard.

The main trunk lines, the New York transit line, runs through Crown and Kane, Pa., to Olean, N. Y., where a large refinery is situated. From Olean branches run to the Buffalo refinery and to Clearfield, Pa., which has its own line to Millway. The main line runs along the southern boundary of New York, through Wellsville, Cameron Mills and Catskill, to Osborne Hollow, where it crosses the Delaware River, which it follows down through Hancock, Cochecton and Swartwout to Newfoundland, N. J., thence to Saddle Rock. Here it divides and one branch passes under the Hudson River, across Manhattan Island, through Central Park and to the refinery at Hunter's Point, Long Island City, while the main branch runs down just back of the Bergen hills to the largest of all the company's refineries at Bayonne.

Oil from a quarter of a million wells, some of them more than fifteen hundred miles from the sea, mingles in the trunk line pipes and flows to Bayonne in a steady stream, night and day, week in and week out, the year around—some of it from Oklahoma, some from Kansas, some from Tennessee and some from all of the interlying States.

The lesser pipe line systems—that connecting the Batson, Sour Lake and Spindle Top fields of Texas with the Standard's terminal at Sabine, on the Gulf, and the Pacific coast lines, connecting the Kern River and Coalinga fields with Port Richmond, and the short lines from the Santa Maria field to Port Hereford and from the Newhall field to Ventura—are simple and as yet not at all picturesque. But, like the great network that stretches from the mid-continent field to the Atlantic, they serve the same purpose, of the speediest and cheapest means of transporting the crude oil to points where it can be converted into kerosene, naphtha, gas oil, fuel oil, paraffine oil, spindle oil, wool stocks, cylinder oil, waxes, candles, greases, coke, pitch, road oils, asphalt and paving residuum, roofers' wax, soap stocks, cordage oils, acid oils, turpentine substitutes, engine distillates, petrolatum, vaseline, gasolene and benzine, which is about all the uses the Standard Oil Company has been able to put the crude product to thus far.

WANTED, A MAN

And He Was There When He Was Most Needed.

By MARTHA M'C. WILLIAMS.

Orestes Magin stood twirling his red mustache, his eyes downcast, his heart beating like a trip hammer. Well might it beat fast! He had just asked Squire Malcom for his daughter. The squire was a choleric person at the best of times, but this morning his humor was fiendish. Orestes, of course, did not know that.

There was a reason for the mood, slight, to be sure, but any reason was sufficient when the time came for one of the old gentleman's rages. He was nearly as proud of his melon patch as of his daughter and felt it a personal insult if anybody else presumed to have melons earlier. Yet here were those miserable Dawsons, outlanders, city bred at that, sending him a melon fully ripe with their compliments and all because he had laughed at Dawson and his gardener when they had talked to him about a certain extra early kind.

Now, it would be quite ten days before he could return the sending.

"Want my girl, eh? Isn't there something else? Don't be mealy mouthed. Ask for my eyeteeth or the farm and all the money I've got in bank!" he roared at poor Orestes, who stood nervously shifting his feet. "By George, sir, I'm amazed at your moderation! Of course I've raised Edith just a-purpose to see her throw herself away. Don't interrupt me, sir! I know all you're going to say—you love her and don't care a bit that she'll have more money than any other girl around. I've heard that from better men than you are. I tell you, as I've told them, she's not for any such cattle. I want her myself yet awhile. When I give her up it's going to be to a man. Be off with you now, sir, and don't let me see you here again—not unless you're willing to swear there shall be no more of this nonsense."

"I'm going," Orestes said hoarsely, turning half about. "But what you call 'this nonsense' is going to last—with me and with Edith, too, I believe. We'll wait a year to let you come to a better temper. But I'm going to see her across your gate every little while. I won't ever set foot on your land again, though, unless you ask it."

"Do you think I'll have such scandalous behavior?" the squire shouted. A hand fell over his lips. Edith had crept up behind him.

"Unless you will have it I shall go with Restes right straight off," she said, with a set of the mouth and a lowering of the brow that made of her her father's daughter. In suffocating anger that forbade speech the squire waved the pair away. Edith would not go. She held out her hand to Orestes, saying: "I'll be at the gate tonight. We'll settle things there." Then as the young fellow strode off she fetched cool water to bathe the squire's head, fanned him and made him sit under the grapevines, saying no word to him until he had come to a semblance of reason. When she saw his head droop thoughtfully and his cane make faint plunges into the turf she whispered: "Don't fret yourself sick, father. You know you can't really say anything against Restes. He's as good as he's ugly."

"He's a mollycoddle, brought up at his granny's apron strings," the squire interrupted.

"Then I like mollycoddles and I've been brought up to know men," she said, running away to see about dinner. The squire looked after her with a scowl that softened at last to a sigh. He thought the world of her. Love was indeed at the bottom of his scorn for poor Orestes.

Fate had hard lines ahead of the squire. Edith went duly to the gate every Wednesday evening at sundown and spent an hour there in earnest talk with her sweetheart. Even the squire could not bring himself to ignore Orestes completely when they met, but he never went beyond the gruff nod all the three Sundays before he was laid by the heels. Obstinacy of man and beast brought that about. Blicky, the buggy mare, took occasion to balk just at the top of the lane hill, and, instead of humoring her by walking up what remained of the rise, her master sat tight and tried to make her pull him. The result was much backing, kicking and at last an upset vehicle and a broken leg for the squire with the prospect of spending a month at least flat on his back.

He roared and raged if by any chance Edith was out of his sight. For two weeks she did not see Orestes, but when the third Wednesday came she put on her bonnet with the air of a person not to be gainsaid. At the door of the squire's room she paused to say: "If you want anything, father, ring your bell—it's right there at hand—and Sally will come in. You'd better ring it every little while, else she'll go to sleep. I hate going, but there is no other way—not unless you"—

She stopped tentatively, her eyes wistful. The squire glared at her, his eyes full of fury. "Go! This is your notion of duty," he said thickly. "Very well. Go your gait! I'm old and helpless, but there are a few things I can do"

"Yes, you can ring for Sally and scare her out of her wits," Edith said, trying to laugh as she walked away. At the doorstep she was tempted to go back, but the thought of Orestes waiting so patiently at the roadside was too much for her.

The squire lay for ten minutes tensely brooding, his face drawn and lined. Then he sat up and began recklessly to pitch himself out of bed. Within reach were the crutches which he was to essay tomorrow. Once he put out his hand to the bell, but drew it back, muttering: "No! By the Lord, I'll do it all myself! I'll show them they can't run over me—not quite." Then, still muttering and mumbling, he wrapped himself in his dressing gown, reached for the crutches and swayed and staggered across to the door.

The squire sat down heavily upon the second step of the broad stairway and began craftily going up backward. He lifted himself from tread to tread, then drew the crutches after him. By some whim he had kept his desk and all his papers in the big south chamber that had been his wife's. He was going there now. If he lived to come back from it he would leave behind a new will, one that would come near to disinheriting his rebellious child. It would do more than that. It would set forth her rebellion, her neglect of him, in such fashion as to shame her, here where honor to parents was so vital a part of decency.

Painfully, with set teeth and agonized twinges, he won to his goal and sat in front of the opened desk. He found the will readily and tore it through angrily, then wrote upon the biggest fragment, "This is the work of a neglected father."

But all this had taken time, and dusk was falling rapidly.

He snatched up a fresh sheet and began to write, but the racing darkness was too quick for him. Before he was half through he stopped and looked about him, full of thwarted, impotent rage. He flung out his hand and struck it against a taper which had lain there so long he had forgotten it. By its feeble light he finished the new will and signed his name with a heavy, scrawling flourish.

Slowly, heavily, he got up and tried to steady himself while he put the crutches in place, but a sharp twinge made him stagger. He lost balance and fell prone, overturning the lighted taper and bringing it in contact with the contents of an open drawer. They blazed up merrily. In a wink the whole room was ablaze. As he lay helpless he saw the flames lick at the carvings on top of the desk. Then indeed the squire groaned aloud and dragged himself to the open window.

A wall of fire was behind him, before him a fall of almost twenty feet! To swing out and drop down below meant certain death even if he had strength for it. He shouted, but nothing came of it. Sally was really fast asleep in the cool back yard. He shut his eyes and thought of Edith's mother. In the great extremity there came a flash of comfort—when he was dead both wills would be burned, and Edith, his only child, would have everything. He ought to have been angry, but somehow he could not be. The mounting flames made his own wrath look poor and tame. He had given up and was waiting for the end when straight through the wall of fire there burst a slim figure, sheeted and blackened, but moving like the light itself. In a wink it had torn off the wet blankets protecting it, swathed the squire in them and was bearing him out to safety regardless of the flames that leaped at its own head. Once through the door other arms laid hold on him and helped to bear him down the stairs. When he came to himself fully he was stretched on the grass at a safe distance, while neighbors and farm folk fought the fire to a finish.

The squire lay very still, but kept his eyes on one slim scorched figure that led all the rest. When the danger was past he raised himself on his elbow and said, pointing to the slim leader: "Daughter, I take back everything. You've chosen a man."

Fortifying the Simplon.

Both Italy and Switzerland are taking measures to fortify the entrances of the Simplon tunnel, while in the tunnel itself engineers are engaged in constructing mines and strengthening those already in place in order to be able to blow it up at a moment notice in the event of war. Near the middle of the tunnel, a few yards from the Swiss frontier, Italian engineers have put in place a double iron door that can resist the rush of an express train traveling at the rate of sixty miles an hour. This iron door is worked by electricity from Iselle, the station at the Italian end of the tunnel, and under ordinary conditions it is hidden in the rocky side of the tunnel. The door is carefully tested once a week. The mines are connected with Brigue and Iselle by electric devices, so that by the mere pressure of a button the Simplon tunnel could be destroyed in a second.—Harper's Weekly.

Women's Secrets

There is one man in the United States who has perhaps heard more women's secrets than any other man or woman in the country. These secrets are not secrets of guilt or shame, but the secrets of suffering, and they have been confided to Dr. R. V. Pierce in the hope and expectation of advice and help. That few of these women have been disappointed in their expectations is proved by the fact that ninety-eight per cent. of all women treated by Dr. Pierce have been absolutely and altogether cured. Such a record would be remarkable if the cases treated were numbered by hundreds only. But when that record applies to the treatment of more than half-a-million women, in a practice of over 40 years, it is phenomenal, and entitles Dr. Pierce to the gratitude accorded him by women, as the first of specialists in the treatment of women's diseases.

Every sick woman may consult Dr. Pierce by letter, absolutely without charge. All replies are mailed, sealed in perfectly plain envelopes, without any printing or advertising whatever, upon them. Write without fear as without fee, to World's Dispensary Medical Association, Dr. R. V. Pierce, Pres., Buffalo, N. Y.

PIONEER ON PRAIRIES.

Archibald McDonald Was a Power With the Indians.

With the retirement from the service of the Hudson Bay Co. of Mr. Archibald McDonald, chief factor at Fort Qu'Appelle, there disappears the last officer of the old company to bear the title with which readers of books of northern travel and of northwest history are so familiar. As for many years there have been no resident commissioners of the H. B. C., so, in future, there will be no chief factors. They will be known in future as managers or agents. Mr. McDonald is a veritable pioneer among pioneers. He is believed to have lived longer in the region which is now known as the Province of Saskatchewan than any other white man now living, and as such was accorded special honor at the inauguration of the new province. He is also the oldest member of the Manitoba Club, Winnipeg, having joined it in 1874, the year of its formation.

Mr. McDonald is a native of Inverness, Scotland, and came to Canada by way of Hudson Bay fifty-seven years ago. He was on the site of what is now the city of Winnipeg in the winter of 1854, and before the beginning of the "sixties" had traveled over all the trade routes in the far West. Before 1870 he made thirteen trips with York boats from Lake Winnipeg to York Factory on Hudson Bay, taking down furs for export to England and carrying back supplies for the posts along the Saskatchewan and in the Red River Valley. When Wolseley's expedition went out to the Red River settlement in 1870, to put down the first Riel uprising, Mr. McDonald was already considered an "old-timer," and his services in keeping the Indian tribes in the Qu'Appelle Valley quiet were acknowledged.

When General Middleton, in 1885, organized at Qu'Appelle the little force with which he smashed Riel's last rebellion, he naturally depended much for advice upon the old Chief Factor at the H. B. C. fort, and the veteran's advice was sound. Mr. McDonald has always exercised great influence over the Indians, to such an extent, in fact, that Lord Strathcona is credited with having remarked that Mr. McDonald's presence at Qu'Appelle was worth 1,000 additional men in the field. Mr. McDonald was present at Fort Qu'Appelle in 1874, when Treaty Number One was negotiated with the Indians. This was the first of the Canadian treaties with the natives of the Northwest, and considerable diplomacy was necessary to obtain the consent of the Indians, for the Dominion Government was an unknown institution to them, and the treatment meted out to their brothers in the U. S. made them suspicious of everybody but the British Government and H. B. C. There were assembled at Fort Qu'Appelle to discuss this treaty no less than 5,000 Indians, and the Canadian Commissioners were Lieutenant-Governor Morris, of Manitoba, and the Hon. David Laird, afterwards Governor of the Northwest Territories. The Northwest Mounted Police had not yet been organized, and as an escort for the commissioners a portion of the Canadian permanent corps, then in garrison at Garry, was marched across the prairie. That the treaty was sucessful was largely ascribed to the influence exercised over the Indians by Mr. McDonald and his brother Chief Factor, Mr. J. W. McLean. The territory ceded by the Indians under this treaty included the western part of Manitoba, and practically the whole of the present province of Saskatchewan. Surely Mr. McDonald is entitled to be classed among the makers of the Canadian West.—Chesterfield in Family Herald and Weekly Star.

Doukhobors Doing Well.

This year the Doukhobor colony at Verigin has ten thousand acres in crop, seven thousand in oats, and three thousand in wheat. Flax is also grown to some extent. Horse ranching as an industry has also grown to considerable proportions. A few years ago cattle and sheep farming was an important factor, but the Doukhobors felt that such a practice was inconsistent with their religion, which forbids the taking of life. Now only enough cattle and sheep are kept to supply milk and wool to the colony. This spring Mr. Verigin intimated that all the men between the ages of 18 and 30, except those needed for the manning of the brickyard, etc., should go out among "the English" and bring back this fall each $200 to his own village. Of course they went. "Theirs not to make reply."

The brick yard employs 14 men, and this season will export 1,000,000 bricks. Into the great mixing bins the clay is dumped where the power of the great engines mixes it freely. Then into the moulds and on to the trays it goes, after which the formed bricks are shipped along the trolleys to the drying sheds. After so many days there, according "as the sun she is," they are carried to the immense kilns where for nine days and nights 235,000 are at one time kept under steady fire.—Manitoba Free Press.

PROMPTING AN AUDIENCE.

English Actors Give a Signal When It's Time to Laugh.

"Nothing illustrates the difference between English and American wit more, probably, than the manner in which playwrights write their lines," said Rupert Hughes. "There are few people who realize the intricacy of the science of writing a 'laugh'—that is, a line capable of producing a laugh from an audience.

"A man may write one of the funniest lines ever given to the American stage and see it ignored by an audience because of some act on the part of the producing company or one member of that company. I have seen the wittiest remarks wasted because of the move of a hand or of the head of the comedian or actor who enunciated it. Then, again, the laugh is taken out of a line by the moving of some person in the stage setting or by the moving of some part of the stage setting itself. It is funny how the slightest move on the part of an actor, after reciting certain lines, absolutely eliminates the wit from what he has just spoken, so far as the audience is concerned.

"This is so of American audiences, but not so of the English theater going public. They will not laugh unless the witticism is finished by a nod of the head or a certain movement of the body.

"It is on this account that certain comedies, great successes in this country, are absolute failures in Great Britain," he continues. "Something must be done when a 'laugh line' is spoken on the English stage to give the audience an inkling that the witticism has been completed. Then you get your laugh.

"Not so, on the contrary, with Americans. I remember of hearing of an incident involving one of Olga Nethersole's first appearances in this country. Several times during the performance the celebrated actress walked to the sides and exclaimed to the stage manager: 'What's the matter? Are they going to hiss me off? Why, they applaud before they hear the end of the lines.' In each instance she was told that the audience was quicker than the audiences to which she had been accustomed to playing. She was told the Americans grasped the meaning and the wit of her lines when she had spoken only half of them. The actress, although she received all kinds of applause during the performance, seemed disheartened."—Washington Post.

MUST DEFER POLLING.

Bye-Elections Will Be Held a Few Days After Nov. 1.

Ottawa, Oct. 13.—It looks like John Stanfield of Colchester, N.S., to succeed Hon. G. H. Perley as chief Conservative whip. Mr. Stanfield was assistant whip in the last Parliament and made a great success of the job.

Ottawa last night is a capital without a Government. The three branches of Parliament are all absent. Extraordinary preparations are being made to extend a rousing popular welcome to the royal Governor-General and his consort when they arrive on Saturday. The city is already ablaze with bunting and steps have been taken to hide the ugliness attendant upon the building of the Chateau Laurier and the new station.

Premier Borden announces that on account of November 1, the day fixed for polling in the bye-elections, being All Saints' Day and therefore a public holiday in the Province of Quebec, nominations and polling would be a little later. No date was fixed upon, but it is not expected to be more than two or three days later than previously arranged. Announcement will be made immediately the Cabinet returns from Quebec on Saturday.

In the meantime some progress has been made in locating the seatless Ministers. Hon. Robert Rogers is to have Alex. Haggart's seat in Winnipeg. George Gordon is likely to make way for Hon. Frank Cochrane in Nipissing and Hon. W. T. White stands a chance of getting East Middlesex, if a Senatorship can be found for Peter Elson.

It's Hon. William Now.

Toronto, Oct. 13.—Hon. William Hearst, K.C., now holds the portfolio of Lands, Forests and Mines in the Ontario Cabinet as successor to Hon. Frank Cochrane, who has gone to the Borden Cabinet at Ottawa. Mr. Hearst was sworn in yesterday by Hon. J. M. Gibson, Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario.

With the exception of Hon. J. J. Foy, who was out of town, all the members of the Provincial Cabinet were present, as well as George H. Goodersham, M.P.P., South Toronto, and Rance Howitt, M.P.P., of South Wellington.

Congratulations were extended to Hon. Mr. Hearst by his fellow-members of the Cabinet, after which the new Minister went to his office in the Department of Lands, Forests and Mines, where he made himself acquainted with his office staff.

William Howard Hearst was born on a farm in Arran Township, in the County of Bruce, on Feb. 15, 1863, and is therefore 48 years of age. After attending the Collegiate Institute at Collingwood, he took up the study of law with the late Judge Masson of Owen Sound. On being called to the Bar Mr. Hearst began practice in Sault Ste. Marie, and has resided there ever since. He represents his home constituency in the Legislature, to which he was first elected a member in 1908.

Collision Near Drumbo.

Woodstock, Ont., Oct. 13.—Early yesterday morning the village of Drumbo was thrown into excitement by a report that the C.P.R. express from the west was on fire, near the station, and that the passengers were in danger. All rushed to the scene of the accident, 500 yards from the depot, where the flyer from Detroit had crashed into the caboose of a standing freight. No one was injured, but the escape of the freight conductor and brakeman, who were in the caboose, was miraculous. The caboose and one freight car were burned.

It is alleged that the conductor sent a brakeman to the rear to flag the express, and that he is missing. It is thought he fell asleep while waiting, and missed the flyer.

Manitoba Cabinet Changes.

Winnipeg, Oct. 13.—The new Provincial Ministry, made necessary by Hon. Robert Rogers' promotion to the Dominion Cabinet was sworn-in yesterday.

Premier Roblin resigns the position of Minister of Agriculture to take over the portfolio of Provincial Secretary.

Colin H. Campbell resigns from the office of Attorney-General to preside over the Department of Public Works.

Hon. James Howden resigns as Provincial Secretary to take over the Attorney-Generalship.

Hon. George H. Caldwell, Minister of Education, and Hon. Hugh Armstrong, Provincial Treasurer, will remain in their present offices.

Mr. George Lawrence will become Minister of Agriculture and Immigration. This is the only new blood in the Cabinet.

Cost Motorist $1,000.

Toronto, Oct. 13.—A fine of $1,000 was imposed in the sessions yesterday, being sentence day in that court, and an intimation that the judical mind of the bench is becoming alive to the necessity of taking noticeable action to stem the tide of reckless motor car driving in the city. It was imposed by Judge Winchester upon Alexander Tracey, who, while intoxicated, ran his powerful car into a crowd of people at Roncesvalles avenue and Queen street on Labor Day, injuring seven of them.

"Will any of that fine go to those injured?" asked Acting Crown Attorney Monahan.

"No," replied the judge; "he is liable to those people in civil actions. This money goes to the court."

Sudden Death.

Canfield, Ont., Oct. 13.—William Thornton, a retired farmer, who lived alone close to the village, died very suddenly at noon Wednesday. He walked to the field to inform a man who was plowing of a severe pain in his chest, returned to the house, where he was found lifeless half an hour later. Heart failure is supposed to be the cause.

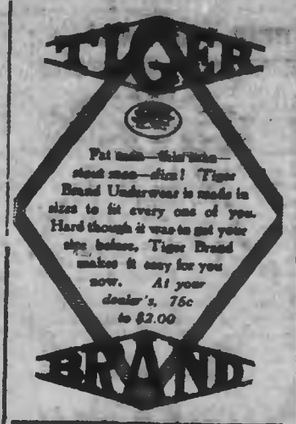
Driven From Their Homes.

San Bernardino, Cal., Oct. 13.—According to special despatches received here from Needles, the Colorado River has risen to its highest point of the year and has cut its way through the big dyke on the Arizona side.

Thousands of acres of reclaimed lands are flooded and the settlers are said to be abandoning their homes.

Shows In Italy.

The laws of Italy are strict in regard to theaters and circuses. Every act or performance announced on the program must be given. Any great exaggeration by means of pictures intended to mislead the public is punishable by a fine.



PRESIDENTIAL PRIMARIES.

They Will Open the Campaign in Five States Next Spring.

In five states next spring there will be held presidential primary elections to choose delegates to the Republican and Democratic national conventions and to declare the preferences of the voters of both parties for candidates for the presidency. These presidential primaries will be the first ever held in the United States, and the delegates to the national convention selected under them will be the first so chosen. The presidential primary idea had its origin in Oregon, but has been adopted in North Dakota, Wisconsin, Nebraska and New Jersey, all of which have presidential primary laws based on the Oregon law.

North Dakota will be the first state next spring to have a popular vote on candidates for president and vice president. Dates for the primary elections in the states that have adopted the so called presidential preference law are as follows: North Dakota, March 19; Wisconsin, April 2; Nebraska, April 17; Oregon, April 19; New Jersey, May 28.

If the expected interest attaches to these presidential primaries next year's political campaign will begin in March, before the North Dakota primaries, and will continue without cessation through April and May, while Wisconsin, Nebraska, Oregon and New Jersey are naming their choice of candidates. Of course the campaign will be in full blast in June all over the country. The Republican national convention will be held during that month.—Washington Cor. New York Evening Post.

THE HOLY LAND.

A French View of the Germanization of the Historic Region.

Tourists who visit the Holy Land note the progress of its Germanization. On the road to Nazareth most of the inns are kept by Germans. Nearly all the streets of Jaffa have the aspect of the Prussian village. The houses have red roofs and are surrounded by the little garden so dear to Gretchen. Traces of the Teuton are everywhere. The Syrian has been supplanted by the Berliner, who has migrated from the banks of the Spree to the borders of the Jordan in order to make his fortune. German is spoken everywhere.

The American consul himself is a German. Souvenirs of the kaiser abound everywhere. Here one shows a fountain that he erected to furnish water to the pilgrims dying of thirst; there is a road that he leveled to lighten the fatigue of the journey. Enthusiastic guides show on the Mount of the Ascension, besides an imprint attributed to the Christ or to Mohammed, according to one's faith, a human foot, well marked in the rock, of which he will confidentially murmur in the ear of the tourist, "William II. stepped there." In a hundred years perhaps this will solidify into the legend of William II.—Cri de Paris.

Device For Stringing Beads.

The fancy bead industry is a foreign one, and, although the beads are consumed in this country, nearly if not quite all are imported from France, Germany and Italy. Until a short time ago the stringing of these beads was done by hand, and the task a rather irksome one because of the difficulty in handling these tiny pieces. A Frenchman has recently invited a very simple device for this purpose, and the work is now done with great rapidity. A quantity of beads is placed in a cup on a revolving stand, driven either by hand or motor, and when this is put into motion the point of a needle on which a thread has been placed is put into the cup, and the force of gravity makes the little beads move along the needle and are then passed on to the string.—New York Press.

The Mikado's Poetry.

The chief of the bureau of poetry in the department of the imperial household of Japan has supplied to the world an English translation of the quatrain which the mikado wrote in honor of the coronation of his ally, King George of England. It reads as follows:

When nation speaks to nations in the tones
Of friendly greeting 'tis a joy to hear.
When nations dwell in peace beneath the sway
Of wise, good rulers 'tis a joy to see.

Paris Condemns Frock Coats.

By the municipal art authorities of Paris it has been decreed that there shall not be erected in that city any more statues of men in frock coats or in even coats. In Rome a number of sculptors have declared against statues wearing trousers. There is an agitation in both these art centers for the adoption by men of a form of dress that will be comfortable to wear and artistic to look at either in real life or in marble.

Montreal Grain and Produce.

MONTREAL, Oct. 12.—The export trade in Manitoba spring wheat from here continues very quiet owing to the fact that the demand from foreign buyers is limited and prices bid are below what exporters are offering. There was some enquiry for oats for October shipment, but the prices bid were considered too low. The local market for oats is firm with a fair trade passing in car lots. The demand for malting barley is better, and prices are firm at 75c per bushel ex-store. Buckwheat is wanted at 60c to 62c per bushel ex-store.

A fair export trade is passing in cheese. Butter is stronger at an advance of ½c per pound on account of the continued good demand from foreign buyers.

RICHARD MILBURN UPSET FROM A CANOE AND LOST HIS LIFE IN OTONABEE RIVER

Well Known Employee of Canadian General Electric Works Drowned Near Otonabee Boat House Yesterday Afternoon.

BODY WAS RECOVERED

Yesterday afternoon about 2:30 o'clock, Mr. Richard Milburn, an employee of the Canadian General Electric Works met death by drowning in the river, nearly opposite Rye's Boat House. He had quit work at eleven o'clock to have a tooth extracted and returned to work, but being taken with a slight illness, soon left the buildings, and borrowing a canoe started to cross the river. When near the opposite shore the canoe capsized. Men employed in building a boat house at Rye's, saw him struggling in the water, and set out to his assistance, but before they reached the spot he had disappeared.

He was familiar with a canoe and his friends suppose, that his slight illness became worse and led to the fatal overturning of the canoe.

The deceased was about 45 years of age and leaves a wife and child He was a sober, steady and well respected man and a member of the Sons of England society.

The body of the victim of yesterday's drowning accident was recovered to-day at about 11 a.m., in comparatively shallow water.

Coroner Greer, who was summoned, deemed an inquest unnecessary. The remains were removed to Comstock's undertaking establishment.

Local Clergy To Attend Banquet

One of the largest banquets ever held in the City of Toronto will be held in the spacious Massey Hall, this evening, when the Methodist Social Union of Toronto, will tender a banquet to the hundreds of delegates who are attending the big Ecumenical Conference in the Queen City. It is expected that there will be some eight hundred men present, which number will include three gentlemen from Peterborough, namely, Rev. I. Couch, Rev. J. G. Brown and Rev. G. W. Henderson.

BROOKS' COMET

Brooks' Comet which has been visible since the 20th of July was exceptionally brilliant last night about 7.15, its tail being plainly discernible to the naked eye extending in an almost vertical direction for a considerable distance, in fact from near the north-western horizon, to the star Miazr in the constellation Ursa Major, which perhaps will be more easily recognized, if described as the second star in the handle of the Big Dipper.

The comet sets at about 7.45 p.m., so that if one looks toward the north-west soon after dark and the conditions are as favourable as last night, he will easily discover this celestial visitant, which is rapidly leaving us, not to call again until seven years and ten months have elapsed.

Dr. Marsh succeeded in securing a very nice photograph of the comet last night.

THE TALK OF THE CITY

A Wonderful Exhibit—You Should See It.

Hundreds have seen this wonderful mummified Alaskan Eskimo on exhibition at 410 George street, and it has become the talk of the city. The way by which the body was preserved is not known, and there is no other mummy in a similar state of preservation known the world over.

Mostly everybody is interested in seeing something of which there is only one in existence and there is no doubt about this exhibit being the most wonderful of its kind in the world. It is clean, interesting, and instructive.

Ladies and children will see the exhibit more conveniently if they come in the afternoon. Many of the best known ladies in Ottawa have just seen the mummy, where it was on exhibition. Admission only 10c. 410 George street, nearly opposite Examiner Office.

THE DUKE OF CONNAUGHT

Canada's New Governor-General who arrived yesterday

NEW GOVERNOR-GENERAL RECEIVES THE GREAT SEAL

Duke and Duchess Were Accorded a Grand Reception at Quebec---Ceremonies of Installation Occupied Several Hours---No Chance for an Interview for Press.

Special Wire to The Examiner.

QUEBEC, QUE., OCT. 13.—With booming guns, military salutes and the cheers of the populace the Duke and Duchess of Connaught, uncle and aunt, and direct representatives of King George the Fifth, in the premier Dominion of Canada, stepped off the flag bedecked "Empress of Ireland," and were borne in a smaller boat to the King's wharf, where the ceremonies of the installation of the Duke, in his high office, took place. Hon. R. L. Borden and the members of his cabinet with all the high military and naval officers of Canada were there in resplendent uniforms. The judges of the Supreme Court, in their sombre robes, were present to take part in the ceremonies, which took some hours. Major Lowther read the commission of the King, and under Secretary of State Mulvey handed the Duke the great seal of Canada; then his Royal Highness was sworn in. Energetic newspaper men found themselves flabbergasted at the start. "Royalty never gives interviews," the Duke's Secretary told them. The fellow passengers who came over with his Royal Highness were delighted at the friendliness and cordial simplicity of the Royal party.

Mrs. Borden, wife of the Premier, presented the Duchess with a huge bouquet of Canadian flowers, which Her Highness very admiringly accepted, chatting cordially with Mrs. Borden for some minutes. The first impressions of Canada of the new Governor General and his lady are certainly enthusiastic. The Duke replied to addresses in appropriate terms, speaking especially of fusion of the French and English races, which made the British Empire glorious.

GREETINGS FROM GOVERNOR-GENERAL

Special Wire to the Examiner.

TORONTO, OCT. 13.— A telegram greeting from the Duke of Connaught was received this morning from Quebec by the Ecumenical Conference, as follows: "On landing in Canada, I wish to send warmest greetings, and hope you have had successful meetings." (Signed) Connaught.

At the suggestion of the chairman, Sir Robert Perks, the gathering rose enmasse and sang the National Anthem.

This was Laymen's morning at the Conference, and attention was turned to the work of the laymen's movement and other lay agencies.

At this afternoon's session the first essay by a woman was read. The subject was Methodism and Women's movements, by Mrs. Joseph Johnson, of London, Eng., wife of the Superintendent of the South East London Mission.

MUST DO AWAY WITH THEIR LEVEL CROSSINGS

TORONTO, ONT., OCT. 13.—Chairman Mabee of the Dominion Railway Commission, showed his independence and decisiveness of action this morning by suddenly ordering that all tracks of the Canadian Northern and Canadian Pacific Railways, running through the northern part of the city, be elevated or subwayed to eliminate the level crossings. Twenty much travelled crossings are thus to be taken out at a cost of probably a million and a half dollars. It was such a big thing that the city hardly dared ask for it and certainly didn't expect to get it.

The Examiner will have daily reports of the world's series until the championship is decided. To-morrow's extra will also give all the rugby scores.

NO CASCARET USER EVER HAS HEADACHE

A 10-cent box will keep your liver, stomach and bowels clean, pure and fresh for months.

Sick headache, biliousness, dizziness ,coated tongue, foul taste and foul breath—always trace them to torpid liver, delayed fermenting food in the bowels or sour, gassy stomach.

Poisonous matter clogged in the intestines, instead of being cast out of the system is re-absorbed into the delicate brain tissue it causes congestion and that dull, throbbing, sickening headache.

Salts, cathartic pills, oil and purgative waters force a passageway for a day or two—yes—but they don't take the poisons out and have no effect upon the liver or stomach.

Cascarets immediately cleanse and regulate the stomach, remove the sour, undigested and fermenting food and foul gases, take the excess bile from the liver, and carry out of the system all the decomposed waste matter and poisons in the intestines and bowels.

A Cascaret to-night will surely straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep—a 10-cent box from your druggist means inside cleanliness and a clear head for months. Ask any of the millions of Cascaret users if they ever have headache.

NARROW ESCAPE

An unknown man narrowly escaped being struck by the G. T. R. Port Hope train this morning, just south of the city. He was apparently deaf as he walked deliberately in the middle of the track until the train was within a few yards of him, paying no attention to the wild, shrieking of the locomotive. When the train was almost on top of him, the man gave a quick turn and sprang into the ditch, just as the train whirred past.

A WEAK HEART

When the heart is weak or irregular in action, when the blood is thin and watery, remember the blood-forming qualities of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and by its use flood the system with rich, red, vitalizing blood. This is Nature's way of curing weakness and disease. It is the only way to ensure lasting benefits.

REVOLUTIONARIES MASSACRE WHOLE FAMILIES AFTER WINNING BATTLE AND BURNING TOWN

THE DUCHESS OF CONNAUGHT

Consort of Our New Governor-General

ORGAN RECITAL AT ST. PAUL'S

Mr. John Crane, and the choir of St. Paul's, have placed the public under a new debt of gratitude for another high class musical entertainment. The concert recital given in the church last night by Mr. Gatty Sellars, the great English organist, composer and solo organist, of the celebrated Queen's Hall concerts and Crystal Palace festival, assisted by Mr. Wm. Short, "the King of Trumpeter," certainly gave a delightful musical evening, di capo al fine. As an organist, Mr. Sellars reveals a remarkable virtuosity, and a mastery of the resources of the pipe organ, never shown by any great organist that has ever visited Peterborough. He cannot be compared with men like Fred Archer, because he is nothing like Archer; he is in a class by himself. His delicate effects are inimitably perfect, as was shown repeatedly last night in almost every selection played. Nothing could be more daintily ethereal than the soft and sweet passages in "Repose," composed by the performer and Vincent's "Sunset Melody." At times the organ, under his hands, simply breathed melody, "like the faint, exquisite music of a dream"—a realization of what Tom Moore must have felt when he used these words.

Mr. Sellars played ten numbers of his own composition, and through all of these, his tender mannerisms, ran like a beautiful thread of melody. Heard at first, they are inexpressively delightful, but too much of them at one sitting tends to reveal some slight lack of body and monotony of musical texture. What splendidly redeems this tendency, is the splendid manner in which Mr. Sellars interprets his own dainty, musical conceptions. While he excels in this form of organ performance, he is quite equal to the larger and more robust demands upon his virtuosity, as shown particularly in his magnificent performance of the prelude to the fifth act of Wagner's "Lohengrin." He admirably caught the spirit of the robust richness of the music with its sweetly and delicately drawn out, faintly suggestive infiltration of the wedding music. Mr. Sellars was very happily at home in his closing contribution to the programme, a five-fold group of his own compositions. Of these, what gave most popular delight were his descriptive pieces—"La Garde," and the "Storm at Sea." The splendid mimetic effects in the rising and surging of the storm, the hissing spray, the whistling wind and the rolling thunder, were heightened by the somewhat theatrical expedient of darkening the auditorium; with imitation of lightning flashes. In this, more than anything else, the great organist showed his incomparable manual mastery of the instrument. His performance throughout the evening was warmly appreciated by an audience of apparently more than ordinary musical intelligence.

Mr. Wm. Short, the "King's Trumpeter," infused the romance of royalty into the programme. His set numbers were the allegro movement from Guilmant's Fifth Sonata and a beautiful Song Elegie by Sellars. The latter, a sad, sad minor theme, was played with splendid repose and artistic feeling.

The "Coronation trumpet calls" introduced into the organ playing of the Coronation marches, including the historical trumpet calls as played at the Coronation, interpersed with the rejoicing chimes and concluding with "God Save the King," was a novel and delightful contribution and conclusion to a programme that had provided a musical entertainment as original as it was artistically delightful.

ORDER FOR SIDING GIVEN UNDER MISUNDERSTANDING

The Dominion Railway Board gave a decision yesterday that is of great interest to a number of local residents. The Toronto Telegram, in referring to the session of the Board, says:

"Chairman Mabee and Commissioner D'Arcy Scott constituted the Dominion Railway Board, when it began its labours in the City Hall this morning.

Last fall the Board granted an application for a siding south of Romaine street, Peterborough, extending into the premises of Messrs. Houedry and sons.

J. W. Bennet, on behalf of Peterborough property owners, asked that the order be rescinded as the siding closed a lane which had been used by them.

Daniel O'Connell for Houedry and sons, argued that the siding was necessary for his clients.

"But the lane is necessary for the others," said the Chairman.

"If we had understood the facts the order of last fall would not have been issued. Any how, Mr. O'Connell, your clients must settle with those property-owners for blocking up that lane, or we'll cancel that order."

There was some argument over the matter of costs.

"Well," said the bluff chairman, "we never have made an order as to costs; we're not going to start now. The order of December 5th last will be a varded and unless the parties can come to some agreement as to compensation there will be an arbitration."

Rebels Reinforced by Government Troops Are Well Armed and Strongly Entrenched—Situation Serious.

PEKIN PREPARES

HANKOW, CHINA, OCT. 13.—Following another fierce battle last night and the burning of the town, there was a massacre of all Manchu families in the neighbourhood by the Republican revolutionaries. The revolutionary army, including several regiments of troops which belonged to the government yesterday, are strongly entrenched and well supplied with guns. Despatches from Pekin, the capital of the empire, this morning admit that the Chinese government and the foreign attaches there, are thoroughly alarmed. The revolution is not only felt in the outer provinces, but it is admitted that even the members of the government at Pekin are rotten with sedition and revolutionary tendencies. The defences around Pekin have been strengthened by troops intended for the outer provinces. It is believed by the majority of the foreign attachees here, that the present revolution is the most serious that has occurred in China in recent years.

PEKIN, OCT. 13.— Latest advices from Hankow indicate that the foreigners are safe, though the rebel troops still control the situation.

Athletics Beat Stars

PHILADELPHIA, PA., OCT. 12. — The Philadelphia team, champions of the American League, to-day played their final game on their own grounds with the All Stars in preparation for the world's series with the New York Nationals. Philadelphia won 3 to 2. The home team got only five hits off Wood of the Boston Americans, errors aiding in the scoring of two of their runs.

Manager Mack of Philadelphia gave nearly all of his substitutes a chance during the game and the playing of some of them featured the game. Strunk made a wonderful throw from deep centre field, catching McBride, who tried to go from second to third base after a catch. Strun also beat out a bunt and stole second and third bases in the same inning. Danforth a "southpaw" was given a trial for three innings. He held the All Stars down to one hit and fanned Cobb, Chase, Gessler and Gardner. Both of the All Stars' runs were made off Martin .McInnis played first base for three innings. His injured arm is still sore and it is very doubtful if he can play against New York next Saturday. The Philadelphia team will go to New York to-morrow afternoon.

POLICE COURT

Three young men were fined $2.00 and $2.50 each in the Police Court yesterday morning for gambling in the public lavatory.

Alex. Thompson and Edmond Parks two local men, were arraigned in the Police Court this morning, for being drunk. Thompson was discharged, but Parks was remanded for a week, in order to get over the effects of the liquor.

PAINS OF CHILBLAINS

ARE ENDED BY ZAM-BUK

When you have any deep-seated pain in the joints, the back, the wrists or elsewhere, place a liberal supply of Zam-Buk on the fingers or on the palm of the hand and rub it in. The penetrating power of this "embrocation-balm" is very great. It kills pain and removes stiffness.

Mrs. Frances Wyatt, of 25 Guy Avenue, Montreal, says: "I have found Zam-Buk most soothing and valuable in a very bad case of rheumatism, and also for stiffness of joints and muscles. I suffered long and acutely from rheumatism, and tried one ointment after another in vain. I also took medicines internally, but it remained for Zam-Buk to effect a cure. I began applying this balm when I felt the aches and pains of rheumatism coming on, or felt any of the stiffness. The result was truly wonderful. Zam-Buk seemed to penetrate to the very seat of the pains, driving them completely out, and I am now quite cured."

If rubbed on to the chest and between the shoulders in cases of cold, Zam-Buk will give speedy relief.

Apart from its use as an embrocation, Zam-Buk is a cure for eczema, rashes, ringworm, cold sores, ulcers, abscesses, chapped hands, piles, varicose veins, cuts, burns, bruises, etc. All druggists and stores at 50c., or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price. Refuse harmful imitations.

THEY WOULD LIKE TO FORGET.

The Higher Criticism regards the Mosaic record as a myth. The political disciples of the Higher criticism are rather painfully trying to make the public believe the statement that there were no appeals in the late elections in Ontario to race and creed prejudices, and the dangers of French and clerical domination. They would be right glad if they could make themselves disbelieve the record they are vainly trying to make th people disbelieve.

SATURDAY EVENING'S MEETING

In view of, and in reference to, the announcement that the Provincial general elections will be held early in the coming December, a meeting of the Liberal supporters is called for to-morrow (Saturday) evening, to be held in the Central Canada board room. A general invitation to Liberals is extended. Matters of immediate importance will be taken into consideration. The springing of the Provincial elections was, it will be remembered, anticipated by the Examiner in a statement made a few weeks ago that the elections would be brought on about the end of November.

THE PROVINCIAL ELECTIONS.

The reasons that have influenced Premier Whitney to decide on bringing on the Provincial general elections a year before the present Legislature shall have run its regular course, must be peculiar. Is he meditating something sinister that needs to be carefully thought out that he delays giving full explanation of the reasons that decided him upon advising dissolution and the general election? The reason he briefly gave should be sufficient—the saving of $15,000 in holding the bye-elections—especially for this economical Government, which only doubled the Provincial expenditure in about three years. The saving of $15,000 in an annual expenditure of ten million is drawing the economy line rather too fine to be convincing as an argument for throwing the country into the turmoil of a general election before the people and business have fairly gotten upon their feet, after the late contest. Business men, who haven't been doing much the past month and a half, except stand in the doors of their quiet shops and watch the political workers rush by on their country-saving expeditions, will welcome another business holiday. A general election in December will be a great stimulus to the Christmas trade, which is one of the harvest spots of business men. Mr. Whitney has a thumping big majority in the Legislature now. He certainly does not feel the need of the moral victory of the Conservative party last month to help him in achieving success at the polls. He has made the declaration that he is "honest enough to be bold; and bold enough to be honest." It doesn't look much like bravery when he brings on the elections so as to be swung back into office as the tail of Mr. Borden's kite. If Mr. Whitney realised what is good for the province and for himself he would pray for the stimulus of a smaller majority to keep him to his work and to be more progressive and less tyrannical. The whole of New Ontario needs the stimulus of progressive administration: it needs population and development upon broad and progressive lines. The Whitney Government has simply used it to extract revenue from it, and to make it a happy hunting ground for mining sharks. The conveniences that should appertain to well-governed communites are lacking and retard development. The machinery of justice and legal procedure are of a crudeness little beyond the mining camp standard. As in New Ontario so in old Ontario there is a large field for useful reforms that would be inspiring for a less-satisfied government made indolent and unprogressive by a pliant and large majority.

HON. A. G. MacKAY IN AN INTERVIEW DEALS WITH PROVINCIAL ISSUES

The Liberal Leader Elaborates the Conditions Which the Province Needs---Criticizes the Policy and Administration of the Ontario Government

OWEN SOUND, OCT. 11.—Immediately on the receipt of the news that the Legislature would be dissolved at once and the elections held in December, a correspondent interviewed Hon. Mr. MacKay. The leader of the Opposition was strong in his condemnation of the Premier's action.

"The date selected is as unseasonable as the Premier's action is cowardly and unreasonable. With seventy of a majority at his back, his statement of two weeks ago that there were no elections by the bye-elections on the horizon, while at that very time everything in the shape of printing, etc., was being rushed preparatory to an immediate general election, scarcely tallies with his once vaunted boast that he was 'honest enough to be bold and bold enough to be honest.' Had the Legislature been allowed to run its regular course, and another session been held the elections could, with very little intereference with business, have been held in early June. As it is, the fall and Christmas trade will be largely interfered with.

"If the statutes are adhered to, the greater number of the residents in all the unorganized portions of the Province, forming parts of no less than thirteen constituencies, will now be disfranchised. The latest voters' lists in that immense stretch of northern Ontario are those upon which the 1908 elections were held. In the discussion of many questions it was tacitly understood that there would be another session—notably so in connection with the serious complaints as to the bilingual schools—a question which could not properly have been dealt with last session, owing to the fact that the commissioner whom the Government had appointed had not then made his report as to the actual facts. Owing to the extreme importance of this subject and the gravity of the charges made, it was only fair that the Government and the Opposition should have declared where they stood after the facts were ascertained, and before an election.

"Again, the census returns would be available at the approaching session, and whatever increased representation is called for in New Ontario or elsewhere should be granted at the commencement and not in the middle of a decennial decade."

"What do you consider the main lines of difference between the Government and the Opposition?" queried your correspondent.

"As shown by the debates and the divisions in the House, they are many and important," said Mr. MacKay.

Education.

"The inexplicable bungling of the Education Department has its most serious effects in the rural districts. Owing to the stubborn attitude taken by the department against all pleading and warning, there is and has been a lamentable scarcity of qualified teachers, with the result that a large percentage of our schools are in the hands of untrained and unqualified teachers. Years ago the Opposition made it perfectly plain that if the model schools were wiped out at one blow this would of necessity lead to the scarcity now experienced in the rural districts. It was then pointed out that numbers of our normal-trained teachers go to the west, where, without further examination, they are qualified to teach. Six hundred of such went west last year. A plea for even a survival of the fittest of the model schools was in vain. The Government were deaf to warning, impervious to knowledge, with such deplorable results that last year we find in the riding of East Peterborough, for example, that 42 per cent. of the rural schools were in the hands of untrained and non-qualified teachers, holding only what are usually called 'permits.' From Inspector Tilley's report submitted to the counties council of Northumberland and Durham we find that in 1900 there were seventy rural schools in this inspectorate, in which schools there were two first-class, twenty-two second-class and forty-six third-class teachers, and not a single teacher holding any kind of a temporary certificate or permit. In 1910 in the same seventy schools there were two first-class, twenty-seven second-class, twenty-one third-class and not less than nineteen teachers with no regular qualifications whatever. Thirty-one unqualified teachers in East Peterborough and nineteen in the west inspectorate of Northumberland and Durham are but specific illustrations of what is prevalent over the whole Province.

The Text-books.

"The deliberately false claim of the Government that the Public School Readers cost but forty-nine cents is now pretty well understood. The facts are that the Province employed and paid a large committee to collect and select all reading matter for the Readers, paid for all illustrations, such as cuts and lithographs, and, it is said, actually set up the type, and then handed all these over to a departmental store to run the books off, paying forty-nine cents for this work, at the same time telling the people of the Province that this was the whole cost of the Readers. In other respects the nature of the bargain made with this departmental store is extremely objectionable. It is expressly provided that a person in any part of the Province may purchase from the departmental store at exactly same price that he pays in his own home retail store. The result of this is evident. It tends to place every hearthstone in the land on the mailing list of a Toronto departmental store, to the great disadvantage not only of the retail bookseller, but of every other retail shop in the Province. What the Opposition contended was that, if the Government decided thus to cut out the retail trade, the Province should have published the books and given them to the people of the Province at actual cost.

Technical Education.

"What the Opposition desired and moved for was the appointment of a competent commission who would not only ascertain all facts, but who would be competent to, and would actually, conduct an educational campaign throughout the Province in favour of industrial evening classes in all our factory towns. Such a commission could and would have interested civic councils, boards of trade, boards of education, employers and citizens generally in favour of a movement to give a square deal to the lad who at an early age leaves the school for the workshop. The demand and the necessity for such schools are evidenced by the fact that it is estimated that about $1,000,000 annually is paid by ambitious artisans and mechanics anxious to improve their position to schools of correspondence south of the line in a vain endeavour to get some general knowledge of the principles that underlie their chosen vocation. In 1909 this Province assisted education as follows: $1.38 for every public or separate school student, $4.66 for every high school or collegiate institute student, $112.43 for every model or normal school student, $126.36 for every university student. Against this expenditure no complaint is made. But has the Province no financial or ethical duty to perform with reference to the lad who cannot afford possibly even to enter the high school, but who leaves school at an early age to enter the workshop? The bare passing of an act dealing with industrial education is the Government's grudging answer last session to the demand of the Opposition fo ryears.

The Finances.

"That there has been for several years a substantial annual Provincial deficit, upon any classification of current receipts and expenditures that any sane accountant would make, is quite clear to those who have taken any interest in the question. A pretended surplus of $3,408 was arrived at last year by classifying as current receipts moneys received from the absolute sale of Crown lands to the extent of $442,966.89. A proper classification of other such capital receipts makes last year's deficit $535,363.25. Honest dealing with this suggests the necessity either of curtailment of expenditure or of obtaining other sources of revenue, and this leads to suggestions made by the Opposition which have not been adopted, such as Increasing the Succession Duties.

"While the succession duty, that is, the tax collected by the Province from the estates of certain deceased persons, should not be such as to discourage thrift, nor yet to interfere unduly with those left behind, no good reason can be given why the suggestion of the Opposition should not be adopted and the scale of duties graded so that a heavier percentage should be taken from an estate that runs away up into the millions than is taken from a small estate. Similarly with reference to Mining Receipts.

"The present law whereby each mine pays a royalty or percentage on the output comes from the Opposition side of the House. The Minister of Mines originally proposed ot tax mines, as he would farm lands, on an acreage basis. Later he adopted in part the position taken by the Opposition, but only in part. No mine, unless it is a paying mine, should pay any royalty at all, but no good reason can be urged why a mine that pays exceptionally high profits should not, after a certain limit is reached, pay a higher rate of royalty than the poorer paying mine. In short, the weighty saddle should be placed upon the able horse, and a leading fundamental principle of taxation—ability to pay—should be recognized. Following this question of taxation brings us to a very marked difference between the Government and the Opposition.

Taxation of Improvements.

"I have for years favoured legislation that tends to do away with the taxation of improvements. When a member of the Select Committee dealing with the assessment act as far back as 1904, I favoured this principle. Mr. Fripp's bill was meritorious in this respect. No good reason has yet been advanced on the floor of the Legislature why it should not at least be left optional to municipalities to cease to assess improvements, or to lighten the proportion which they have to pay. This would be particularly advantageous to what is ordinarily called New Ontario, and would in time, I believe, be generally adopted in Old Ontario. The municipality that chose to adopt it ought to be given that liberty. It is working well in other lands and in many cities in western Canada—notably so in Vancouver.

Reforestration.

"In view of the fact that a very substantial portion of the Provincial revenue is derived from our forests, and of the further fact that there has recently been an annual deficit, the Liberals have urged year by year the necessity of adopting a forward and progressive policy for the preservation of our forests and for reforestration."

Hydro-electric Problems.

Asked as to the points of difference between the Government and the Opposition on the power policy, Mr. MacKay drew from his desk a copy of his speech on the debate on the address last January, and referrd to the following paragraph in the same as indicating why he considered the Government's power policy inequitable.

"There is another phase of this question deserving serious consideration. As the matter is being at present worked out, the credit of the whole Province is pledged for the benefit of a few municipalities in order that cheap power may be obtained for these municipalities. The absolute unfairness of this plan is better seen if we take specific illustrations of how it works out. For example, Bracebridge the other day held a banquet as a result of the successful opening of their power scheme What did Bracebridge require to do? Bracebridge, I understand, was required to submit its scheme to the Ontario Railway and Municipal Board, a creature of the Government, and when its scheme had been approved of by the Municipal Board. Bracebridge was obliged to sell its own debentures. They sold at 93½, bearing, I think, 4½ per cent. interest. Now, contrast this method of procedure towards obtaining cheap power as, let us say, between Bracebridge and Welland. The Province, as a whole, Bracebridge included, is compelled to assist in obtaining cheap money and cheap power for Welland, but in turn the Province as a whole, including Welland, does not endorse Bracebridge, and does not assist Bracebridge in obtaining cheap power. The result is that Bracebridge loses $1.50 per hundred on the sale of its debentures and pays 4½ per cent. interest, whereas Welland loses nothing on the sale and gets its money at about 3½ per cent.

There can be but one result of this whole scheme, if successful—namely, that it will induce intending manufacturers to locate in the Niagara Peninsula rather than in the different towns and cities throughout the Province. Nay, Sir, it may go so far as to take away factories already existing in other towns and change them to near the Falls. I leave it with the Government to say whether, as representing the whole Province, they think such a scheme is fair and equitable to the whole Province. And this raises the further question whether a uniform flat rate would not be more equitable even within the electric zones."

Is Such a Scheme Fair?

"Is such a scheme fair or equitable?" queried Mr. MacKay. "Why, when Bracebridge was compelled to get the approval of the Government Board, should not the Province see to it that the debentures sold at par or better and that she got the same rate of interest as towns within the electric zones? If this scheme is continued in its present form, where, for example, will Owen Sound be a few years hence? Owen Sound manufacturers, as part of the Province, are to-day assisting in financing cheap power for rivals in the same lines of business in the Niagara Peninsula, while they get no assistance in return. This is direct commercial suicide. In a few years, if the scheme is successful as to a portion of the Province, Owen Sound will not get a single new factory, and will have difficulty in holding those she now has. What applies to Owen Sound applies to manufacturers of all towns in seven-eighths of this Province.

"Self-preservation demands that manufacturers and their employees, and citizens generally, in seven-eighths of the Province should cease to slavishly follow party flags, and should demand, with no uncertain sound, a square deal on this power question.

"Talking to a Government with eighty-eight members against eighteen has proven largely a waste of time."

Northern Ontario.

"What about New Ontario?" was the reporter's next question.

"This is a large question," said Mr. MacKay. "The policy of both the old and the new Government has been, in my humble judgment, too parsimonious with reference to northern Ontario, although there was some excuse for the old Government, for the receipts from the north were not nearly so large as at present. If we are to people our northland we must adopt a comprehensive and vigorous policy, not only of railway building, but also of building good waggon roads in that district. Otherwise we will find it difficult to people the clay belt as against the attractiveness of the western prairies."

Again Mr. MacKay was willing to be judged by the stand he had taken in the House, and he referred your reporter to the following paragraphs in his speech on the Budget last session:

"Now, sir, with reference to the Temiskaming & Northern Ontario Railway, instead of endeavouring to work himself and the Province into a state of alarm over the decreasing earning powers of this railway as a result of proposed freer trade relations, let me show him (the Provincial Treasurer) the better way. Allow me to point out to him, first, that this road was in its conception intended to be a colonization road—as such, sir, I think it still should be treated; that this Government has an entirely wrong conception as to its duties with reference to northern Ontario. It is an absolute mistake to charge excessive freight and other rates in order to attempt to produce annually a balance on the right side. It does not lie in the mouth of any citizen of old Ontario to say to this or any other Government: 'You must at once make that road absolutely pay.' The pioneers have a right to be treated liberally. It is true that the forest wealth and the mineral wealth belong not to the northland especially but to the whole Province of Ontario but it is also equally true, sir, that the Province has ever since Confederation derived a very large percentage of its revenue from that northland. Honorable gentlemen opposite have been even fulsome in their laudation of the Honorable the Minister of Lands, Forests and Mines. I desire to ask him frankly, but firmly, the question Are we doing the square thing by the northland, by ourselves and the Province of Ontario? The Honourable the Premier, in his speech on the address, took the strange position that if Ontario increases its population there is apparently no beneficial result but there is an extra outlay by way of aid to municipal government, providing lockups, etc. The inference from such an argument is that it does not pay this Province to secure settlers for our northland. It is a strange coincidence, of course only a coincidence—a case of great minds,etc.—that almost on the very day upon which the Honourable the Premier delivered himself of this strange doctrine the Deputy Minister of Agriculture, speaking before the Empire Club, advanced exactly the same argument. The argument of both, and that of the latter as published by Toronto Saturday Night, simply means this: that, if the Province spends money in securing settlers for northern Ontario, and opens up and settles new townships, the results will be increased expenditure by the Province, with the further inferential result that the Province derives no benefit from these settlers, but that the Dominion is greatly benefited by way of revenue received under tariff regulations. There is an element of truth in the contention, namely, that increased population encouraged by this Province would indirectly be a benefit to the whole Dominion; but it is economic heresy to say that the same increased population is not a direct benefit to the Province. If, sir, we roll back the map of settlement do we not thereby of absolute necessity increase the value of the Crown lands and Crown timber lying immediately beyond the line of settlement. Does any sane man doubt this? Sir, if we increase the population, or, as I have already said, roll back the map of settlement, do we not, ipso facto, of necessity, increase the land and timber wealth of the Province lying directly behind the line of settlement. These settlers will, in time, form companies and develop interests, pay for commercial and other charters through the Provincial Secretary's Department, and will thus directly increase the finances of the Province. To say nothing of the indirect benefit that will be obtained by developing trade between the northland and North Bay, Toronto, and other points.

THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron

The other day I was asked to write something which I had no idea how to word.

I asked four people what to say.

Three of themanswered, "I'd say something like this"--and then made some vague and indefinite suggestion.

The fourth took a paper and pencil and wrote his suggestion in definite, finished form.

The fourth is an unusually successful young business man. I wonder how much of his success he owes to he habit which this little incident shows he possesses--the habit of definiteness.

I believe that the habit of indefinite thought is one of the most common weaknesses that keep men and women from accomplishing things.

It is so much easier to think and talk and lan and live in "glittering generalties," to make up one's mind to say "something like this," to plan undertakings in vague and sketchy outlines, than to be definite and accurate in one's thoughts and words and plans.

Of course, the indefinite and general idea must come first, and the definite and concrete afterwards, but the trouble with many people is that they never get beyond that first stage.

The indefinite idea is the powder—the concrete plan or thought is the shot. And the reason so many of us make much racket, but never hit the mark, is because we have powder, but no bullets in our guns.

I know a man with such a passion for definiteness that he always meets any general statement by saying, "Such as," which is his way of demanding a concrete example of the generality. He says that half tthe time the person who makes the general statement cannot give any concrete example.

When I was out driving the other day, I passed two farms where produce was offered for sale.

On the sign at one farm was printed:

"ALL KINDS OF FARM PRODUCE FOR SALE."

At the other place was a sign which read:

"FOR SALE—FARM PRODUCE.
FRESH EGGS.
CELERY.
SQUASHES.
CIDER.
APPLES.
LETTUCE."

The broad generalization of the first sign made no appeal to me.

The definiteness of the second reminded me that I wanted some celery and brought out my pocket book.

So definiteness won out as it always does.

Train yourself to habits of definite thought and statement, to definiteness in your desires and aims, and to the making of definite concrete plans, and you will have immeasurably sharpened the tools with which you are seeking to carve out a successful life.

Canada Offers Big Field For The Operations Of Salvation Army

TORONTO, OCT. 11.—Mrs. Bramwell Booth, though on her first visit to Canada, and only here a few days has found wrongs that need righting.

In Montreal she found a poor old woman dying of cancer, and left without a proper place in which she could die.

"The hospitals had turned her over to the Army as they could not cure her, and as she was without money there was no place for her, and the crowded Army 'quarters' were not quite a proper place for a cancer case. It was pitiable when she said to me: 'I wish I could die in the hospital.' I think you need more paternal care for the suffering poor in Canada. In England such a case would be sent to the Workhouse Infirmary," said Mrs. Booth.

Is Yet a Young Woman.

The wife of the Chief of Staff of the Salvation Army is yet a young-looking woman, but she has accomplished more for humanity than one woman in a thousand dreams of doing.

She has reared and trained seven bright children, four of whom are now officers and the other three hoping to be some day soon.

She has had a hand in the reclamation of 50,000 fallen women whom she and her Army workers found in the slums of darkest London.

For 28 years she has been at the head of the women's social work of the Army, and she knows London's underworld probably better than anybody who doesn't belong to it.

She superintends a home for girls, conducts congresses, addresses meetings innumerable, and just now she is in Canada as the representative of the great old General at the 29th annual congress.

Gave Up Life of Ease.

She was before marriage the daughter of a Welsh physician, and converted by Mrs. Catherine Booth's instrumentality, sacrificed a life of ease and luxury for one of loving sacrifice and constant Christian labour. It was 29 years ago this month that she married Bramwell Booth and to-day she doesn't look more than 40 years old.

At Quebec she found that the Army had outwitted the police, who had made trouble when street meetings were held. The Army officers built a bay window balcony on the first floor of the barracks and spoke from it to the standing crowds below. The police can't prevent that.

Mrs. Booth defended the Army's immigration policy, and said that out of 60,000 immigrants brought out in 5 or 6 years not one per cent. had been unsatisfactory.

"General Booth is still active, and though 83 years old he has just completed his seventh motor tour of England, visiting 60 towns and cities in 28 days, and delivering 100 addresses," said Mrs. Booth.

"I am all in love with Canada, and I see here a fine field for the work of the Army, though the prosperity of the country makes it difficult to live the life of self-denial that we ask. Our officers could double or triple their incomes in any other field of labour."

GROWS HAIR ON BALD HEADS

Bald-headed People May Get a New Chance in Life

In these days when youth is the moving factor in business, when a man makes his mark at thirty-five and is ready to retire at forty-five, when business houses pension the man we call "middle aged" rather than allow his lagging influence to intrude upon the commercial rush, a bald head is almost fatal to any man's hopes. The following must therefore prove interesting to people who are losing their hair or who are bald.

Resorcin is one of the latest and most effective germ killers discovered by science, and in connection with Beta Napthol, which is both germicidal and antiseptic, a combination is formed which destroys the germs which rob the hair of its nutriment, and also creates a clean and healthy condition of the scalp, which prevents the development of new germs.

Pilocarpin is a well-known agent for restoring the hair to its natural colour, where the loss of colour has been due to a disease of the scalp.

Yet it is not a colouring matter or dye.

This combination of curatives mixed with alcohol as a stimulant perfects a most effective remedy for hair and scalp troubles.

The famous Rexall "93" Hair Tonic is chiefly composed of Resorcin, Beta Napthol, and Pilocarpin. It helps to make the scalp healthy, to nourish the hair, to stimulate the follicles. Where the head is already bare, it enters the follicles, revitalizes the roots, supplies nourishment, and stimulates a new growth.

We want you to try a few bottles of Rexall "93" Hair Tonic, on our personal guarantee that the trial will not cost you a penny if it does not give you absolute satisfaction. That's proo fof our faith in this remedy and it should indisputably demonstrate that we know what we are talking about when we say that Rexall "93" Hair Tonic will grow hair on bald heads, except, of course, where baldness has been of such long duration that the roots of the hair are entirely dead, the follicles closed and grown over, and the scalp is glazed.

Remember, we are basing our statements upon what has already been accomplished by the use of Rexall "93" Hair Tonic, and we have the right to assume that what it has done for hundreds of others it will do for you. In any event you cannot lose anything by giving it a trial on our liberal guarantee. Remember, you can get Rexall Remedies in this community only at our store.—The Rexall Store. McDermid and Jury.

HON. A. G. MACKAY ON PROVINCIAL ISSUES

is deliberately retarding the development of northern Ontario, owing to the fact that it does not treat the Temiskaming & Northern Ontario Railway as a colonization road, but has endeavoured by excessive freight and other charges to make it pay. Then again, sir, the Temiskaming & Northern Ontario Railways should have branch colonization lines. If, for example, the mining camps are real camps—and I think they undoubtedly are—why should the Government not at once build into Elk Lake, Gowganda and Montreal River districts? Shoot out your feeders to the main railway—you cannot afford to stand shivering on the brink of duty! We must build these roads, and they will prove effective and paying feeders of the main road. The original conception of this Government road was that it was to pass through the clay belt and reach James Bay, and thus tap the untold fishery wealth of these waters. This is the only way to develop this northland. The Government should at once adopt an up-to-date, aggressive and progresive policy.

Town Sites Should be Taxed.

"Let me deal with other points, sir, that are hindering and retarding the progress of the north. Years ago this House unanimously decided that some recognition should be made by way of land grants to the volunteers for their services, but this House unanimously made the mistake of allowing such land grants to be taken up in different townships, and so long as they remained in the hands of the volunteer they remained untaxed. This retarded development and progress, and steps have been taken to remedy this evil. Why, then sir, should a similar mistake be made by this Government in connection with town sites? If the Province of Ontario is determined to own one out of every four town lots, then, I say, the Government should pay taxes on these lots. Why should the Province take the unearned increment, the increment earned by the hardy settler, and not join with the settlers the Governments should pay taxes in order that proper municipal improvements may be undertaken?

Prospectors' Rights.

"Then, again sir, the Government's extreme desire to make money out of the north is shown in its dealing with prospectors. When it was proposed to tax the prospector before he could go out and search for a mine, and the amount fixed by the Government was placed at $10, we on this side of the House vigorously opposed this, and argued that if it was requisite to charge any fee the fee should only be nominal. That $10 fee, I am glad to say, has since been reduced to $5. It should have been reduced to $1.

"Then, again, sir, if this prospector is fortunate enough to make a discovery, the Province charges him $10 for filing his claim, and $3 for transfer of the same. This is more than is charged in any of the old Provinces for a similar service."

Vote for a Square Deal.

Mr. MacKay concluded the interview with the following statement:

"If many of the electors of the townships are so slavish to party that they will not vote for Liberal candidates, let them at least pledge Conservative candidates to drop their slavery to party and to demand a square deal in educational matters. The Conservative members of the last two Legislatures sat behind the Government, swallowed their convictions and voted solid whenever the educational power, not on, but behind the throne, said: 'Thumbs up!'

"Let the electors of the villages towns and cities in seven-eighths of the Province take an independent stand with reference to the power question, and they will get justice.

Ontario's Milch Cow.

"Let the electors of our great northland unite and, regardless of party, say emphatically that a sweeping and comprehensive advance must be made in dealing with the colonization of our great hinterland; that this territory shall not longer be compelled to play the role of financial milch cow, but that northern Ontario must have a square deal. That plank of the Liberal platform of 1904 was right which said that this Province should have a Minister of Colonization and Labour. Commanding both viewpoints, he would not bring undesirable immigrants into unfair competition with skilled and semi-skilled labour in our towns and cities, while, on the other hand, he would ever have an open eye for the immigrant adapted to colonization purposes.

"Let the miners, for example, regardless of party, insist that eight hours' work underground where there is more or less impure air, is more wearing on the human system than is ten hours' work in the open, and therefore, as to his calling, eight hours' work should constitute a full day; let him pledge all candidates to such a just measure and he also will get a square deal.

"Let the report of the commission as to the state of the bilingual schools be published at once. Let us have the actual facts; and then we may discuss remedies.

"However, as the campaign progresses, all these and many other questions will be fully dealt with."

Mr. MacKay, in conclusion.

A YEAR INDOORS

"For thirteen months I was so bad with chronic indigestion that I could not go out of doors. Nerves were unstrung, the heart bad and smothering feelings came on till I thought I would choke. Doctors' treatment failed me, so I began the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, which I thank for my present good health. I am now doing my housework and have a family of ten."

Every Seat Was Sold

NEW YORK, OCT. 12.—To-day it was announced at the New York Baseball Club's offices that every reserved seat for Saturday's world's championship game between the Giants and Athletics had been sold.

In three hours' time 20,000 persons had passed into the building, with half as many standing in line on the sidewalks. It was said that 6,000 grand stand seats for Saturday's game at $2 and $3 each were disposed of, while nearly 25,000 seats for Tuesday's and Thursday's games were paid for before the supply was exhausted.

The speculators' agents soon turned over their tickets. The speculators readily obtained $8 for $3 seats and $5 for $2 tickets, and as the demand grin to form in Eighth Avenue at midnight soared until seats were purchasable at four and five times their face value.

President Brush said that he did not believe many of the boxes had been secured by speculators. He supervised the box sale personally and interviewed as many of the purchasers as possible. Nevertheless boxes were purchased at some of the hotels for $15 each for three games, while in one case a box was bought for $300. Conservative estimates placed the amount of money paid to the club and speculators for seats at Saturday's game at not less than $20,000. The club's gross receipts will foot up more than $90,000, it is believed, for this game alone, while the other games in three are played here, will net an enormous sum. Not more than 15,000 open stand seats at $1 each will be placed on sale at the Polo grounds Saturday morning at 9 o'clock and it is safe to say that the line will begin to form in Eighth Avenue at midnight. A furniture dealer in Harlem sold more than a hundred camp stools to-day to residents of that section, who intend to head the rush into the bleachers. It is estimated that the crowd Saturday will not exceed the 45,000 mark.

Major MacLaren Is Killed

Special to The Examiner.

BARRIE, OCT. 13.— Major D. A. MacLaren, of the Ninth Misaissuaga Horse, was thrown from his horse last night while returning from a military gathering in Vespre, sustaining brain concussion, resulting fatally this morning. He was a dentist by profession and very prominent in military life. He leaves a widow. His parents live in Hamilton.

NEW TIME TABLE

In the new time table issued by the Canadian Pacific Railway, which came into force on Oct. 8th, it will be noticed that there are several changes. The Toronto express which formerly left Peterborough for the west at 7.42 a.m., is now arriving from Tweed and departing at 7.47 a.m., five minutes later than formerly. The through express from Toronto arrives from the west and departs at 11.35a. m., instead of 11.28 a.m., a difference of seven minutes

A GREAT SPECTACLE

Although it has been found necessary to curtail somewhat the military portion of the Imperial Durbar to be held in Delhi in December, this great assemblage will afford a spectacle probably never before equalled, even in this home of Oriental display.

Delhi has for centuries been the chosen place for all great Indian celebrations. Here the Grand Moguls once held court, and when the British Government, after the mutiny, decided that it was impossible to continue to rule the country through "John Company," Queen Victoria was proclaimed Empress of India. Her son, King Edward, was 30 years later proclaimed Emperor in the same city, and now comes the turn of her grandson, King George.

He, is as well known, takes a more personal interest in Britain's colonial possessions than did his predecessors, and as a mark of this interest has decided to travel to India with his consort to be present at the ceremony which accompanies his formal assumption of the title of king-emperor. Thus, for the first time, India is to be visited by a ruling king-emperor.

ESCORTED BY CRUISERS

The King and Queen travel to India on the new liner Medina, which has been fitted up even more sumptuously than any royal yacht. The Medina will be escorted by four first-class cruisers, the Cochrane, Argyll, Defence and Natal, in command of Sir Colin Keppel, one of the captains of the royal yachts. This fleet will leave England about the middle of November, reaching Calcutta the first week of December. There will be an official reception at Calcutta and what promises to be a wonderful procession of military and the civil services, with Indian princes in their spectacular uniforms, along the Red Road to Government House. Two days will be spent here, their majesties taking train as soon as they have rested for Delhi, where they are due to arrive on Dec. 7th.

At Delhi the King and Queen will be received by 150 Indian princes, the Viceroy and Lady Hardinge, by who mthey will be accompanied through the city. The royal party will alight at a special station immediately opposite the historic King's Gate, which will be opened for the first time since 1857.

DURBAR BEGINS IN DECEMBER

The Durbar proper, or ceremonial gathering, will be held on Dec. 12th. The days preceding that will be given over to the reception of the Indian chiefs and princes, a review of troops, and on the day following the King will lay the foundation stone of the All-India King Edward memorial. The proclamation of the King-Emperor will take place in an arena surrounded by the brilliantly bedecked tents of the princes and other visitors, and in the presence of an immense assemblage of English and Indian subjects of King George. There is no crowning of the King and Queen, but in some respects, the ceremony will resemble that held in Westminster Abbey in June last. The King and Queen will be seated in a pavilion, brilliant in hangings of red, white and blue silk or satin embroidered in gold, in front of which the ruling Indian princes and higher British officials will be seated in a semi-circle, each Indian with his own banner floating over his chair.

THE VARIED CEREMONIES

Each in turn does homage to the King-Emperor with the strictest attention to formalities, which the Indian considers so important. Homage having been paid, the proclamation of the King's coronation will be read and his portrait displayed to the spectators, batteries will belch forth a salute of 101 guns, while the bands of the regiments, camped on the plain, will play the national anthem. The reading of the proclamation, display of the portrait and firing of salutes will be repeated in every town and village throughout India, while the after celebrations will take on many forms. Everywhere in the evening, however, there will be fireworks and illuminations. In Delhi itself the celebrations will extend over five days and include a military tournament, hockey and polo matches, garden fetes, races and many other forms of sports. From Delhi the King will proceed on a tiger hunt, while the Queen will visit a number of places of interest, including Agra. The cost to the Governments of England and India of the Durbar has been estimated at nearly $6,000,000, but this will be but a small portion of the amount that will be spent.

Toronto Conservatives Censure The Premier

The Toronto Star says: Open warfare has been declared by the Conservative executive of Ward One against the appointment of Hon. W. T. White as Finance Minister. At a meeting last night, with an attendance of 75, a resolution was passed unanimously, censuring Premier Borden for the appointment. The resolution was given to Hon. A. E. Kemp to present to the Premier personally.

In the speeches Sir James Whitney also came in for heavy criticism. It was declared that if he did not repudiate the charge that he had furthered the appointment of White, the Conservatives of Ward One would oppose Whitney candidates. There was a hint that all the eight local members would be opposed at the forthcoming elections.

Different speakers declared, amid applause, that wherever White ran, his election would be opposed to the bitter end.

Hon. Dr. Pyne was a visitor at the meeting.

It is understood that feeling is just as high in the other Wards as in Ward One.

Members of the executive of Ward One said they would give money and time to carry on a campaign against Mr. White. "It is a shame" said one of them, "that such a man, a Liberal all his life, should be given the plum of the office, with equally worthy Conservatives put on the shelf."

One speaker said that the appointment of Kemp was only a "sop" thrown out to try to appease Toronto. "And then," he said, "it was only a place without portfolio.

"If Sir James cannot clear himself he, too, will get a rude awakening at the elections." was another statement.

Anniversary Services Held

The anniversary services of the Bethany Presbyterian church were held on Sunday, October 8th, conducted by the Rev. George Brown, of Campbellford. They were very much appreciated by large congregations at both services.

Mr. Asa Huycke, of the Peterborough Music Co., sang at both the morning and evening service. In the morning his solo, "Face to Face," was ably rendered and well received. In the evening the congregation was again delighted to hear his splendid voice in "Beautiful Isle of Somewhere" and "The Palms."

Mr. Huycke has a beautiful baritone voice of great range and power. His rendition of "The Palms" especially pleased the congregation and afforded an opportunity to show his splendid control and enunciation. His return to Bethany will be heartily welcomed at any time.

POST CARD COLUMN

Peterborough, Oct. 12th, 1911.
To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—If Mr. Borden has not got as strong a cabinet together as his material could furnish, it is as strong and as tainted as we Liberals expected that he would be allowed to pick, on account of the classes and tactics his supporters used in order to place him in power. I hope we will be excused if we enjoy the discomfiture of his most ardent supporters in this district. Certainly we cannot be blamed for what has happened. We tried our best to warn them as to what to expect. The cabinet, as formed, is a bitter pill for some we know, but they will have to take their medicine, as we had to, upon the 21st of last month. Those indignation meetings that they have held, may help to soothe their feelings. We do not wish to be cruel by adding more pain, but at the same time it has always been hard for us to stand aside and see our fellow citizens deceived in such a shameful manner. This sympathy may be misplaced, but the joy I am experiencing, makes me feel as if we could afford to be charitable.

It is certainly too bad that circumstances prevent us from enjoying our representative explaining that the Toronto Telegram is wrong when it states that the Borden cabinet was picked according to the dictation of the clergy. Sir William MacKenzie and J. W. Flavelle (a great combination). Can he show from present appearances that the Fitz-Murphys will have to take a back seat. The Toronto Telegram expects more of this nature, as it styles the first move of the new government as Betrayal Number One. Let us, too, watch and wait.

JOHNNY CANUCK.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

Dear Sir,—I have been attending concerts for a good many years and cannot remember having a programme put into my hands that was not replete with typographical errors. But the prize blunder sheet was that used at the Sellars-Short concert, which contained no fewer than eight palpable typographical mistakes, of which this is a fair sample: "7. Toccata in P minor". In reading the proof the reader must have imagined that he was skipping over the playful vagaries of that style of musical composition. If compilers of programmes will not write names and technical terms plainly they should read the proofs themselves.

Yours, etc.,
Scherzo.

OBITUARY

JOHN CONNELL.

The death occurred in Cavan yesterday afternoon of John Connell of that town. The deceased had reached the good old age of seventy-five years. He was born in Frankiin and had lived there the major portion of his life, carrying on the farming industry. Some three years ago, however, owing to his advanced age, he retired and went to Cavan where he has since resided.

Mr. Connell was twice married. By his first wife he had two daughters and four sons, who all survive him. His second wife remains to mourn his demise, as well as two sons.

The funeral will take place at Cavan on Sunday afternoon.

ELIZABETH COLLINS.

Enniskmore lost one of its most well-known residents when Elizabeth Collins, daughter of the late John Collins of Lot 3, Con. 2, passed away at three o'clock this morning.

The deceased was a life-long resident of Enniskmore, and has many friends in the vicinity who were shocked to hear of her demise. However her end was not altogether unexpected as she had been ailing for a considerable period.

Miss Collins is survived by a sorrowing mother and 3 brothers, William and John of the homestead, Enniskmore, and Stephen of Ottawa.

The funeral will take place on Sunday afternoon; service at St. Martin's church at 3 o'clock, after which the funeral cortege will proceed to St. Martin's cemetery, for interment.

EDWARD CLANCY.

Further to the death in Fort William of Mr. Edward Clancy, formerly of Peterborough, it is now ascertained that the remains left Port Arthur at 10.30 last evening, and are expected to arrive in Peterborough either by the C. P. R. noon or evening train to-morrow (Saturday). The funeral arrangements have not yet been decided upon.

Mr. Clancy was born in Peterborough and became very popular with his many friends. He was engaged in the grocery business with Mr. William Collins of East City, for a period of no less than ten years. At the end of that time he left to carve out a career for himself in the West, and made his home in Fort William.

The deceased is survived by three brothers—Simon, Cornelius, and John, all of Peterborough. Five sisters also mourn his demise in the persons of Mrs. Wm. Collins, East City, Mrs. Gentle of Toronto, Mrs. Wade of New York, Sister Annie of the Annunciation, and Sister Dorothy, both of North Bay.

The Least Fuel, The Most Satisfaction.

When You Burn the Coal See That You Get the Value

It requires no argument to prove that the range you can use every part of, at the same time, is the range that will give you the full return for the fuel you burn. On the

HAPPY THOUGHT

Range you can use the oven and the top of the stove at the same time. While ironing you can have a batch of biscuits in the oven, and when baking you can prepare dinner without cooling the oven. This is the only way to keep down fuel bills and the only true range economy. The Patent Damper regulates the heat so that it can be used on any part of the range or on all the range.

Everywhere the Happy Thought, by its many labour-saving devices, is lightening the work of the housekeepers. Its efficiency is the result of the care taken to construct it and it amply justifies anything said in its favour by those who have used it.

'Twas His Brother.

Hon. J. J. Foy is Attorney-General for Ontario, and his brother, "Gus," is a police court clerk for Toronto.

It came to the ears of the police officials of Toronto that some of the city's Jews, who got out summonses, were making offers to the summoned ones to not press cases if money were paid to those who had got out the much-feared papers. That using of the papers as a club had to be stopped. The police officials decided that summonses would not be issued unless there was some clear evidence of the need for giving out the papers.

To "Gus" Foy fell the duty of refusing some of the men who wanted a summons. To the ones who were refused, that looked like injustice, so they got a deputation together, saw Hon. Mr. Foy and asked him to remove "that man" who refused to issue summonses. The Attorney-General listened carefully to the complaint and promised to look into it.

"Jakie" Cohen, one of Toronto's best known Jews, is a police magistrate for the city and knows well the condition of the Jews who believe they have occasion to go to the police court clerk.

So the Attorney-General had "Jakie" go to see him (and explain matters.

"By the way, who is 'that man' they want removed?" asked Mr. Foy.

Mr. Cohen smiled.

"Why," he said, "that's Gus."—Canadian Courier.

PROTECTING THE FISH.

Canada Has a Fleet of Sixteen Little Vessels.

In order to protect Canadian fisheries from the encroachment of foreign fishermen, and to protect insular waters from poaching, illegal fishing, and the use of prohibitive tackle and gear, the Dominion Government maintain a little navy of some sixteen vessels, of which little is known to the ordinary citizen. Armed with one or two quick-firing guns and searchlights, these little craft patrol their respective waters, and, besides their fishery protection duties, they are also the embodiment of Dominion law among the many citizens of the fishing world. With the Grand Bank fleets, the seiners, and the lobstermen of the east coast, and the white-fish trawlers of the Lakes and the salmon, herring and halibut fishermen of the Pacific, there is always to be seen trim little yellow-funnelled steamers cruising among the fishing craft pursuing their vocations. They are ubiquitous, and have an unhappy knack of turning up in unexpected places—a fact which makes the fish poacher's work exciting, and causes him to keep a watchful eye upon the horizon. As soon as the tell-tale smudge of smoke smears the sea line, he prefers to abandon trawls, seines and gear, and fly, to ranging on and trusting that the steamer's identity may be other than that of a fishery cruiser.

The finest vessel of the Protective fleet is the "Canada"—a small, third-class cruiser. She was the first vessel of Canada's navy, and is a twin screw vessel. Her speed is 17 knots, which makes her especially feared, as no sailing schoonor or fast steam trawler can get away from her, and, besides, she has other arguments in the shape of four 1-1-2 pound automatic quick-firing guns.

Her station is principally off the Nova Scotia coast and in the Gulf of St. Lawrence.

The cruiser Vigilant is employed upon the Great Lakes, and has been the means of capturing many of them while fishing within the three-mile limits. The Vigilant carries a crew of 30 officers and men.

In the Gulf and River St. Lawrence the cruiser Progress makes her patrols. The Curlew is also employed patrolling the Gulf of St. Lawrence and New Brunswick waters. And the Constance—a similar vessel to the Curlew—is employed around Prince Edward Island. She was built at Owen Sound in 1891.

The east coast of Nova Scotia station and Cape Breton Island is patrolled by the cruiser Petrel—a vessel of similar dimensions to the Curlew and Constance. During the season of 1909 she boarded American fishing vessels over one hundred and thirty times, and steamed over five thousand miles while on patrol.

Smaller vessels patrolling inshore waters of the east coast are the Hudson, 34 tons; Nelson, 19 tons; Thirty-Three, 79 tons; and the Ostrea, which is employed in the Prince Edward Island oyster culture service.

Upon the waters of Lake Winnipeg the screw steamer Lady of the Lake maintains the fishery laws.

Upon the Pacific waters of Canada are five fishery protection vessels, the largest of which is the wooden screw steamer Kestrel, built at Vancouver in 1903. She is 126 feet long, 24 feet beam, 12 feet deep, and 311 tons gross, with a mean sea speed of 10 knots. Although she is assisted by the smaller steamers Falcon, Georgia, Restless, and Alcedo, the Kestrel is probably the hardest worked fishery cruiser in the service. Not only employed in protecting the fisheries, the little cruiser is kept busy preventing smuggling, assisting at strandings, locating sunken wrecks, and inspecting life-saving stations and local customs houses along a mighty stretch of dangerous coast. It is to the credit of her officers and crew that in all her seven years' commission she has never had an accident.—Canadian Century.

THE BLACK DAGGER

A Story of China

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

Garland and Harpeth met on the Pacific liner Tropico, and from the first attraction of congenial natures there developed a warm personal liking. Garland was from the state of Maine, and Harpeth was a son of California. Out of 70,000,000 human souls fate had drawn these two, one from the east and the other from the west, to play the principal parts in a strange incident.

They had left the fairy islands of Japan far behind and were drawing near to the flat outline of the China coast.

"Are you going to stop over in Shanghai?" asked Garland, with a touch of Yankee inquisitiveness. "Haven't heard you say."

There was a little pause while Harpeth's eyes sought the rising coast line. "Possibly." He clipped the word rather sharply.

Garland glanced at him curiously. "You know I really didn't mean to pry into your affairs," he said apologetically. "It's rather a natural question for one tourist to ask another."

"Surely; no harm done," returned Harpeth quickly. "How about yourself—you going to stop over?"

It was Garland's turn to show embarrassment. The quick look of interrogation he flashed at his companion was met by Harpeth's expression of languid indifference. It was quite plain that Harpeth had asked the question merely to make conversation, not that he cared a rap about the matter.

"Maybe I'll stop over to see the city," said Garland.

Clumsy junks came teetering over the sea toward the mouth of the Yangste, but the Tropico left them far behind as she steamed up to her anchorage off Wusung and landed her eager passengers on to the little transfer tugs that would convey them up the tributary tidal river, the Huangpu, to hospitable Shanghai.

In the crowd Garland and Harpeth missed each other, accidentally or by design. Garland could scarcely wait for the tug to make her landing at the jetty before he was off and swinging away up the bund toward the hotel of his choice.

The electric lighted hotel, with its air of western luxury mingled with its quiet eastern service, impressed the Yankee wanderer most favorably, and he retired to his room and bath, whistling cheerfully at the prospect of the excellent dinner that he was sure awaited him below.

But when the meal was concluded and he had enjoyed the gastronomic delights which his fancy had conjured up he retired to the smoking room to pore over a queer little map drawn with brush strokes of india ink on mottled tissue paper.

It was an hour after midnight when he left the hotel and made his way along the bund to where a flight of stone steps led down to the river. Here were several sampans moored to the landing, and the coolies immediately fell to fighting for his patronage. He settled the matter by stepping into one of the little boats, and, being pounced upon by its delighted owner, he was soon paddled out into the stream, which glistened in the moonlight like molten silver.

"Kaoyang! Sabe?" he cried sharply. The coolie nodded his head and whirled the sampan about until it headed up stream. For a mile he paddled steadily with his long sweep-like oar and then suddenly ran the boat in between high banks on the north shore and grounded in the mud.

As if guided by some invisible hand, he who could not recollect ever having touched foot on this soil before sought for and found a narrow path winding upward to where a ruined temple crouched among a group of distorted wind blown cedars. The moon sent long rays down and here and there pierced the secret places with an illuminating touch. It showed Garland the outline of a dark arched opening, and he made for it fearlessly.

Just before he reached it he drew from his pocket the little map he had studied earlier in the evening and turned the flash from his pocket light upon it.

Pocketing the map and snapping off the light to hold it in his left hand while his right hand closed around a small repeating revolver, Garland plunged into the opening to find himself in the crooked passage, which was lighted down its length by the moon which hung above its roofless walls.

On either side of the white stone walls there stood out sharply the little black daggers, which seemed to point his way. Glancing to the right and left, he followed their guidance until one last circling curve of the passage brought him sharply up against another arched opening which gave forth a damp, earthy smell. On the stone post of the door was painted another black dagger pointing downward. Garland flashed on his lamp and saw a wriggling flight of broken stone steps dropping down into a black pit. For an instant he hesitated, and then, with a shrug of his shoulders, he stepped forward.

He counted twenty-seven steps in all before his feet touched soft earth. He extinguished his light for an instant and tried to pierce the darkness with his eyes.

Before he snapped on the light again he was startled in to rigidity by the sound of footsteps treading the passage overhead. They came rapidly with sharp, rapping clicks of leather boot heels on stone. This was not the soft padding of felted native slippers; it was the tread of a fearless man wearing European footgear or perhaps American boots like his own.

Garland moved backward and away from the steps until his back struck sharply against a cold wall. There he stood, a part of the enveloping blackness, while the footsteps stopped at the arched door, and then by the flare of a sputtering candle jammed in the neck of a soda water bottle Garland saw a pair of trousers descend the first few steps. Then as the man came down the candle flame lighted his shirt front and reached his chin just as a whiff of air from out of nowhere in particular extinguished the light.

"Dash it all!" muttered the man in English, and Garland felt a queer little thrill of relief that the interloper was not a Chinese.

After some fussing and a final exclamation of disgust because he failed to find another match about his person, the newcomer flung his candle aside and seemed to stop and consider the situation.

Perhaps he heard Garland's carefully controlled breathing, for suddenly he asked, "Who's there?"

Garland hesitated and then decided not to answer. Perhaps the stranger would go away now that he was without a light. In the meantime he would endeavor to reach his goal by edging along the wall against which he was leaning.

His feet made no sound in the soft earth, and he had made considerable progress when he became conscious of heavy breathing behind him, and he knew that the newcomer was following in his wake.

Garland reached an angle of the wall, followed it around, turned again and once again into a small square recess which had a window slanting upward to some cunningly contrived opening above ground which admitted the moonlight to throw a silver cloth over a stone table. On the stone table was a small shadowy slit perhaps the width of a dagger's blade.

The two men reached the table together and in the moonlight stared pantingly at each other. The moon lighted them up to their lips, and above that their faces were in darkness.

"If you've got a light for heaven's sake turn it on!" growled the newcomer impatiently, and Garland, as if it was the most natural thing in the world for him to have met a fellow white man on this secret errand of his, snapped on his lamp and threw its broad white beam across the face of—Harpeth.

"Garland," said Harpeth stupidly. And then with fierce suspicion he went on: "You followed me. I thought better of you than that, old man."

"I was here first," ejaculated Garland. "I'm blamed if I don't believe you're following me!"

"You had an errand here?" Harpeth put the question heatedly.

"Yes, and yours is probably the same," said Garland, with a trace of relief in his tones. "I was fearfully afraid somebody would find out and get the cinch on me, but somehow it's so confoundedly spooky down here I'm glad of company, even if it's a rival for"— He paused suggestively.

"The black dagger?" asked Harpeth quietly.

Garland nodded. "I guess you've met with Wah Sung Loo, haven't you? I saw him in Portland."

"And I in Los Angeles," admitted Harpeth. "Did he sell you information concerning the black dagger which contained one of the biggest emeralds in the world and which was concealed by one of his thieving ancestors in this spot? Did he tell you how you could reach it, and as he was dying and might never come back to this country he would sell a map of its location for $100? Well, he told me the same yarn, and I took a chance on it too. Since I started, however, I've had a thousand misgivings, the chief one being that the old rascal didn't believe the story himself. I believe that to him it was a tradition—nothing more, and he made money out of it."

"He stung me, too, and yet—I'm going to try for that black dagger, Harpeth. Here's the black dagger he gave me. I suppose you've got its mate. I'll just drop it in this slit. Well, by Jove, it touches something that's giving way! Now, what do you think of that?"

The table top swung up and slipped back into a recess disclosing a small square stone receptacle in which was crushed a heap of tattered yellow silk, which dropped to dust under their fingers. In the heap of dust was a dark object which Harpeth's fingers drew to the light. It was a small dagger of finely tempered steel, almost black in color. In the hilt was set the largest emerald the Americans had ever seen.

"It's a good thing it's big enough to divide, so we won't quarrel over it," said Garland, and the other nodded approval.

"I wonder if Wah Sung Loo knew this was here?" began Garland speculatively as they emerged into the open air.

"Never," interrupted Harpeth, with a grin. "Didn't believe it himself and thought he'd stung us for fair—hardly calculated we'd come out after it."

"I'm not sorry, though," chuckled Garland as they went back along the winding path to the river, where two sleepy coolies awaited them with sampans.

The Shattering of a Romance.

The tragic death of the well-known novelist, Myrtle Reed, author of "Lavender and Old Lace," and numerous other romances, recalls a rather interesting story of which a Toronto man was the hero.

Years ago, James Sidney McCullough was a high school pupil in Toronto. He was editor of the school paper which exchanged with some other college publications, including some across the line. One day the journalistic James was immensely struck by the editorial comment in a high school paper called "The Voice," from Chicago. He communicated with the writer. The Voice editor turned out to be a girl.

In Chicago the other day Myrtle Reed suicided. She left a fortune of $200,000. Some Canadian editors are trying to prove that she was far happier as Myrtle Reed, the high school writer in The Voice, than as one of the mostly widely read novelists in America.

An Odd Character.

James Cook, janitor of the Medical Faculty, McGill University, Montreal, who was known to hundreds of doctors and students throughout the Dominion, died recently. He was 68.

The Montreal Star, in a glowing tribute to the departed janitor, relates a peculiar yarn:

"He had one hobby—a gruesome hobby over which he chuckled, and over which grams and promoters shivered. He collected the professional door plates of deceased doctors, and he looked on every doctor who became connected with the institution as a coming contributor to his collection.

One of the first things he would do when a new professor was appointed was to ask him to bestow his door-plate on him when he died—for he had lived so long and through so many evolutions of McGill that he had come to look on himself as being the only indispensable part of the institution."

Happiness.

Happy the home that knows no wrath!
Happy the hearth where smiles abound!
Happy the man who never hath
A rubber plant to 'tote around!

STRONG TEAM READY FOR THE TORONTO CENTRALS

Back—Craig.
Right half—Denison (capt.)
Centre half—Minorgan.
Left half—Corkery or Eastwood.
Quarter—Johnston.
Centre scrimmage—Hill.
Right scrimmage—Ecclestone.
Right outside—Gilbert.
Spares—Leahy, Wallis, Stewart, Canniff, Kirs, Elliott.

The above West End line-up was announced this morning for to-morrow's Junior O.R.F.U. game at Riverside Park when the Toronto Central Y.M.C.A. team will meet the locals. As will be seen, the Peterborough team has been considerably changed and strengthened since the game with T.C.S. and as the players are in much better shape, not only physically, but as regards team work they are confident of giving the Toronto team a hard argument for the honours. The game is called for 2.30 and will be seen by a big crowd of fans.

The Peterborough team had a splendid workout at Riverside Park yesterday afternoon, when they lined up against the Collegiate Institute fourteen, whom they defeated by 22 to 5. There were a number of absentees from the West End line-up, but enough turned out to have a magnificent practice, and the players showed good form. The only regrettable feature of the workout was an injury to Corkery, the speedy left half of the West Ends, who had a ligament of his ankle torn in a hard tackle, and as a result may not be able to take part in to-morrow's game. If he is unable to play, his place at left half will be taken by Hubert Eastwood, captain of the Collegiate team who won his right to be considered by his grand playing against the West Ends yesterday. He made some startling runs during the game, scoring Collegiate's only points by a dazzling forty yards dash through a broken field, and his all-round work was good. Another man who earned a place on the line-up by his good playing yesterday was Hill, centre scrimmage of the Collegiate, who will fill a similar position against Toronto Centrals to-morrow. Hill is a centre scrimmage of the Jimmy Bell type, light and fast and tackles superbly. In spite of the posit ion he plays, he is one of the first men down the field under a kick. Minorgan's booting should help some to-morrow, and altogether the team looks strong enough to make things decidedly interesting for the luvaders.

It is hoped that there will be a big crowd on hand to-morrow. The management is under heavy expense with a trip to Toronto next week and good support to-morrow will be appreciated.

All the above mentioned players are expected to be at Central Park to-night at 7.15 o'clock for a signal practice. It is important that there should be a full turnout.

ANOTHER ENTRY FOR THE SENIOR EXAMINER RACE

Another new entry for the Examiner road race has turned up in the person of J. Worthley, of Ennismore, who has been second to Albert Smoke in a number of races during the past summer, and who feels that he has a good chance of carrying off the Examiner silverware in the Thanksgiving Day race as he has been training for some time and is in the best of condition.

Worthley was second to Smoke in the ten mile Marathon in connection with the Ennismore picnic and he was in second place in the one mile race on the same day. Worthley made a good showing in the five mile race at the Labour Day sports here and must be considered as a dangerous contender.

Entries continue to come in for the Examiner junior race and there promises to be a classy field of youngsters in line for the five mile event. A number of the juniors apparently are not aware of the new rule this year that requires junior runners to be at least fourteen. A number of entries have been refused from boys under the fourteen mark. One of these was nine and another ten. The Examiner is of the opinion that the strain on boys of that age in a five mile race is too severe and therefore has altered the rules so as to confine the contest to boys of a more mature age.

WHAT TWO CHAMPION BALL TEAMS THINK OF THEIR CHANCES IN SERIES

NEW YORK, OCT. 12. — Christy Mathewson donned his baseball togs, drew on his pitching glove, and calling on Catcher Hartley strolled out on the Polo grounds this morning to take up his daily pitching practice. The big blonde twirler quite agrees with Manager McGraw and Mack that the world's series between the New York Nationals and the Philadelphia Americans is a problem of pitchers and for this reason the Giants' slabmen are keeping in the best possible condition.

The Giants themselves say that Matty is their mainstay and upon him depends largely the result of the series, with the hope that Marquard, the season's sensational left-hander in the National League, may come through with a victory or two to clinch the series for the home team.

'I' know just what the team and the home crowd expect of me," said Mathewson, "but my work is necessarily defensive and it is up to my team-mates to make the runs.

"My condition? Well, I feel first rate and on edge for the series, but you must know that in this game that 'breaks' or luck must play a big part."

Marquard is Ready.

Marquard thinks he is ready and will have the old speed and jump to his ball that made him invincible while the Giants were making their successful dash for the pennant in August and September. Without speed Marquard admits he has no terrors for even a minor league team.

"But I will have the speed and the curve will jump, and hook over the plate all right," said Marquard today putting in a little practice just to keep their curves working and perfect their control. Marquard has won twenty-four and lost six games this year and leads the National I ague. Mathewson, notwithstanding his slump in mid-season has won twenty-five and been defeated thirteen games.

PHILADELPHIA, OCT. 12. — The Philadelphia Athletics returned to the home grounds to-day from their trip to Washington and Richmond and this afternoon will play the All-Stars in the final tuning up prior to the big series with the New York Giants to-morrow (Saturday). Most of the players were at Shibe Park early keeping their arms in shape and their eye on the ball.

Connie Mack as usual had little to say, but expressed himself as confident of the outcome of the big series. He did not show any anxiety about the condition of his stars. Stuffy McInnes, the nervy young first baseman, who came from the hardy fisher-folk of Gloucester, Mass., will be in the world's series. His injured wrist is mending rapidly and is now strong enough for him to get into practice.

Working Early.

In to-day's game Pitchers Bender, Coombs and Plank will work three innings each. They are not letting themselves out, merely keeping their arms limbered up and practicing cutting off corner of plate. None of the players are expected to kill themselves to-day to score runs.

To-morrow will be a day of physical rest ,but every man will be on hand for a council-of-war in the inner sanctum of their commander high up in the tower of Shibe Park. New signals will be devised, schemes for stopping the fleet-footed Giants on the bases and all possible situations that can come up in a baseball game and plans that can meet them. Collins and Barry, the quick-witted infielders, are expected to "pull off" things if they get an opportunity. Both are masters at inside play. Reserved seats for the first two games to be played in this city are out today.

This Hurts.

Despite the fact that the club has repeatedly published statements that no more reserved seats are to be had the demand for the coveted pasteboard continues. After the tickets are distributed the force of clerks at the Park will be busy themselves returning tens of thousands of dollars to applicants for tickets who would not be accommodated.

St. James' Won 3-0

St. James' gave All Saints the biggest surprise of the season Saturday, when All Saints were well beaten to the tune of three goals to nil. The "Jimmies" return to form was mainly due to Harry Jancawski, who partnered "Scotty" Gribb ,at back, allowing Captain Braun to take Harry Sandiford's place at right half. Gribb and Braun had a fine understanding, and held the best left wing that Peterborough can produce in good style; Lawerence partnered Wag. Hotston on the right wing, and his well-timed passes and unselfish feeding of Turner contributed largely to the success of "Jimmies."

The first half was most evenly fought out, the ball visiting each goal in turn, both sides passing well, only to be brought up by a sound defence at each end. Moriaty brought off some fine saves, and when Ted. Hotston, who made his first appearance this season ,beat him, he had no earthly chance, the ball hitting the cross-bar, and bounded through.

Turner scored the second goal from three yards' range, placing the ball out of Reuben's reach. Hull and Gamble played a fine game, the latter shining better than his partner. Simmonite was kicked by Dawson early in the game, and though he was unable to play his usual game, he did some good work. At half-time the score was 2-0 in favour of St. James'. After the interval All Saints attacked hotly, but the "Jimmies" defence was equal to every demand put upon them, Jackson and Gribb clearing well and cleanly, a marked contrast to Hull, whose methods would have been more in keeping with the prize ring than the football field. St. James seemed to have the upper hand of their opponents, and Moriaty distinguished himself several times by his fine goal keeping. The third goal was scored in sensational style. Jackson got the ball near St. James' goal, and dribbled well down the field, and at 40 yards' range sent in a dropping shot, which deceived Moriaty, who got his hand to it, but couldn't hold it.

All Saints tried hard for a goal, but they couldn't manage it. Dawson had a good chance, but shot high. St. James' then took up the running and when the Referee's whistle blew for the close of hostilities they were still pressing.

Mr. W. Barny handled the game in good style; that well-known sport, E. Hooper expressed his satisfaction at the way he did his work.

Next week St. James' are "at home" to Park street, the team of all the talents." It is rumoured that they have secured the services of "Billy" Millburn and W. Boyoots, of "Quaker" fame. While "Jimmies" wouldn't dare to dream of beating a team which has so many C. G.E. stars in its ranks, they will try to give "Casey's Crush" a run for their money.

GOLF

The match for the President's prize for mixed foursomes will take place to-morrow (Saturday) afternoon. Contestants are requested to be at the Club House not later than 1.45. This will enable the draw to be made early. The players are invited to tea, as the guests of the President, after the match. This is a handicap match.

Little Betting On Series

NEW YORK, OCT. 12.—After to-day's battle between the Giants and Brooklyn, and the set-to between the All-Stars and the Athletics, the warriors from the tribes of McGraw and Mack will impatiently await the coming of to-morrow afternoon for the initial clash of the series which will decide who shall have the honour of flying the world's championship emblem. And each camp is confident.

With the exception of McInnes and Doyle, each team is ready. There is still doubt whether these two stars will be able to play. "Baby" McInnes is laid up with the ligaments of his right wrist badly torn, the result of being hit by a pitched ball during the last Detroit series. Doyle is nursing his ankle, which turned on him in Monday's game in Brooklyn. But the two "Macs" believed that their injured players will be in the line-up when play is called for the opener.

Notwithstanding that all fandom admits the series will be one of the most spectacular ever fought, there is very little betting on the ultimate result. Each team has its host of admirers, but they are not backing their choices with cash. A month ago the Athletics were 8 to 5 favourites. But when the Giants began their winning spurt the odds gradually shaded, until to-day even money is being wagered at that.

Some wagers have been made on the Giants winning the opening clash, but this is on the dope that they will have an advantage in playing the first game on their home grounds. The bettors are "laying' 'low. They are trying to figure out the advantage each team has over the other. They figure that the Athletics have out-hit and out-fielded the Giants, that the Giants have outrun the Athletics, but they believe that it will be up to the box-men when it comes to victory. And inability to dope out the opposing pitchers has kept the batters in the background.

A few wagers have been made on one team out-hitting the other, on individual players of one team excelling those on the other, on Mathewson Marquard, Bender, or Coombs winning their first start, but on the ultimate result the bettors are tightwads.

BASE BALL WRITERS AT THE SERIES

NEW YORK, OCT. 7.—Three hundred skilled baseball writers and artists will be called upon to appease, throughout the country, the whetted appetite of thousands for news of the premier event of the national pastime, the world's baseball series, which commences here next Saturday between the Giants and the Athletics. From all parts of America baseball experts have applied for seats at the games here and in Philadelphia, and the national commission has set aside a section of the grand stand for reporters. Scores of telegraph wires will be used to transmit the progress of the contests, play by play. Besides the regular corps of baseball writers, several prominent baseball players have been engaged to report the games. Their accounts of the day's game written and filed, the newspaper men will entrain for the next scene of battle. Last year the correspondents traveled between Philadelphia and Chicago in a special train with the national commission and players, but the proximity of the two contesting cities this year makes the jumps easier. The greatest crowds that ever packed a ball yard are expected to attend the games this year. Just 124,422 persons saw the series last year. The new Brush stadium at the Polo grounds, filled to capacity, will hold approximately fifty thousand spectators, and the grounds of Shibe field can accommodate about thirty thousand. To handle the immense crowds special detachments of police have been ordered. Hundreds of enthusiasts will stand in line all night to obtain the unreserved seats, and as the hour draws near for the game, the crush will grow larger and larger. Ambulances with hospital surgeons will be on hand to take care of any injured.

"We expect to handle the greatest crowd that ever cheered for the home team, and do it without semblance of disorder, and to the satisfaction of those who come," said President John T. Brush, of the Giants.

Will Close Earlier.

CHICAGO, OCT. 7.—There will be no more late finishes to the National League, according to Ban B. Johnson, of the American league, who returned from New York yesterday. Likewise, the playing of the world's series battles will start fully a week earlier than the dates selected for the world's championship this year. Johnson not only said that the American league was anxious to close up the championship season before bad weather comes, but added that the National league magnates for the most part are convinced of the folly of closing as late as October 12. This will also mean that both major leagues will be closed simultaneously, and not on different dates, as is the case this year, the American ringing down the curtain to-morrow and the National league delaying the final until October 12. It is said early closing will not necessitate the advancement of the opening in the spring. It will simply be a ease of eliminating a number of open dates.

Wagon Load of Requests.

PHILADELPHIA, OCT. 7. — The management of the Philadelphia Athletics has been overwhelmed with requests for world's series baseball tickets, and so enormous has been the demand that it has thrown up its hands and has announced that there are no more for sale. Under the rules laid down by the national commission, tickets for only the first two games in this city, were placed on sale by mail. Following the public announcement in the newspapers yesterday morning how to secure these, the postal authorities dumped down a wagon load of mail into the Shibe park office yesterday afternoon and last evening. A superficial examination of this mail shows that the applications for seats far exceed the capacity of the grounds. The out-of-town requests will be laid aside and those applications which bore the Philadelphia postmark were given first consideration.

JEWELLERY SILVERWARE

AN OLD CHURCH.

St. Andrew's, Niagara-on-the-Lake, Built 117 Years Ago.

St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Niagara-on-the-Lake, which celebrated its 117th anniversary recently, besides a record of longevity, has a history full of unusual incidents, and has been intimately connected with important national events. It is today one of the most interesting spots in the province.

During the war of 1812-14 the building was burned, in September, some months before the town was destroyed by the enemy, in December, 1813. The congregation met for some years in the schoolhouse, which was repaired for this purpose. In this building was held the first Sunday School in the town, all denominations taking part. The Rev. John Burns, the first teacher of the Grammar School, was the pastor at intervals from 1804 to 1817, preaching alternately there and at Stamford.

In 1830, a subscription for a new church was started, which reached £760, the building to seat 600. This is the solid brick structure now standing with old-fashioned square pews and a high, handsome pulpit, perhaps the only one of the kind in the province.

The old church, though still in good preservation, has had many rude shocks to sustain—the roof taken off by a tornado, twice struck by lightning. Its people have had many a struggle to maintain the house of God built by their fathers.

It was remarked that although on the north wall a tablet is placed with the words "The Minister's burying place," in all the hundred and seventeen years, no minister of the church has died in the town, and the plot is empty, but for an infant of a day.

St. Andrew's has never had a load of debt in the eighty years of the existence of the present church, and it was not intended to use the present occasion for raising money, but a summer resident with a generous heart asked if there was any debt, and being told the amount, $350, offered, if the congregation would raise half the amount he would provide the other half. A subscription was opened in the congregation, which was liberally and heartily responded to. Besides this the collection in the church was large, and the treasurer announced that over $500 was contributed in all.

The Eskimo Sealer.

The Eskimo method of hunting seals shows a primitive calling improved to a fine art. When a seal is discovered the direction of the wind is at once noted. Then the hunter, keeping himself to the leeward of the seal, walks up to within about a quarter of a mile of it. Beyond this he begins to crouch and advances only when the seal's head is down.

Now, as the seal is one of the most wide-awake of animals and has the habit of throwing up its head quickly every few seconds to guard against danger, it follows that the Eskimo has to be extremely alert if he would get his seal. When the seal's head is down upon the ice its eyes are shut, and it is said that in these brief intervals it takes its sleep.

The hunter, by carefully watching the seal's movements, is able without much difficulty to get within about two hundred yards of it. At this distance he is obliged to employ other tactics. He lies down at full length on the ice. Then the real sport begins.

When the seal's head is down the hunter, who keeps a keen eye on his prey, is able to approach still nearer by dragging himself forward on his elbows. This manoeuvering continues for some time, until the distance between man and beast has been reduced to a few yards.

When near enough to make a sure shot, the Eskima takes his bow and arrow from his side and sends a swift shaft through the head of his outwitted companion. Sometimes, instead of the bow and arrow, a harpoon is used with equal effect.

Valuable Concessions.

The far-sightedness of the old Hudson Bay factors in selecting land and posts at the most strategic points, is now reaping fortunes for the company. One hundred acres selected at Winnipeg brought an enormous amount.

It is interesting to review the condition under which the Hudson Bay Co. secured this land from the Dominion Government.

Under the deed of surrender dated July 15th, 1870, the Hudson Bay Co. relinquished all their rights in the Northwest. In lieu of this the Dominion Government gave them $1,500,000, and allowed them to select one twentieth of all the surveyed land in the Northwest, south of Saskatchewan River at Edmonton, giving them 50 years in which to select this.

And forty years of the fifty-year term have elapsed, and the company have still many thousands of acres of this land to select.

In addition to the above grant, the company was allowed to select 50,000 acres around all its posts in the Northwest. This land was to be laid out and located within twelve months from the date of surrender. This means that the land around the posts was to be selected by July, 1871.

Of the 50,000 acres, the company located only 45,160 acres. Whether the company still have the right to select the balance, 4,840 acres, is a matter that is being now argued at Ottawa.

Montreal Harbor is Growing.

Figures furnished by the harbor commissioners show that from the opening of navigation until August 1, the commissioners' elevator handled 8,336,001 bushels of wheat. During the coresponding period of last year, the wheat handled amounted to 7,988,777 bushels.

Moosejaw's Big Bill.

Four hundred thousand dollars for a small city like Moosejaw, Sask., seems a huge amount to expend on one civic improvement in one year. But that is the sum issuing out of the civic treasury for a new sewage system plant to be ready this fall, and guaranteed to make sewage water as pure as drinking water.

BASEBALL SCORES.

Odd Way the Plays Were Recorded Back in the Sixties.

The baseball public of today, accustomed to the minute reporting of games, wherein each run is compounded and many a play analysed, is offered the account of a game played in Syracuse in 1868. The contestants were the Central Citys of Syracuse and the Athletics of Philadelphia, and the score was 41 to 12.

The game was delayed a half hour by the difficulty in finding an umpire. Then the report goes on to state:

"The game opened loosely upon both sides, and at the end of the first innings the score stood Athletics 5, Central City 4, each side making its tallies promptly from the loose playing of the out club. After the first inning the Athletics played more carefully, while the Central Citys grew more careless until the fifth inning, when they became more demoralised than was the Union army at the battle of Bull Run.

"Considerable dissatisfaction was manifested and expressed, and in two innings rightfully so, at the evident one sided decisions of the umpire.

"We will not particularize, but suffice to say that several of the players on both sides did well, while others, especially the Central City side, were not fully up to their standard efforts. The following is the Willie Obeyed Orders.

She was a woman of very Puritanical notions, and when she came into his room to kiss her little boy good night and found that he had not said his prayers she was very much shocked.

"How was it, Willie," she asked, "that you neglected such an important duty?"

"You see, mamma," he replied, "when dad sent me to bed in a hurry he said there mustn't be another word out of me to-night."

KIT'S COLUMN

Of course I shall be accused of "favouring" (and no doubt "flavouring") everything Irish if I attempt to give the correct derivation of the term or word "Tory," a request preferred by one who found himself "on the wrong side of politics" in the recent elections. It may, however console a somewhat dejected Liberal to be told that according to Mr. Lecky "the Tory was originally an Irish robber, and the term applied by Titus Oates to the disbelievers in the popish plot." De Foe goes farther, and states that the Tories were robbers who preyed upon their country without distinction of "English or Irish." In fact, a Tory was just a plain thief without the saving grace of a distinct nationality of his own. It is an Irish fancy, however that the word is derived from the Celtic "Taobh, rish," the king's party —or partizans of the king. Macaulay says generally that the name was first bestowed in England upon those who refused to concur in excluding James II from the throne. He also adds the legend that the boys of Ireland "afforded a refuge to popish outlaws called Tories." It is not unnatural to suppose that the Whigs applied the term as one of reproach to their opponents and thus established it as a political title. The same authority which asserts a Tory to mean "Irish robber," adds that in enforcing their claims on travelers these gentry used the word "torees!" which was the equivalent of the 'stand and deliver" of the more polished gentlemen of the road. Be that as it may, this was exactly what the Tories of Canada said the other day when they demanded that the political keys of the country be handed over to them—all of which may console our enquiring Reformer, who no doubt will not unwillingly hear his opponents branded as "thieves and rascals."

But let us turn to the derivation of Whig, although it is not often that you will hear the aCnadian Liberals called by that name. If Tory comes from Ireland, Whig is certainly Scotch. Whiggam was a Scottish term used in driving horses; the drivers being thence called "whiggamores," which naturally contracts to whigs. But again ,"whiggam" is a corruption of "ugham," which was the name of a particularly accommodating kind of a pack saddle used by Scottish freebooters for the stowage of their plunder. Thus a whiggamore denoted a pack saddle thief. I am afraid we cannot get away from a common origin for the terms Whig and Tory, and these had perhaps been better left in obscurity. From "Tory" there has been built the worthy structure called Conservative ,due, I believe, to an article in the Quarterly written about the year 1830, wherein the term Tory is "with more propriety" alluded to as the Conservative party. Whig, too, has become "Liberal," or "Grit"—a name that has some sand in it and sand ,as we know, is good material for building purposes. Taken together, both parties are fairly well named, which is a cryptic saying that you may take anyway you feel inclined.

"Girls are not what they used to be in my young days," said the very old lady. "No: nor boys either. Those were the good old times." Whereupon she wagged her head comfortably.

You have met people like the very old lady—or that dreadful old Jack in the Box, the Oldest Inhabitant, who bobs up with "T'aint so hot a summer as we had in '76. That was hot if you like." When you can't sleep or eat for heat—people who hint at the degeneracy of the present day and love to talk of the good old times when there was no electricity or horseless carriages or "bird machines" and people lived with the fear of God in their hearts. You take a blink over your shoulder at the good old times or what you've heard of them. There were the old coaching days before railways, when it took my dear mother five days and six nights to go from Connemará to Dublin to dance at her coming-out ball with the 'English officers' — how the Irish girls dote on the red coats! Think of five slow days where it now takes five hours and jogging in a coach at that with your hair in curl papers under a poke bonnet like Fanny Squeers! And she used to tell it—with positive affection for those "good old times" —when we would all be getting ready for a dash to the express train! Think of the good old times of candles; think of Cranford old times, of patten and corkscrew curls, and hoops instead of bobbles. Think of the dinners they used to eat, the punch they used to brew (and drink) in mighty punch bowls, the three-bottle men who finished the repast among the legs of the table, the girls who swooned at the sight of a mouse and simpered "Ask Papa" when "He proposed." No tennis ,no golfing, no motoring, and every girl protected by an iron clad chaperon .And yet—and yet—they were courted and loved, and married, despite the ironclad, or a fleet of her—and the babies were born in the chintzy rooms with the diamond-paned lattices, and people died and were buried and the world wagged on. And old people even then talked of "the good old times" just as they do now, and as we will presently. And other people yet to come will look back and laugh and wonder about our "old times" when people traveled by rail, and sent messages by telegraph and talked through telephones. Antiquated, dear old people, they will call us, "with their slow old ways!" Time's revenges are well known, and not the least of them is the certain fact that you, my dear young lady, will one day sit comfortably wagging your head and telling your granddaughter that "girls are not what they used to be in my young days," and she will be quite as unsympathetic as you are to-day. You who are now wearing a narrow, slimsy gown, and pretty high-heeled shoes will be discussing—at eighty—ancient history with a young and careless person dressed in the attire of the moment—it may be a suit of a gentlemanly cut—and you will talk of the "good old times" when all the world was young because you were, and the best I can wish you, my dear —which I do from my heart—is that you may be there to say it all, and she to hear it. We do not change so much after all. We roll round in a circle with many things, among them Memory and Hope—Yesterday and To-morrow.

And talking of the "oldest inhabitant" brings to mind that the "oldest Indian of them all" predicts for us the incoming of winter on the 16th of this month with a "heavy fall of snow." Nor will there be any let up, continues this weather-beaten old prophet; no fine days in late November such as we remember with gratitude when the January snows are with us; no Indian summer; nothing but the hardest sort of weather. The latter days of September were chilly, and October came in with raw winds but winter so soon!—and long months of it! Let us for once hope that the Indian sage will prove a false prophet.

The Koh-i-noor is going to India for the first time since it was brought

There has been a great crusade by the churches to muzzle the little dog, but no movement against the big brute.—London Opinion.

thence. How superstition holds the world after all! No man in India who values his luck may wear a diamond. When King Edward was about to weave the great Koh-i-noor among the jewels in his crown the leading men of India petitioned him to have nothing to do with it. Since a diamond brings luck to a woman, he gave it to Queen Alexandria, and now it has passed into the keeping of Quen Mary. Death and disaster follow the man who wears diamonds, according to Indian legend, and even royalty bows before the superstition. Five thousand years ago the Koh-i-noor blazed on the head of an Indian emperor. He braved fate; and the hag betrayed him. The wonder-jewel became the treasure of the Punjaub. When the British annexed the Punjaub in 1849, and the property of the state was confiscated to the Great East India Company, the famous diamond was sent to Queen Victoria, thus giving point to the saying "Who holds the Koh-i-noor, holds India." It is not supposed to be a lucky stone, and some ominous story is attached to its returning to India. But the queen is going to wear it at the Durbar. It is by no means the finest diamond in the world, as some suppose. It was unfortunately re-cut and reduced from 186 to 108 carats, which made it shallow and lessened its brilliance, but it is romantic and historic and weighted with legend. The queen will also wear a big diamond lotus, now being cut for her, as well as the splendid pearl necklace India gave her when she was princess of Wales. There are in it, black, pink, mauve, bronze, and yellow pearls, but the "pearl of great price," that which hangs in the centre, is a big gray pearl whose mate has never been found.

The old man picked his way among the fallen apples across the sunlit orchard. His ruddy, wrinkled, quaint face was not saddened by any of life's storms, though it was marked. His blue eye was keen and wholesome, his bearing independent. From his little sack he brought a bit of well painted woodland. You could see at a glance that he had the gift of understanding trees—those strange people of the forest whom Dore held had woodland souls of their own. There was no creative art in the old man. He was only a copyist, but an accurate one—and he had that gift of woodland interpretation. His trees lived and lifted tall arms to the wind and the sun, He liked to be independent, he said, so painted a bit from postcards and tramped through the country selling from door to door. A sympathetic word or two, and from him burst his philosophy of life. No mere creedist this, but a simple man living in God's world, and believing in the fatherhood of God over us all. "God fixed everything for use before we came," he said, after a slight narration of a grim jest or two that Life had played him. He didn't care where he went or where they would lay him when he passed, for, he argued, "it was all right." He would go back whence he came, or on to better pastures. God knew. For had He not made everything ready for the hand of man before He made man. He was busy a long time preparing the way for us. God even laid by a store of coal "thousands and thousands of years ago in the bowels of the earth so it would be there for us." That was his great argument in regard to the First Cause. The origin of species did not interest him. He had no concern with that. All that he was certain of was that everything was made for Man—the sun and stars and the whole system of nature, but especially the coal. The old artist must have felt the pinch of the cold more than once in his time. His soul glowed coalward towards those bowels of the earth wherein God had stored the fuel. That to him fully explained God's fatherhood. His blessed forethought. So the old man walked sturdily along the road of Life feeling that he was being taken care of. He did what he could. He painted his bits of pictures and sold them through the countryside. I do not think that going to church appealed to him as being absolutely necessary to salvation. He found God everywhere. He saw Him in everything, in the fields and the woods; in the sunny weather and the rainy weather, and especially in the cold weather. "The Lord will provide." That was his gospel. There was God, and him, the Man, and in the deep bosom of the earth there was the coal. Creed or dogma, high church, or low church; modernity or materialism, all were naught to him. Rain or shine this old child went his artless way. He was a perfect, a living illustration of Browning's as he stood there with the sunshine glinting in his sane and wholesome blue eye and warming his mellow cheek.

ST. VITUS DANCE

Cured Through the Use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills

Chorea, or as it is more generally known, St. Vitus' dance, is a disease that usually attacks the young children, though older persons may be afflicted with it. Its most common symptoms are a twitching of the muscles of the face and limbs. As the disease progresses this twitching takes the form of spasms in which the jerking motion may be confined to the head, or all the limbs may be affected. The patient is frequently unable to hold anything in the hands or to walk steadily, and in severe cases even the speech is affected. The disease is due to debility of the nerves and is always cured by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, which enrich the blood, tone and strengthen the nerves and thus restore the sufferer to good health. The following is a striking instance of what Dr. Williams' Pink Pills will do in this trouble. Mrs. Chas. Phillips, Pelee Island, Ont., says:—"At the age of fourteen my eldest daughter, Edith, became much run down, and the trouble developed into St. Vitus' dance. First her left arm became affected, then the left leg and entire left side. She grew so bad that she actually could not hold anything in her hand, and could only go about with a sliding, jerking motion. Notwithstanding that we were giving her medicine, she seemed to be growing worse, and finally her speech became much affected. We became so much alarmed about her that finally her father got a supply of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and we begun giving her these. In the course of a few weeks she was much better, and before all the pills were gone she was again enjoying perfect health. This was in 1908, and as she has not had a symptom of the trouble since I feel justified in saying the cure is permanent."

Be sure you get the genuine pills which are sold by all medicine dealers or may be had at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Golden Text.—He retaineth not his anger forever, because he delighteth in mercy. Micah, vii:18.
(1) Verses 1-2—Who was King Cyrus and what were his character and achievements?
(2) Where were the Jews as a people, at the opening of this lesson and what were the circumstances which took them there?
(3) How do you account for it that Cyrus, immediately when he began to reign over Babylon decided to release the Jewish captives and to rebuild the Temple at Jerusalem.
(4) What reason can you assign for a king, not a Jew, having such a direct message from God?
(5) If the religious history of every nation from the beginning of time could be fully known, should we have in essence a repetition of Bible history?
(6) Verses 3-4—What class of people do we depend on chiefly, to build churches and support missionaries?
(7) What motive does Cyrus appeal to, for building the Temple at Jerusalem?
(8) What good is accomplished by the vast sums of money spent in building and supporting churches?
(9) If all people are obligated to give money to support the cause of religion, what is the least they should give?
(10) Verses 5-6—Are ministers today under obligations to take the lead by precept and example in religious enterprises, without waiting for any special spiritual leading?
(11) When persons willingly help in God's cause, are they without exception, "them whose spirit God had raised"
(12) When we undertake giving or doing for the cause of God, why is it safe to conclude that God specially appointed us thereto?
(13) Verses 7-11—What in brief, were the circumstances which brought the gold and silver vessels to Babylon from the first Temple at Jerusalem?
(14) When a man gives lavishly of precious treasure to the cause of God is that always, or generally, a proof of his love for God?
(15) Chapter II. Verses 64-70 — What number of people returned to Jerusalem, and what was the number originally carried away to Babylon by Nebuchadnezzar? (See 2 Kings xxiv:14).
(16) What were the religious and financial conditions of the people, when they were originally deported, and when they returned?
(17) What general effect had their captivity had upon them?
(18) Which ministers more to the character of the average man, prosperity or adversity? (This is one of the questions that may be answered in writing by members of the club).

W. F. M. S.

The W. F. M. S. Auxiliary of St. Paul's Church held a very successful annual thankoffering meeting last evening.

The meeting opened with devotional exercises at which Miss Dickson presided. The Secretary read her report, and the Treasurer read her statement.

Mrs. Rollins followed with a splendid address. She took for her subject: "The Spirit of Prayer," and gave Abraham as an example. The speaker emphasized the need at the present time of prayer, in order to carry on the work.

An interesting paper on thanksgiving was given by Mrs. Mowat, who based her thoughts on Bible examples and applied them to the assembly.

The proceedings were interspersed and enlivened by two charming vocal solos by Mrs. Dickson Hall and Miss Chalmers ,and the thankoffering reached the very satisfactory sum of $604.95.

The Rev. Mr. Pogue closed the meeting with the benediction.

Autumn is the Time — FOR — GLASSES
WHY?
The increasingly long evenings of Autumn give greater opportunity for Sewing, Writing, Reading, Study, and as this is necessarily by artificial light the strain upon the eyes is such as to make Glasses quite a boon at this season of the year. This no doubt accounts for much of the present increased demand for Glasses.
Appointment for examining the eyes for Glasses is usually necessary.

KIT'S COLUMN

Of course I shall be accused of "favouring" (and no doubt "flavouring") everything Irish if I attempt to give the correct derivation of the term or word "Tory," a request preferred by one who found himself "on the wrong side of politics" in the recent elections. It may, however console a somewhat dejected Liberal to be told that according to Mr. Lecky "the Tory was originally an Irish robber, and the term applied by Titus Oates to the disbelievers in the popish plot." Defoe goes farther, and states that the Tories were robbers who preyed upon their country without distinction of "English or Irish." In fact, a Tory was just a plain thief without the saving grace of a distinct nationality of his own. It is an Irish fancy, however that the word is derived from the Celtic "Taobh, rizh," the king's party —or partizans of the king. Macaulay says generally that the name was first bestowed in England upon those who refused to concur in excluding James II from the throne. He also adds the legend that the boys of Ireland "afforded a refuge to popish outlaws called Tories." It is not unnatural to suppose that the Whigs applied the term as one of reproach to their opponents and thus established it as a political title. The same authority which asserts a Tory to mean "Irish robber," adds that in enforcing their claims on travelers these gentry used the word "toree!" which was the equivalent of the "stand and deliver" of the more polished gentlemen of the road. Be that as it may, this was exactly what the Tories of Canada said the other day when they demanded that the political keys of the country be handed over to them—all of which may console our enquiring Reformer, who no doubt will not unwillingly hear his opponents branded as "thieves and rascals."

But let us turn to the derivation of Whig, although it is not often that you will hear the aCnadian Liberals called by that name. If Tory comes from Ireland, Whig is certainly Scotch. Whiggam was a Scottish term used in driving horses; the drivers being thence called "whiggamores," which naturally contracts to whigs. But again ,"whiggam" is a corruption of "ugham," which was the name of a particularly accommodating kind of a pack saddle used by Scottish freebooters for the stowage of their plunder. Thus a whiggamore denoted a pack saddle thief. I am afraid we cannot get away from a common origin for the terms Whig and Tory, and these had perhaps been better left in obscurity. From "Tory" there has been built the worthy structure called Conservative ,due, I believe, to an article in the Quarterly written about the year 1830, wherein the term Tory is "with more propriety" 'alluded to as the Conservative party. Whig, too, has become "Liberal," or "Grit"—a name that has some sand in it and sand ,as we know, is good material for building purposes. Taken together, both parties are fairly well named, which is a cryptic saying that you may take anyway you feel inclined.

"Girls are not what they used to be in my young days," said the very old lady. "No; nor boys either. Those were the good old times." Whereupon she wagged her head comfortably.

You have met people like the very old lady—or that dreadful old Jack in the Box, the Oldest Inhabitant, who bobs up with "T'aint so hot a summer as we had in '76. That was hot if you like." When you can't sleep or eat for heat—people who hint at the degeneracy of the present day and love to talk of the good old times when there was no electricity or horseless carriages or "bird machines" and people lived with the fear of God in their hearts. You take a blink over your shoulder at the good old times or what you've heard of them. There were the old coaching days before railways, when it took my dear mother five days and six nights to go from Connemará to Dublin to dance at her coming-out ball with the 'English officers' — how the Irish girls dote on the red coats! Think of five slow days where it now takes five hours and jogging in a coach at that with your hair in curl papers under a poke bonnet like Fanny Squeers! And she used to tell it—with positive affection for those "good old times" —when we would all be getting ready for a dash to the express train! Think of the good old times of candles; think of Cranford old times, of pattens and corkscrew curls, and hoops instead of hobbles. Think of the dinners they used to eat, the punch they used to brew (and drink) in mighty punch bowls, the three-bottle men who finished the repast among the legs of the table, the girls who swooned at the sight of a mouse and simpered "Ask Papa" when "He proposed." No tennis ,no golfing, no motoring, and every girl protected by an iron clad chaperon .And yet—and yet—they were courted and loved, and married, despite the ironclad, or a fleet of her—and the babies were born in the chintzy rooms with the diamond-paned lattices, and people died and were buried and the world wagged on. And old people even then talked of "the good old times" just as they do now, and as we will presently. And other people yet to come will look back and laugh and wonder about our "old times" when people traveled by rail, and sent messages by telegraph and talked through telephones. Antiquated, dear old people, they will call us, "with their slow old ways!" Time's revenges are well known, and not the least of them is the certain fact that you, my dear young lady, will one day sit comfortably wagging your head and telling your granddaughter that "girls are not what they used to be in my young days," and she will be quite as unsympathetic as you are to-day. You who are now wearing a narrow, slimsy gown, and pretty high-heeled shoes will be discussing—at eighty—ancient history with a young and careless person dressed in the attire of the moment—it may be a suit of a gentlemanly cut—and you will talk of the "good old times" when all the world was young because you were, and the best I can wish you, my dear —which I do from my heart—is that you may be there to say it all, and she to hear it. We do not change so much after all. We roll round in a circle with many things, among them Memory and Hope—Yesterday and To-morrow.

And talking of the "oldest inhabitant" brings to mind that the "oldest Indian of them all" predicts for us the incoming of winter on the 18th of this month with a "heavy fall of snow." Nor will there be any let up, continues this weather-beaten old prophet; no fine days in late November such as we remember with gratitude when the January snows are with us; no Indian summer; nothing but the hardest sort of weather. The latter days of September were chilly, and October came in with raw winds but winter so soon!—and long months of it! Let us for once hope that the Indian sage will prove a false prophet.

It is not supposed to be a lucky stone, and some ominous story is attached to its returning to India. But the queen is going to wear it at the Durbar. It is by no means the finest diamond in the world, as some suppose. It was unfortunately re-cut and reduced from 186 to 106 carats, which made it shallow and lessened its brilliance, but it is romantic and historic and weighted with legend. The queen will also wear a big diamond lotus, now being cut for her, as well as the splendid pearl necklace India gave her when she was princess of Wales. There are in it, black, pink, mauve, bronze, and yellow pearls, but the "pearl of great price," that which hangs in the centre, is a big gray pearl whose mate has never been found.

The old man picked his way among the fallen apples across the sunlit orchard. His ruddy, wrinkled, quaint face was not saddened by any of life's storms, though it was marked. His blue eye was keen and wholesome, his bearing independent. From his little sack he brought a bit of well painted woodland. You could see at a glance that he had the gift of understanding trees—those strange people of the forest whom Dore held had woodland souls of their own. There was no creative art in the old man. For had He not made everything ready for the hand of man before He made man. He was busy a long time preparing the way for us. God even laid by a store of coal "thousands and thousands of years ago in the bowels of the earth so it would be there for us." That was his great argument in regard to the First Cause. The origin of species did not interest him. He had no concern with that. All that he was certain of was that everything was made for Man—the sun and stars and the whole system of nature, but especially the coal. The old artist must have felt the pinch of the cold more than once in his time. His soul glowed coalward towards those bowels of the earth wherein God had stored the fuel. That to him fully explained God's fatherhood. His blessed forethought. So the old man walked sturdily along the road of Life feeling that he was being taken care of. He did what he could. He painted his bits of pictures and sold them through the countryside. I do not think that going to church appealed to him as being absolutely necessary to salvation. He found God everywhere. He saw Him in everything, in the fields and the woods; in the sunny weather and the rainy weather, and especially in the cold weather. "The Lord will provide." That was his gospel. There was God, and him, the Man, and in the deep bosom of the earth there was the coal. Creed or dogma, high church, or low church; modernity or materialism, all were naught to him. Rain or shine this old child went his artless way. He was a perfect, a living illustration of Browning's as he stood there with the sunshine glinting in his sane and wholesome blue eye and warming his mellow cheek.

ST. VITUS DANCE

Cured Through the Use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills

Chorea, or as it is more generally known, St. Vitus' dance, is a disease that usually attacks the young children, though older persons may be afflicted with it. Its most common symptoms are a twitching of the muscles of the face and limbs. As the disease progresses this twitching takes the form of spasms in which the jerking motion may be confined to the head, or all the limbs may be affected. The patient is frequently unable to hold anything in the hands or to walk steadily, and in severe cases even the speech is affected. The disease is due to debility of the nerves and is always cured by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, which enrich the blood, tone and strengthen the nerves and thus restore the sufferer to good health. The following is a striking instance of what Dr. Williams' Pink Pills will do in this trouble. Mrs. Chas. Phillips, Pelee Island, Ont., says:—"At the age of fourteen my eldest daughter, Edith, became much run down, and the trouble developed into St. Vitus' dance. First her left arm became affected, then the left leg and entire left side. She grew so bad that she actually could not hold anything in her hand, and could only go about with a sliding, jerking motion. Notwithstanding that we were giving her medicine, she seemed to be growing worse, and finally her speech became much affected. We became so much alarmed about her that finally her father got a supply of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and we begun giving her these. In the course of a few weeks she was much better, and before all the pills were gone she was again enjoying perfect health. This was in 1908, and as she has not had a symptom of the trouble since I feel justified in saying the cure is permanent."

Be sure you get the genuine pills which are sold by all medicine dealers or may be had at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Golden Text—He retaineth not his anger forever, because he delighteth in mercy. Micah. vii:18.

(1) Verses 1-2—Who was King Cyrus and what were his character and achievements?
(2) Where were the Jews as a people, at the opening of this lesson and what were the circumstances which took them there?
(3) How do you account for it that Cyrus, immediately when he began to reign over Babylon decided to release the Jewish captives and to rebuild the Temple at Jerusalem.
(4) What reason can you assign for a king, not a Jew, having such a direct message from God?
(5) If the religious history of every nation from the beginning of time could be fully known, should we have in essence a repetition of Bible history?
(6) Verses 3-4—What class of people do we depend on chiefly, to build churches and support missionaries?
(7) What motive does Cyrus appeal to, for building the Temple at Jerusalem?
(8) What good is accomplished by the vast sums of money spent in building and supporting churches?
(9) If all people are obligated to give money to support the cause of religion, what is the least they should give?
(10) Verses 5-6—Are ministers today under obligations to take the lead by precept and example in religious enterprises, without waiting for any special spiritual leading?
(11) When persons willingly help in God's cause, are they without exception, "them whose spirit God had raised"?
(12) When we undertake giving or doing for the cause of God, why is it safe to conclude that God specially appointed us thereto?
(13) Verses 7-11—What in brief, were the circumstances which brought the gold and silver vessels to Babylon from the first Temple at Jerusalem?
(14) When a man gives lavishly of precious treasure to the cause of God is that always, or generally, a proof of his love for God?
(15) Chapter II. Verses 64-70 — What number of people returned to Jerusalem, and what was the number originally carried away to Babylon by Nebuchadnezzar? (See 2 Kings xxiv:14).
(16) What were the religious and financial conditions of the people, when they were originally deported, and when they returned?
(17) What general effect had their captivity had upon them?
(18) Which ministers more to the character of the average man, prosperity or adversity? (This is one of the questions that may be answered in writing by members of the club).

Autumn is the Time — FOR — GLASSES
WHY?
The increasingly long evenings of Autumn give greater opportunity for Sewing, Writing, Reading, Study, and as this is necessarily by artificial light the strain upon the eyes is such as to make Glasses quite a boon at this season of the year. This no doubt accounts for much of the present increased demand for Glasses.
Appointment for examining the eyes for Glasses is usually necessary.

W. F. M. S.

The W. F. M. S. Auxiliary of St. Paul's Church held a very successful annual thankoffering meeting last evening.

The meeting opened with devotional exercises at which Miss Dickson presided. The Secretary read her report, and the Treasurer read her statement.

Mrs. Rollins followed with a splendid address. She took for her subject: "The Spirit of Prayer," and gave Abraham as an example. The speaker emphasized the need at the present time of prayer, in order to carry on the work.

An interesting paper on thanksgiving was given by Mrs. Mowat, who based her thoughts on Bible examples and applied them to the assembly.

The proceedings were interspersed and enlivened by two charming vocal solos by Mrs. Dickson Hall and Miss Chalmers ,and the thankoffering realized the very satisfactory sum of $664.95.

The Rev. Mr. Pogue closed the meeting with the benediction.

SHE HAD CONSTANT PAIN

Until Relieved by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Dewittville, N.Y.—"Before I started to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I suffered nearly all the time with headaches, backaches, and bearing down pains, and had a continuous pain in my left side. It made me sick if I tried to walk much, and my back was so weak that I was obliged to wear corsets all the time. But now I do not have any of these troubles. I have a fine strong baby daughter now, which I did not have before taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. A. A. Grimm, Route 44, Dewittville, N.Y.

The above is only one of the thousands of grateful letters which are constantly being received by the Pinkham Medicine Company of Lynn, Mass., which prove beyond a doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, actually does cure those obstinate diseases of women, and that every such suffering woman owes it to herself to at least give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial before submitting to an operation, or giving up hope of recovery.

Mrs. Pinkham of Lynn, Mass., invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health and her advice is free.

"The Gun Runner"

By ARTHUR STRINGER

"Can't you see that it's too late? The price has been paid; the bargain's been struck."

"Not necessarily!"

"But a man like Ganley never trades back. The mistake was in the signing of the paper. It was a manifesto, a confession. It was the last will and testament of your good name."

McKinnon, who had been pacing the cabin, suddenly swung about and faced the young woman in the steamer-chair.

"Why are you saying all this to me?" he demanded.

Her troubled eyes once more rested on him, almost in pity.

"Because we are facing a common danger," she answered at last. "Because we may yet have to work together to escape from that danger."

"But you haven't told me anything. You haven't explained how or why you are in this danger."

Again her studious eyes seemed to be weighing and judging him. He knew by the anxiety that crept slowly into her face as she watched him that her decision was not altogether a flattering one.

"I am here because there was no one to take my place," she answered simply enough. "I can't explain everything now, but I knew they were plotting against Guariqui and against my brother. I knew at the last moment, that Ganley was hurrying to Locombia ,and I knew that the authorities at Washington were sending a cruiser to the Caribbean, to be near in case of trouble."

"You mean the Princeton?" McKinnon asked.

The woman nodded.

"Listen," she went on after another moment of thought. "Anything may happen before we reach Puerto Locombia. If the Junta have carried out Ganley's plans, everything will be ready for his coup d'etat."

Her words, for some reason, did not impress him as much as she had expected. She had felt that perhaps she was not being specific enough, that she was not making the case sufficiently clear.

"This movement against Guariqui will not be easy," she hurried on to explain, "unless the field-guns have already been landed. The palace is of stone; it could stand to the last—it was built for such purposes. It could hold out for weeks, with only the president's bodyguard ,until help came."

"From where?" asked McKinnon.

"That is what I must explain. When Duran installed the electric light plant at Puerto Locombia he put up a wireless station, one at the coast, and another on the palace at Guariqui. Unless the guns have been landed, there is to be no assault on the capital until Ganley has been heard from. Puerto Locombia, of course, will be in the hands of the revolutionists. They will destroy the wireless station at the coast. There are few or no ships there now, on account of the yellow fever. It's not the fever, of course, but the quarantine—the weeks and weeks of imprisonment—they are afraid of. This ship will be the only one in the roadstead."

She watched his face with almost a touch of impatience. She looked for some glance or gesture of enlightenment on his part. But he gave no sign of comprehension; so she was forced to go on, explicitly, like a tutor slowly demonstrating the obvious to a perversely backward pupil.

"You are equipped with wireless. That means you will be able to talk with Guariqui. If Duran and my brother are shut up there ,calling for help, you will be the only person to hear their messages. Can't you understand? The Guariqui station is not one of high power. It can't possibly call beyond the coast. Yet the cruiser is to be lying somewhere between Culebra and Locombia, waiting to help, only too anxious to interfere at the first official call. But that call can never reach them without being relayed from the roadstead, out across the Caribbean. You may be the only person who can hear and understand Guariqui's cry for help."

CHAPTER IX.
THE CONVEVRGING TRAILS

McKinnon drew in a deeper breath, slowly and leisurely, but he did not speak.

"Can't you understand?" the young woman in the blue pilot-cloth gown was anxiously demanding of him. "Ganley has thought this all out. He found out we carry wireless equipment. He knew this call would come to us. He has foreseen that we could relay it from Puerto Locombia to the Princeton. He knows that you, and you alone, could send that message out of Locombia."

"And you still think he's tried to tie me up, to keep me from sending it! And you insist that those first despatches he filed were simply blinds?"

"Just as his pretence of shadowing Ganley was a blind!" was her prompt retort.

McKinnon fell to pacing the cabin again. The woman watched him without speaking. Then the operator came to a sudden pause.

"But I'm not free yet. That schemer still has me tied down to him, as you say. We haven't got that paper out of his hands."

The woman nodded her head slowly, without any outward emotion.

"He could still discredit me with the captain of this tub, if that happened to be part of his game! He'd show us both to be a pair of liars the moment we tried to corner him!"

"And once at Puerto Locombia, if his plans have worked out as he wants them to, he can have us dragged ashore! And if Guariqui falls he can have us held as enemies of the new government!"

"This is a nice mess!" calmly meditated the long-limbed man standing bfore her ,facing her, for the moment, with abstracted and unseeing eyes. He even seemed to have forgotten the presence of the woman.

She rose from her chair and stood before him.

"We have to get back that foolish paper," she said. "Before everything else we must get back your receipt."

The quiet determination of her voice startled him a little. He stood regarding her with a new light in his eyes. All his training had been repressional; his life had taught him to resist every threatened surrender to the emotional. Yet, as he saw her [illegible] so isolated from her kind, so [illegible]ly unfitted for the tasks before her, so insidiously appealing in her tender womanhood, a warm and winelike current of sympathy began to creep incongruously through his veins. She must have caught some inkling of that soft invasion ,for suddenly, and without apparent reason, her face deepened in colour and then grew paler than before. She held out her hand as though to bridge the awkward silence that had fallen between them. McKinnon saw it was a gesture of farewell.

"Will you promise me to do nothing until I have got this receipt back for you?" she asked, as he still held her outstretched hand.

"But why should you fight my battles for me?" he asked, wincing a little before her open and courageous gaze. "I can't have you turn highwayman for me!"

There was welling up in him a wayward sense of guardianship over her isolated and fragile figure, of responsibility for her safety and well-being.

"It must be done," she declared with a bitterness that surprised him a little. "there are two doors to Ganley's cabin. It is one of a suite. I can get in through one of those doors."

"Through one of those doors?" echoed the man before her.

"Yes: to-night."

"To-night?" cried McKinnon,looking down at her in mingled protest and astonisment.

"Hush!" she warned, with her fingers held up close before his face. Their accidental contact with his lips sent a responsive thrill through his nervous body.

"But I won't hear of you doing this sort of thing just because I've been all kinds of a fool. I'm going to this man Duffy, or Ganley, or whatever his name is—I'm going to face him myself and make him put this whole thing right."

"That is impossible," she warned him in her tense whisper. "You do not understand. You don't know this man's ways."

He could see some definite yet mysterious fear shadowed on her face.

"But think of what you're threatening to do!" McKinnon urged. "You have to break into this brute's cabin and steal back a receipt! Think of the risk you'd be running!"

"It has to be done; the sooner it's done the better."

"But why does it have to be done in this way?" persisted McKinnon.

"Because you must not do it!"

"Why not?"

"It would be like cannonading canaries—you must save yourself for the bigger risks!"

Her unuttered misery, her inarticulate anxiety, more and more disturbed and depressed him. But there were many things on which he was still uncertain, and above all things he knew that he must go slow.

The woman confronting him must have seen some flash or doubt on his face, for she caught at his arm with a sudden little movement that was as imploring as it was feminine.

"You don't trust me? You don't believe what I have told you?" she cried in ,her hurrying, low-toned whisper.

"No! no! It's not that!" McKinnon answered. "But I can't quite see my way out—I can't see what it's all leading to.' '

"But nothing can happen now, here at sea. And you will understand later. Promise me you'll wait!"

"Yes; but wait for what?"

"Until you are free to act, and you know what I have said is true."

He took a turn up and down the cabin. "Is this paper so important? I mean, isn't this a lot of fuss and feathers about a small thing?"

"It's one of the small things that count—and this is war."

Still again he felt the inapposite and insidious appeal of her womanhood. It wound about him and tugged at him ,eroding away his self-will, his old-time careless audacity of spirit, like a current eating under a sandbank. It made sacrifice on her behalf seem a burden to be almost gladly borne.

"Only promise me that you'll wait!" she pleaded. His career had been one of much contention; but never before had he been compelled to fight against what seemed his own self-interest. He felt, in doing so, that he was being thrust and involved in entanglements which should have been evaded as mere side issues. He even marvelled at his sheer lack of resentment against capitulation so indeterminate and yet so complete.

"Promise me!" she whispered. He wanted to beg for time, to think things out, but her troubled face was bewilderingly close to his, and the memory that he was not innocent of the anxiety weighing upon her made him more and more miserable.

"I promise," he answered. The clasp of her hand sent a second inapposite tingle of joy through his body.

"You will wait?" she insisted, as though doubly to impress on each of them some future course of action. "You will say nothing until I have done what I promised?"

"There's nothing I can say or do," he replied ,still demanding of himself if it could be right to put her to such a test.

"Then remember," she said, and her voice was little more than a whisper, "we are acting together."

McKinnon still stood there, watching her, as she opened the cabin door and stepped out to the wet and gloomy deck. Something about her departure so paralleled that of the man who had gone before her that the coincidence struck him with a start. It brought the thought through him like an arrow that he had openly pledged himself to two opponents, that he had made a promise to act for two enemies. This was followed by a second and an equally disturbing thought: he had not once been honest or open with her; he was letting his lack of candour make her path a harder one than she deserved.

He sprang through the door after her, swept by a sudden fierce fire of self-hate, of contempt for the things in which he found himself involved.

A moment later he had called her back across the midnight gloom of the dipping and rocking deck.

"What is it?" she asked, as she stepped into the cabin, her eyes wide with wonder. He made sure the deck was empty, and closed the door. Then, with an obvious effort, he wheeled about and faced her.

"It may not be too late for us to get out of this mess," he told her, "and get out of it in the right way."

"But what way?" she asked, puzzled by his unheralded change of front.

"The quick way, and the sure way," he answered, swinging across the cabin until he stood before his switch-lever. His hand hovered about the apparaus as he went on. "I mean our way out is to get the Princeton now, to-night, before she's out of touch with us! I mean it's best for us to play our card at once, when it's not too late! The Princeton has already passed us on her way to Culebra, o replace the gunboat Eagle; she's leaving us farther and farther behind every hour!"

"But what do we gain by getting the Princeton now?" Alicia Boynton demanded.

He was at the key by this time, and the "crash—rash—rrrrash" of the great spark as it leaped and exploded from the discharging-rods filled the cabin with a peremptory and authoritative tumult of sound. The woman stood watching him, spellbound. A moment later McKinnon's left hand was fidgeting above his tuner, while his right pressed a 'phone-receiver close to his ear.

"What we've got to do is to get that cruiser to Puerto Locombia," he hurriedly went on, as he waited there, without looking up. "She will be needed; she is needed: and she may as well be told of it now. I mean we'll do what we've got to do while the way's still clear."

"But how can you order about an American warship as though it were a street cab you'd hired?"

"It won't be me — it'll be the wireless that does the ordering."

"But who are you?"

"That's just it—I'm nobody! I'm like those canaries you spoke of: I wouldn't be worth cannonading."

"But you have now power to do this!" demurred the still puzzled woman. "You are not the President of the United States! You have no authority to order about a battleship!"

"I'll make the authority!" he cried as he sprang to the key and once more called through the night. "You've said just enough to give me my chance to make my course plain. American interests are threatened in Guariqui at this very moment; American property has already been destroyed in Puerto Locombia. It's only forestalling the inevitable. I mean I'm going to send an official call for that cruiser myself!"

The woman looked at him in amazement as he swung about and clapped the 'phones once more to his ears.

"If we can only get her!" he half groaned as he stood with bent head and fixed eyes, listening, while the seconds dragged slowly by. "If we can only get her!" he repeated less hopefully.

He turned to his switch again, and still again the great spark erupted and crashed and volleyed from the discharging-rods. Then again he waited and listened, the lines on his face deepening in the hard light from the electrics above him.

"The night's against us!" he exclaimed almost despairingly as the switch came purringly down on the contact-pins and his hand once more went out to his key-lever. His fingers closed on the handle ,but the intended call was not sent. No nervous flash of blue flame bridged the waiting spark-gap. For even before he turned, McKinnon knew that his cabin door had been suddenly opened and that a squat and thick-set figure stood there peering in at him.

"What're you workin 'that key for?" demanded the figure. It was the thunderous voice of the ship's master ,Captain Yandel. McKinnon remembered that he must have overheard the cat-kiss at the masthead, from the bridge.

"What're you tryin' to send out there?" repeated the officer.

"I'm getting distances from a Standard Oil tank," answered the man at the table after just a moment of hesitation.

Kidney Pains in the Back

Could Not Stand or Even Turn in Bed —Legs Greatly Swollen

All Doctor's Medicine Failed—Cure Effected by Use of

DR. CHASE'S KIDNEY-LIVER PILLS

Again this great medicine has triumphed over kidney disease of a severe type. From a bed of suffering and helplessness Mrs. Walsh was restored to health and strength by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

Kidney pains in the back tortured her. Dropsical swellings had set in and she had no reason to hope for cure since the doctor's medicine failed to even relieve her. Read what the husband says about this remarkable cure.

Mr. Thos. D. Walsh, Pictou, N.S., writes: "Two years ago my wife took to her bed after suffering for a long time from kidney pains in the back. She was not able to stand on her feet or even turn herself in bed. The doctor's medicine was no benefit whatever, that we could see. Sometimes her legs would swell considerably. Reading about a woman in similar condition being cured by Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, we purchased two boxes, ad when these were used she was able to sit up. With three more boxes she was restored to health and doing her own housework.

"As for myself I also found these pills all that is claimed for them. I give this statement in order that others may obtain the same ease from suffering as that experienced by my wife and myself."

About Zutoo Tablets

"I have been a sufferer from headache since childhood and have used all, or nearly all, of the so-called "cures" on the market. Some months since my attention was called to your Zutoo Tablets and I have been using them ever since with the most gratifying results. I find they cure a "sick" or "nervous" headache in a few minutes and leave no bad effect. My family use them whenever needed with equally good results. I have frequently given them to friends who were suffering from headache and they never failed to give quick relief. I find them a good remedy for "sour" stomach as well as headache. I always carry them in my grip on the road and would not be without them at any cost."

WILD DUCK PLENTIFUL

Large Quantities in England and the North of Ireland

Wild duck, which have entirely avoided many inland spots where a few are usually seen at this season, have appeared in very great quantities along some of their seaside haunts, especially on the east coasts of England and the north of Ireland.

The pursuers of the strange sport of punt gunning have had remarkable experiences. Slipping along in their punts at dawn they have come upon flocks so great that a single shot from the great swivel gun, which is almost a cannon, has bagged more than the foreshore sportsman could get in a week. Fifty and sixty have been killed at a shot, though the manoeuvres of the shot may have taken a week or so.

Numbers of duck again have been killed in the more formal, artificial shoots of Lincolnshire, Bedfordshire and other places where the birds are now bred almost as scientifically as pheasant.

A sportsman's bird that seems to increase in numbers and to widen its range is the golden plover, of which numbers are now to be seen in the poulterers' shops of the West End. These plover, which are held by some to be the best bird that comes to table, are seen frequently all over the country. They have been observed in swarms over grass fields in the home counties, as well as in their more normal haunts among the wild places of the coast.

Another bird that appeared at one moment in great quantity was the black duck, of which large numbers were shot over the coast of Norfolk from boats. But he is a brave or very hungry man who would dare to face the bird at table.—London Daily Mail.

FREAK SURGERY

The Vital Organs of Animals Transplanted by Americans.

Some remarkable experiments on the grafting of limbs on animals to which they did not originally belong, and the transference of vital organs, such as the kidney, from one animal to another, are reported, says the "Standard," from Harvard University. Most of them have been carried out by Dr. Carrel, under the direction of Dr. E. E. Tyzzer.

His first successful grafting—or, at any rate, the first that he placed on record—was for the benefit of a fox terrier. This he described before the American Philosophical Society. The terrier, owing to an accident, had to have its leg amputated. A small dog that had just died was pressed into service. Its leg was removed, and grafted on to the stump of the leg of the living dog. Arteries, veins, and nerves were connected by suitable means, and the bones were placed in juxtaposition. As the bones knit the other tissues grew together, and the dog remained perfectly healthy.

But this is only a minor triumph in surgery when compared with those which have come later. From the grafting of limbs Dr. Carrel has moved onward step by step until it would appear that he can transplant and replace almost every organ in the body. He says himself:—

"A dog whose abdominal aorta was replaced by a human femoral artery is still alive in a normal state. The thoracic aorta of another animal was replaced about the same time by a large artery that had been kept several months in cold storage, and the operation was a complete success."

In the transplanting of kidneys Dr Carrel has been attended with the greatest success in the case of cats, and he has said that possibly the results would have been much better in experimenting with dogs if he had used dogs of the same breed. While he has taken organs from one animal and replaced them in another, he has been uniformly fortunate in reversing the kidneys. In this work he has taken a cat, and, removing the kidneys, has replaced the left kidney in the cavity of the right side and the right kidney in the left cavity.

When one thinks of the complex structure of the kidney, with its nerve supply, its three great connecting vessels—vein, artery, and ureter—and its intimate relations with other organs of the body, such operations as these are truly amazing. Their value in the saving and preservation of human life, if such a thing as the renewal of a kidney should be found possible, will be enormous. The removal of a single kidney is a fairly common operation. After it has been performed the patient usually recovers his health, but sometimes in after life the increased demand made on the single remaining kidney may lead to serious trouble.

It is only a month since a wealthy widow, Mrs. Reginald Waldorf, of Philadelphia, offered a small fortune to anyone who would sell her an index finger to be grafted on to the stump whence hers has been removed. It would be curious if such advertisements as this went further, and public requests were made for the supply of kidneys, spleen, or even for a new liver. But it is difficult to see where the organs of which persons only possess one each are to come from.

BANK OF ENGLAND NOTES.

Interesting facts about the inside working of the Bank of England were explained by Mr. Frederick Huth Rights of issuing notes, he said, is one of the most important functions of the Bank of England. One rarely sees a dirty Bank of England note. That is because the Bank never reissues a banknote. Even if anyone went into the Bank and demanded a five-pound note in exchange for five sovereigns, and then crossed to another counter and changed the same note back into gold, that note would be destroyed. The system is expensive, but by its means the Bank avoids many of the risks of forgery.

A QUEEN'S GIFT

Wilhelmina and One of Her Little Subjects Make an Exchange of Gloves

An interesting story of Queen Wilhelmina is going the rounds. The Queen is very fond of walking in out-of-the-way places round her capital, and during a recent promenade she encountered a little girl in whom she subsequently interested herself. The child conceived the idea of showing her gratitude in a tangible fashion. She thought the Queen would be pleased to receive a little present from her, and after considerable meditation sent to the palace a pair of gloves.

Queen Wilhelmina was much touched, and promptly returned the compliment by sending another pair of gloves to her young friend. By way of adding interest to the present her Majesty had filled the right one with bonbons and placed pieces of money in the left. Accompanying the present was a letter in which the Queen asked the little girl to inform her which glove gave her most pleasure.

The simple reply came as a surprise to her Majesty. "Dear Queen," wrote the little girl, "your beautiful present has only caused me trouble. I cannot tell you which of the gloves has given me the most pleasure, for my father took the left glove and my eldest sister the right one."

That same evening Queen Wilhelmina sent another pair of gloves, similarly filled, to her young protege. Her Majesty took care that the present was delivered by a court functionary, who saw to it that the gloves were not seized by others.

TIGHT COLLARS

A well-known doctor considers it remarkable that no one seems to have laid stress on the fact that such slight obstacles to the free circulation of the blood through the vessels of the brain may adversely influence the health of those who are in the habit of wearing tightly-fitting neck clothes.

The fact appears to be well known to veterinary surgeons, who tell us that neck constriction through badly fitting harness is a causative factor in "staggers" in horses. It seems to be equally well known that dogs suffer a great deal through having to wear tightly fitting collars. Is it too much, then, he asks, to argue that those of us who wear our own collars too tightly buttoned may find that practice some explanation of symptoms ascribed to other causes?

Whenever the stork is down-hearted and wants a little fun, he pays a visit to some apartment house where "children are not allowed."—The Sketch.

NEW ROUTE FROM INDIA TO EGYPT

Great Britian May Shortly Have a Railroad Which Will Shorten Trip by Six Days

Arrangements have been made for furthering the project of a continuous and direct British railroad line from Egypt to the Indian frontier by way of Northern Arabia and Central Persia, and important developments may be expected at an early date.

The route has been well known for a long time to Anglo-Indian travellers and geographical experts to be the shortest and most direct line of access from the Mediterranean to the westernmost frontier stations of India, but other projected lines, traversing foreign spheres of influence, have monopolized public attention, and the practicability of securing a railroad line to India which shall be exclusively under British control has been thus thrust out of sight.

Another great advantage of the line referred to is that it will shorten the journey to India by six whole days, a saving far greater than could be obtained by any other conceivable route. It starts from the northern end of the Suez Canal at Port Said, and, running generally due east by way of the Gulf of Akaba, El Jauf, Beara, Shiraz, Kerman, Eastern Persia and Seistan, will close on to the present Indian railroad at Nushki. The entire length will be about 2,000 miles, while the sea route from Port Said to India is roughly 2,080 miles, a sufficient indication of the saving in mere mileage, to say nothing of the greater speed of the train as compared with the steamship.

The existing maps of Arabia and Persia, especially the latter, are fairly good enough for a general alignment of the trend of the railroad to be traced, but to enable a satisfactory survey for railroad purposes a detailed examination of the route from end to end is necessary, and this is being arranged. The general subject will be brought forward in an exhaustive paper to be read before the Royal United Service Institution in Whitehall.

WIRELESS BONDS OF EMPIRE.

A plan for bringing the whole British Empire into touch with Whitehall by means of wireless telegraphy is being perfected, says the Pall Mall Gazette. Recent tests shew that messages could be got from the Admiralty to most stations abroad very expeditiously, with the exception of Australia. To link up the latter continent with the rest of the Empire powerful wireless stations are being erected in Australasia, and others are to be made at Norfolk Island and Fiji. High-power instruments have also been installed at Malta, this, it is understood, being in connection with the plan for putting all ports of the Empire into wireless touch with London.

ITALY'S CHARITABLE QUEEN

The Queen of Italy, who is a remarkably original woman, recently instituted a charming charity, which has added greatly to her popularity. Fifty of the most poverty-stricken motherless babies in Italy have been collected and brought to a white house overlooking the sea, which her Majesty has purchased at her own expense, and here they are to live and be educated under the immediate supervision of their benefactress until they are competent to look after themselves. The Queen visits her creche at frequent intervals, accompanied by her children, plays with the small inmates, who call her "mother" and are all known as the "Queen's children."

"K. O. W." BRANCH FOR MR. WALLER

London Folk Think English Actor-Manager Will Surely Score in America.

MODEST, BUT CONFIDENT

The "Keen-on-Wallerites" Hasnt Theatre to See New Star of "The Garden of Allah."

[Special Despatch.]
London, Saturday.

MR. LEWIS WALLER, England's popular hero, who will play the leading part in "The Garden of Allah," dramatised from Mr. Robert Hichens' well known novel by the author in collaboration with Mme. Navarro, had a few remarks to make before he left London.

"Of course, I may stay a long time," he told your correspondent who met him before his departure. "Everything will depend upon the fortunes of the new play, but I am assured that it will be a magnificent production. The scene of the story lends itself to a beautiful setting. It is in North Africa—Tunis and Algeria—and the extraordinary success of the novel in the United States is a rather happy augury for the success of the venture."

Though Mr. Waller is a strongly emotional actor, the part he has undertaken to portray in "The Garden of Allah" is possibly the heaviest he has yet attempted.

Mr. Waller said that he desired to go before the American public unheralded. He wishes to stand or fall by the merits of his work.

"I learned a few days ago that all the photographic and other press matter concerning myself had been lost in the chaos created by the great railway strike in Liverpool," he remarked.

"It was pleasing news to me, because the American people will now have to form their estimate of me when they see me and not be led to expect so much, though I am eagerly anticipating my first appearance on an American stage. I am busy studying the part now, and when I reach New York I shall be word perfect. The rehearsals are now going on, but I shall have about a fortnight in which to work with the company before the opening night. Mr. Hichens will be there, and there is just a chance that Mme. de Navarro may be over. Unfortunately, she has not been in good health for some time, and is now staying in Ireland. I am hoping that she will be able to go, because her presence and her popularity in America will mean much to the production.

"It is my intention," Mr. Waller added, "to produce my favorite play, 'Henry the Fifth,' while I am in America, at matinees either in or after the run of 'The Garden of Allah.' I am anxious to place it before an American audience, because the part is one that fits me particularly well. It is not entirely new to the American public, because Mansfield produced it there, but my version is different altogether from Mansfield's. I am returning to London for the opening of the season in April or May next."

Perhaps you have not heard of the "K. O. W.'s". Let me tell you their name is legion. They haunt the stage door of the Lyric when Mr. Waller is playing there; they sit in the stalls enraptured night after night; they call him 'just a darling,' though they may never have spoken to him; then besiege the picture post card boys whenever a new portrait of Mr. Waller is put on sale; they meet in the tea rooms to talk about him; they insist upon him signing autograph albums; in fact, they just dote on him. I had almost forgotten to give you the key to the mystic letters. They mean the "Keen on Wallerites." Maybe a branch of the society will be founded in America. But there is not the necessary "happy ever after" ending to "The Garden of Allah," and that makes the difference.

CHANGE OF AIR IS NEEDED BY DOGGIE

Medical Attendants Now Order Rest from the Strain of a Season's Rounds.

[Special Despatch.]
London, Saturday.

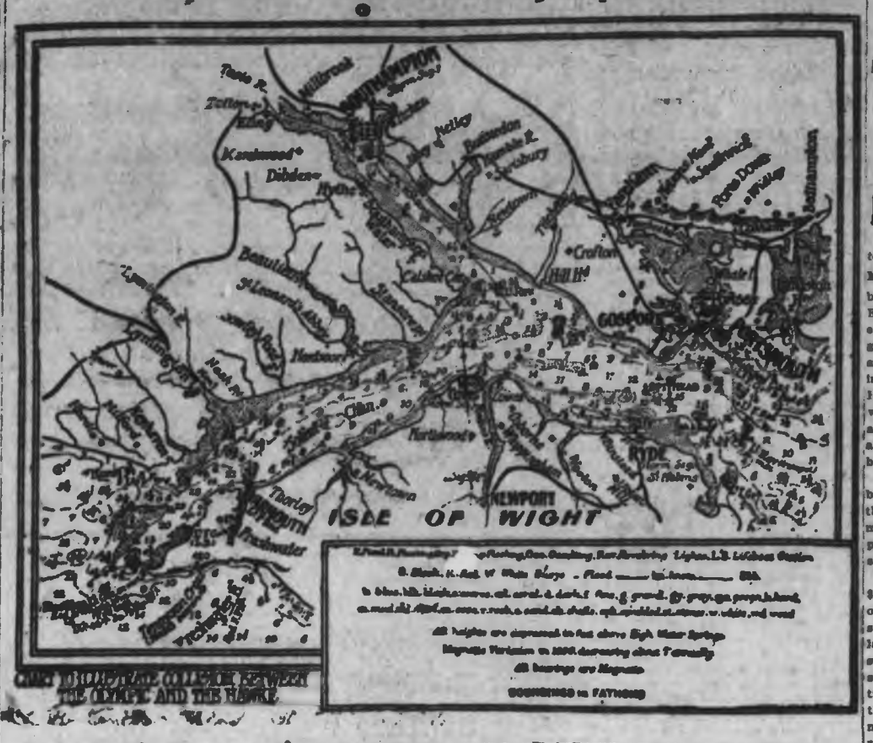
DOGS, it seems, are ordered change of air by their medical attendants in much the same way as their masters and mistresses. The strain of a season's round on the show bench is said to try them severely and a week or a month at a watering place is recommended as a restorative. This year St. Margaret's Bay, on the Kentish shore, is the favorite seaside resort for dogs that are "run down."

Among the canine visitors are Aberdeen terriers, delicate Pekinese, Pomeranians, bull terriers, bulldogs, King Charles spaniels and numerous other varieties. Some of the animals have been having special treatment. Their diet has been strictly regulated and in a few instances they have gone through a sort of daily massage, followed by rubbing with a rough towel.

After five months' absence from his former home, Bob, the sagacious dog of the Griffin Hotel, Kingston-on-Thames, has found his way home, ninety miles, to his former master. He had been given to a farmer in Hampshire; but Bob did not seem to think this was right. He moped for a while, and then disappeared. No trace of him could be found till one morning recently, when, on the front door of the Griffin Hotel being opened, Bob was found sitting on the step. Though in a sadly weak condition after his long journey, he wagged his tail with delight when let in, and making straight for his old master's room, lay down outside the door.

How Bob found his way to Kingston so unerringly through the countryside is a mystery. Bob is a sturdy animal, described as a cross between a bull terrier and an Irish terrier

Essential Facts Regarding Collision of the Hawke and the Olympic Withheld



On Both Sides Determination to Reveal Nothing Is Manifest—Theories Advanced.

[Special Despatch.]
London, Saturday.

THE cause of the collision between the cruiser Hawke and the steamship Olympic continues, naturally, to be the subject of much speculation, for never before in similar circumstances have there been so few trustworthy details available upon which to form a reasonable opinion. The facts about the courses, speeds, relative distances and bearings of the ships, which are essential to arriving at a satisfactory conclusion, are known only to the officers of the two vessels, and possibly by this time to their respective employers, but on both sides there is manifest a determination to reveal nothing. It is common sense, therefore, to suspend judgment until an inquiry takes place.

Nevertheless theories for the occurrence will be advanced, however meagre the data to go upon, and it is worth while, perhaps, to give some consideration to the latter.

In most of the suggestions already put forward it is taken for granted that the Hawke was primarily at fault, and this not without reason, because the regulations not only state that "every vessel overtaking any other shall keep out of the way of the overtaken vessel," but add that every vessel directed by the regulations to keep out of the way of another vessel "shall on approaching her, if necessary, slacken her speed or stop or reverse."

The reports, for what they are worth, state that the Hawke was proceeding much faster than the Olympic and that the cruiser attempted to pass the passenger craft. Here it is essential to know exactly the weather conditions at the time, to say whether the cruiser, which is said to have been running a high speed trial, could reduce sufficiently early to avoid the collision. The reports about the weather are confusing and in some cases contradictory.

Many persons who have crossed the Solent have expressed surprise that in such a broad expanse of water two ships should ever get near enough to one another to enter into collision except by carelessness on the part of the navigators. As a matter of fact, however, the channel opposite Osborne Point and East Cowes, where the mishap occurred, is not nearly so wide as it looks, and it is conceivable that the Hawke discovered too late that she had not sufficient room to pass on the starboard hand of the Olympic.

It is to be remembered that the regulations state that "in narrow channels every steam vessel shall, when it is safe and practicable, keep to that side of the fair way, or midchannel, which lies on the starboard side of such vessel." The Olympic would therefore be in the right in keeping over to the starboard side of the channel, while the Hawke, if she believed there was room to pass, would also keep to that side. It may be that in a tardy discovery of the insufficiency of space to pass between the liner and the shoal water is to be found the original cause of the collision.

In such circumstances the cruiser might perhaps have stopped and reversed or might have attempted to cross under the Olympic's stern in order to pass on her port side. A miscalculation of the rate at which the Olympic was proceeding—that is to say, the difference in the speeds of the two vessels—might then have brought about the collision.

It has also been assumed that the Hawke ran into the Olympic, but it is possible that the two ships might have been brought into such a position, relatively to each other, that a turn of the helm of the Olympic would throw her stern nearer to, and perhaps into, the bows of the cruiser. It may have been necessary to give such a turn in order to straighten the Olympic on her course through the channel to Spithead. It is a matter to be cleared up, even if the Hawke were running things too close.

Then there is the suggestion of faulty steering gear, which experience has shown to be a possibility with which to reckon, but it seems more probable that if such a thing happened it would have been made public without any delay. There could be no reason for withholding the fact if it were a fact beyond question. The circumstance that the Hawke was in the Fourth Reserve, and therefore had not a full complement of officers and men, does not appear to have any material bearing on the matter, for if she were running a trial the natural conclusion is that there were the usual number of officers and men, both on deck and in the engine room. It would only be if circumstances were to arise requiring additional hands that the reduction of the crew might be a danger, and such circumstances do not appear to have arisen in the present instance.

It may be said in conclusion that the Olympic is altogether an exceptional ship, and that even an experienced and capable navigator might conceivably miscalculate the distance she would cover in a certain time, or the space she would require for a turning movement. Such a miscalculation, although it could scarcely excuse proceedings which involved risk of collision, might well afford an explanation for an error of judgment.

EARL'S NIECE NEW STAGE RECRUIT

[Special Despatch.]
London, Saturday.

Musical comedy is claiming another recruit from the ranks of society. Miss Eleanor Montgomerie, second daughter of Lady Sophia Montgomerie, niece of the Earl of Eglinton and Winton, has been engaged by Mr. George Edwardes for the Gaiety.

"Most of my life hitherto," Miss Montgomerie, a slight, pretty girl, with fair hair and blue-gray eyes, told a correspondent, "has been spent in the country. Beyond riding, I do not care for country pursuits at all, and I am tired of the usual rounds of parties and dances. I want a definite object in life—something more to do than merely amuse myself from day to day. For a long time I have felt convinced that I should never be satisfied until I went upon the stage. At first my family tried to dissuade me, but they gave it up when they saw I was really in earnest about it. So I came up from Scotland, wrote to Mr. Edwardes, whom I had never met, and asked him if he would see me. He very kindly did so, gave me an appointment for a voice trial and engaged me for the Gaiety Theatre.

"I am told that the theatrical profession is an exacting one and spells hard work to those who adopt it, but I am not afraid of this. I am not going to adopt a stage name, either. I shall see my own on the boards."

Complimenting.

STUDYING BRITISH DOCKS FOR BOSTON

Mr. James M. W. Hall Thinks System of Reception and Distribution May Be of Value.

[Special Despatch.]
London, Saturday.

MR. JAMES M. W. HALL, of Boston, accompanied by Mrs. Hall, has been stopping a few days in London prior to touring the south coast of England. Mr. Hall is a member of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, and though his visit to England is primarily a holiday, he will embrace the opportunity to inspect the great docks of London and Liverpool with a view to studying the methods adopted in the reception and distribution of goods. He has already been in communication with the London and Liverpool chambers, and has been assured of the most cordial assistance by the leading officials of those bodies.

"I intend to make a close study of the big docks in England, where, I suppose, the system of receipt and distribution is more perfectly developed than in any other part of the world," he said to your correspondent.

"The State has recently apportioned $9,000,000 to construct new and elaborate docks at Boston, and maybe I shall learn much in my visit to England that will be of value in the construction of the Boston works. I am strongly of the opinion that the location and the natural facilities, added to those which will be developed by our new dock system and the important railroad centre which Boston is, are going to make Boston one of the great commercial depots of the world for the reception and distribution of merchandise. That is what we confidently anticipate, and Boston has grown more rapidly in the last few years than ever before in the same length of time. Boston is the second largest seaport for imports in the United States, and I think it is going to be the largest."

Touching the question of reciprocity and Canada's rejection of the reciprocal agreement at the recent elections, Mr. Hall said he was chairman of a committee of one hundred leading men of Massachusetts who set about seven years ago to consider and promote reciprocity with Canada—the first organized movement in that direction.

"We in New England," he added, "confidently expected that reciprocity would be confirmed by Canada, but there is no feeling of antagonism in the United States toward Canada because of her recent action. I can clearly see in Canada's vote that there is a strong feeling toward national union among the British race. We do not cavil at it. It is like a son standing by his family. Although we are of one blood we are two distinct nations, and if we cannot get together in this way we can still hold together as great nations that are bound to maintain the peace of the world."

SAYS SPIRIT KISS WAS VERY HUMAN

British Vice Admiral, in His Book "Glimpses of Next State," Tells of Strange Seances.

[Special Despatch.]
London, Saturday.

THE idea of a British Admiral spending several years in sitting with every kind of spirit medium to hear messages from Indian chiefs and dead clowns is one that may interest more than naval men.

Such is the story of Vice Admiral W. Usborne Moore's book, "Glimpses of the Next State." Six years ago the Admiral published a book entitled "Cosmos and the Creeds," in which he expressed agnostic ideas as to personal immortality. Then he began to have misgivings, because he had not investigated the evidence as to a future state supplied by spiritualists. The end of it is he has abandoned his doubts and is a most uncompromising spiritualist.

Vice Admiral Moore seems to have visited in his quest for "a sign" every kind of spirit medium he could find in England or the United States. There were mediums who produced spirit forms, mediums who produced spirit faces and spirit voices, table rapping mediums, trumpet mediums, portrait painting mediums, letter writing mediums, clairvoyants, clairaudients and crystal gazers.

The most remarkable of Vice Admiral Moore's experiences was the arrival of Mr. William Ewart Gladstone, who spoke through a trumpet at a séance with an American woman, Mrs. Wreidt. Mr. Gladstone said:—

"In my time we used to flatter ourselves that no one could follow us, but we were mistaken. What do you think of the present Cabinet?"

Vice Admiral Moore thought it a brilliant cabinet, but added that the Chancellor of the Exchequer should express himself with moderation. Mr. Gladstone rejoined:—

"I do not agree; he must speak out very straight at this juncture. His speech on the Catholic danger was admirable. There must be no religious predominance. We must have home rule."

If anybody can imagine Mr. Gladstone talking like that he must have little acquaintance with his diction.

As a specimen of the stuff which Vice Admiral Moore has brought back from the spirits he tells this tale about an American spirit called "Viola," whose lips he kissed, with her consent, at a séance:—

"It was just the same as kissing an ordinary mortal. This experiment in the interest of science was remarked upon with jeers by Kitty (another spirit) inside the cabinet, who called out 'Oh! oh! he's all amongst the girls!'"

He quotes a long letter which the Chicago medium, May Banga, obtained for him from a relative who died twenty years ago, whom he calls "Iola." It contains this passage:—

"That I am with you is every move you make, travelling from your own location to that of your home in England, you need not doubt."

That word "location" of course is fatal. No Englishwoman, as "Iola" was, would use it. It belonged to May Banga.

Good.

KING AND QUEEN WILL GO TO INDIA

British Sovereigns Now Making Preparations to Attend the Durbar Ceremonies.

[Special Despatch.]
London, Saturday.

KING GEORGE and Queen Mary, notwithstanding persistent reports to the contrary, are going to India and are now making every preparation with that end in view. Princess Mary and the younger princes will be left in the care of Queen Alexandra, in the absence of their parents, as they were when late their majesties, then Prince and Princess of Wales, visited the country.

Londoners have had glimpses at jubilee and coronation times of the splendor of their Oriental visitors, and have gained some idea of the extraordinary wealth and variety of Indian jewel boxes. But to see Hindoo grandeur at its highest conception one must see the Hindoo nabobs at home, especially on occasions of high festival. For this reason alone the Durbar promises to be one of the most dazzling shows in recent history.

The representatives of English and, of course, Anglo-American rank and beauty will, however, be equal to this historic occasion. Family jewels have been brought out from secure places, where they have been reposing since the coronation doings of last June, and are again in the hands of mounters and setters. Rare old family laces that will vie with richest saaruns and veils of stately begums and ranees are being sorted over for use at the Durbar, and dresses of exceptional richness are now being made by court costumers.

To please the eye of the color loving Hindoo, bright hues will be extensively worn, the Queen herself giving a lead in this respect. For many of the Durbar dresses cloth of gold will be a favorite fabric and color, worn with beautiful brocades and elaborate embroideries.

The gilded splendors of the picturesque scene will suggest to visitors at Delhi a twentieth century revival of the Field of Cloth of Gold, whereon Henry VIII. greeted the French King with a gallant company.

The ducal houses of Devonshire, Hamilton and Manchester will be represented at the Durbar festivities, as well as several historic marquisates and earldoms.

The preparation and transit of the regalia to be used at the Durbar are now being considered by those in authority. The crowns, it is now definitely decided, will be the same as worn at the coronation at Westminster Abbey, but with the addition, it is understood, of the famous Koh-i-noor Diamond. This is being set in Queen Mary's crown, and she will be the first crowned head to wear it in India for many centuries. When the Punjab was annexed to the British crown the Koh-i-noor was sent home to Queen Victoria, and thus was fulfilled the destiny of the stone, for "who holds the Koh-i-noor holds India" runs the proverb.

But the Koh-i-noor may not be worn by a man, or disaster will befall him. If worn by a woman good fortune will bless her. So, in obedience to the warning tradition linked with the possession of the gem, it is not the King, but the Queen, who will display the splendid diamond on her crown when India meets its imperial rulers.

Queen Mary's jewelry will make an almost matchless display, even at Delhi. By way of graceful compliment to the givers, she intends also to wear the lovely necklace of vari-colored pearls presented to her among other Indian gifts when, as Princess of Wales, she visited the Eastern Empire some years ago. The necklace contains pearls of black, gray, yellow, pink, mauve and other wonderful colors.

China's Boy Emperor Ends Infant Days; Like All Children, He Must Go to School

At the Ripe Age of Five Years Titular Ruler Over Four Hundred Million Persons Is No Longer a Carefree Lad, but Goes Under the Instruction of Stern Tutors of the Confucian Classics.

[Special Despatch.]
Pekin, Saturday.

FROM end to end of the Middle Kingdom the Dragon Flag flew from every schoolhouse and government building on the eighteenth day of the seventh moon, third year of Hsuan-Tung. All China celebrated the day as one most auspicious.

Having attained the ripe age of five, the boy Emperor—titular ruler over four hundred million persons—finds himself in the unpleasant predicament of youths in all lands, compelled to-day to begin his school life. All his surroundings in the gilded palaces of the Forbidden City are from now shaped to impress upon him the fact that "life is real, life is earnest." No longer to be a carefree child; his place in life is that of Chosen Son of Heaven charged with responsibility for the welfare of the myriads of his "glossy haired children," and his one aim now must be to prepare himself for this great responsibility.

To "go to school" means, however, for the school to come to him. Two high officials noted for their erudition have been selected as his tutors in the Chinese language and Confucian classics, which must form the groundwork of his education, and an eminent Manchu has been chosen to instruct him in the Manchu language and literature, that he may not be ignorant, as many Manchus are, of the history and traditions of his forefathers. Later tutors in English and world history will be provided for him, but before that superstructure is erected the foundations must be properly laid.

The senior tutor of the Emperor is Mr. Lu Jun-Hsiang, president of the Privy Council, one of the most eminent Chinese scholars in official life. Mr. Lu took the highest degree in the metropolitan examination in 1874 and was made a reader of the Han-lin College, the goal of literary ambition. He has a long official career, this culminating in appointment to the Grand Sectariat and, upon its creation this year, the presidency of the Privy Council.

Mr. Chen Pao-Chen, junior tutor, is a younger man. He had for a long time been sub-chancellor of the Grand Sectariat, and then was appointed Governor of Shansi Province. From the latter post he was taken to fill that of imperial tutor—the highest of honors.

Mr. I-Ko-Tap, the Manchu tutor, is a Han-lin and has been vice president of the censorate. Not much is known of him save that he is one of the few Manchus who have attained literary distinction.

It is reported that Mr. Liang Tun-Yen, president of the Foreign Office, will head the tutors of English and modern studies, but no official announcement has yet been made. Mr. Liang is a Yale man, class of 1892.

Japanese Warns America

[Special Despatch.]
Tokio, Saturday.

WRITING on the subject of Japanese expansion under the title "Urgently Westward, Slowly Eastward," the well known Japanese scholar and publicist Dr. K. Ukita, in an article published in the New Review (Shinkoron), defends the emigration policy of the present government as the only wise one to follow in the existing circumstances.

With the popular clamor against the supposed weakness displayed by the government in its dealings with America, he has no sympathy. With reference to Japan's position in Corea and Manchuria twelve years hence, when the period for which certain territory has been leased will expire, Dr. Ukita is of opinion that the question must depend largely on the number of Japanese settlers in those territories.

He does not hesitate to declare that Japan can never restore territory which cost her so much to acquire. He cites by way of justification for the course he recommends the policy likely to be adopted by Russia. He thinks that both Japan and Russia should join hands hereafter and show China an unyielding front, going so far as to quote the spoliation of Poland by Russia, Austria and Prussia as worthy of imitation in the Far East twelve years hence.

Coming to the question of Japan's relations with America, Dr. Ukita thinks that if the latter country stood alone she would be by no means formidable either on land or on the sea. But America is on friendly terms with various Powers, and therefore any warlike action against her on Japan's part would turn the entire world against her and imperil her position in the neighboring continent.

In these circumstances the writer advises his countrymen in America to bear patiently the affronts they encounter, but at the same time he warns America against the danger of carrying oppression beyond the endurance of a self-respecting people like the Japanese.

Moreover, he admits that many of the Japanese settlers in America have given just cause for offence, noting particularly that they do not assimilate with American ways and habitually cause offence by their manner of living. He urges that in future those who proceed to the United States should possess a fair knowledge of English and should be sufficiently acquainted with Western customs and manners to be in a position to mix with Occidentals without giving offence.

Test Automatic Telephone System

[Special Despatch.]
London, Saturday.

THE question as to whether a system of automatic telephones will be introduced into general use in England depends upon results of experiments which are about to be undertaken by the General Post Office, officials of which have ordered the Lorimer Automatic Exchange to be installed at Caterham, in Surrey, a place where, for reasons which only experts can understand, should afford a good test for the system, said Mr. Tennant, who represents the Lorimer telephone in Europe.

This is the first order that has been given in England for anything of the kind. It is a new departure in the British telephone service, and is one of the results of a visit which several post office engineers made to America this year, it having been found that automatic exchanges had been giving a very efficient service for some years, and that the automatic system was preferred to the manual. If the Caterham exchange proves a success on the subject," the Lorimer system will likely be introduced in other places.

But the Post Office also intends to test the Strowger system, which is another American invention.

"We have to proceed slowly, of course," said a high Post Office official, "and we have a perfectly open mind in putting these two systems to the test. If they achieve all that is claimed for them, their general application would mean decreased cost in the upkeep of telephones, which is of some importance whether the undertaking is run by an individual or by the State. Exactly to what extent there would be a decrease it is difficult to say, but it is conceivable that it would be sufficient to enable us to get back to a flat rate.

"The initial cost of installing the system anywhere would exceed that which is involved under present circumstances, but the annual expenses would be less. It remains to be seen whether automatic exchanges will give as good a service to subscribers as exchanges worked by operators. There is a difference of opinion

OLD LADY ALMOST CRAZY WITH ECZEMA

A Remarkable and Convincing Statement of the Success of Cuticura Soap and Ointment in the Treatment of the Pain, Itching and Burning of Eczema

"I, the undersigned, cannot give enough praise to the Cuticura Remedies. I had been doctoring for at least a year for eczema on my foot. I had tried doctor after doctor all to no avail. When a young girl I sprained my ankle three different times, paying little or no attention to it, when five years ago a small spot showed upon my left ankle. I was worried and sent for a doctor. He said it was eczema. He drew a small bone from the ankle about the size of a match and about an inch long. The small hole grew to about the size of an apple, and the eczema spread to the knee. The doctors never could heal the hole in the ankle. The whole foot ran water all the time.

"My husband and my sons were up night and day wheeling me from one room to another in the hope of giving me some relief. I would sit for hours at a time in front of the fireplace hoping for daybreak. The pain was so intense I was almost crazy, in fact, I would lose my reason for hours at a time. One day a friend of mine dropped in to see me. No more had she glanced at my foot than she exclaimed, 'Mrs. Finnegan, why in the world don't you try the Cuticura Remedies!' Being disgusted with the doctors and their medicines, and not being able to sleep at all, I decided to give the Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment a trial. After using them three days that night I slept as sound as a silver dollar my night long hours. I awoke in the morning with but very little pain, in fact, I thought I was in heaven. After using the Cuticura Remedies for three months I was perfectly restored to health, thanks to the Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I will be sixty-four years of age my next birthday, hale and hearty at present." (Signed) Mrs. Julia Finnegan, 2356 Hebert St., St. Louis, Mo., Mar. 7, '11.

Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold throughout the world. Send to Potter D. & C. Corp., 47 Columbus Ave., Boston, U. S. A. for free sample of each with 32-p. book.

AN ARCTIC NIGHT

A Dark Curtain That Shuts Out Warmth and Light, and Depresses

We were at the foot of Humboldt Glacier when the sun bade us a final adieu for a long winter night, not to appear again for many months to come. As though to leave us with pleasant memory of his visit, his going was in an effulgence of glory, and, reluctant to go, he lingered for a little while below the horizon, lighting the sky with a mass of marvellous coloring—red, purple and orange, reaching upward from the white earth into the deep blue of the high heavens. For a time a prolonged twilight remained, but that, too, was presently lost behind the dark curtain that shut from our world all warmth and light.

No words can adequately describe the awful pall of the Arctic night. It is unreal and terrible. Even the moonlight is unnatural, casting on the snow and ice, the wind-swept rocks, and the people themselves, a shade of ghastly, indefinable greenish yellow. Shifting shadows flit among moving ice massed like wraiths of departed spirits. A death-like silence prevails, to be broken only by the startling and unexpected crackling of a glacier with a sound of mighty thunder clap, or the smashing together of great ice floes with a report like heavy cannon.

In spite of one, depression takes possession of the soul—a hopeless kind of unreasoning depression. Intense and severe as the cold may be, any active man can stand it without serious suffering, when a little experience teaches how, for that acts only on the physical being, and can be guarded against; but the prolonged sunless night has a direct effect on the human mind which only exercise and diversion can counteract.—From "Hunting From the Eskimos," by Harry Whitney.

Light Water Craft

A Parisian inventor has devised a craft for getting over the water, which is so light and compact that it can be folded up and packed into a box no bigger than an ordinary suit-case. The case part unfolds and joins together to form the main framework or hull of the boat, which is of the catamaran order. The two cigar-shaped floats are made of waterproof canvas. When packed up they occupy little space, and when in use they are blown up with a bicycle pump. The framework is fastened between them by means of ribs and straps, and when you have fixed a three-jointed, double-bladed paddle together and put a folding seat in place you are all ready to set out on your marine travels.

USING WOOD SCRAPS

In these days of high-priced lumber the utilization of the small pieces of wood formerly considered of little or no value assumes considerable importance. The Woodworker gives a number of uses for these scraps.

Brush manufacturers have made some headway in using waste from furniture factories, but the pieces are of so many sizes and of such irregular shapes that success has been only partial. A small porch chair shop has been able to draw a considerable part of its raw material from the waste of boat factories.

Wheelwrights save the ends cut from spokes and shape them in lathes for chisel, gimlet, auger and other small tool handles. Wagon builders occasionally make use of scraps of hardwoods for lining brake blocks. Sash and blind makers save their scraps for the match factories, or if the pieces are large enough they are worked into corner blocks, rose blocks and balusters.

Coopers recut broken or defective staves of the larger sizes and make kegs or smaller vessels of them. Small headings are economically manufactured in that way. Occasionally defective staves and headings are made into dowels. Basket makers save the cores from which veneer has been cut and saw them into thin slats for baskets and crate covers.

Some of the makers on interior finish work their odds and ends of soft woods into small boxes and the hard wood scraps are made into parquet flooring. Planing mills work scraps and broken pieces, unsalable in that form, into boxes for apples medicines and other articles and into brackets, balusters, rose blocks and small quarter-round moulding.

KING GEORGE AND THE BABY

Pretty Incident That Occurred Long Time Ago in Australia

A charming story of King George's kindness of heart has just been related by the Rev. Henry Howard, at a children's festival at Adelaide, Australia.

The occasion was the King's first visit to Australia as a cadet, with his brother, the late Duke of Clarence. In the course of this visit the two Princes went to Melbourne by coach from Mount Gambier.

The young Princes sat on the box seat during the long and dreary drive. The driver told them all about the kangaroo and the wallaby, and explained things they had never seen before, and his hearers were greatly interested. He mentioned that he had a little two-months-old girl in his home near to Casterton, and Prince George expressed a desire to see the baby.

The coach was, therefore, pulled up at the rural home, and the infant having been shown to the Prince, he took it in his arms and kissed it. Having handed the baby back to her mother, Prince George took a sovereign from his pocket, and asked the coachman to give it to the girl when she grew older, and to tell her that Prince George had presented it to her.

Twenty-one years later Prince George, as Duke of York, was again in Australia. Having ascertained that the old coachman was alive, he sent a message that he was to come to Melbourne. The old man readily accepted, and found that his fare had been paid. The Duke met him at Government House, and immediately asked after the little girl.

The old man's eyes dimmed with tears and his lips quivered as he said that the child had died. The Royal visitor was distressed by the news, but consoled the friend of his boyhood, and insisted that he should remain for a week at Government House as his guest.

During that week, amid all the engagements for the Commonwealth festivities, the Duke of York, for one hour every day, gave his time to the old coachman.

BUFFALO BULLS IN BATTLE

Deposed Ruler of Herd Tries Conclusions Again and Is Killed.

Two bulls, monarchs of the buffalo herd at City Park zoo, at Denver, engaged in mortal combat. One was killed. The other is now king with a dozen subjects to pay him homage as ruler.

The bisons, as fine specimens as were in captivity, tried conclusions a year ago, when Pablo, imported from Montana and 9 years old, was bested by Colorado, a home product of the same size and pugnacity, after an all night contest full of gore and fierceness.

Loss of prestige did not set well with Pablo. He was never the same. Pulled from his throne in a night, he sulked and bided his time, just like the jealous ruler expatriated but ever mindful and determined to win back his throne.

Just how these two massive animals started their battle no one knows, save the others of the herd, and they are dumb. When Animal Keeper Hill made his usual inspection of his wards, lying in one corner of the buffalo lot he found Colorado, horned horribly and dead.

For fifty feet the earth had been ploughed up violently. It was also blood soaked. More than 100 feet away stood Pablo, docile, fatigued his mane clogged with gore and dirt, his horns discolored with Colorado's life blood. The dozen other members of the herd were gathered about the hay stack, eating as if nothing had occurred.

Like man, the buffalo must have his king. The difference is that the latter must win his throne by sheer force of strength. Hereditary does not go among people of the plains. Since the herd was brought to City Park zoo a score of years ago the rulership has gone to him that wrested it from his predecessor.

DO YOU KNOW HOW TO BREATHE?

Not One in Ten Adults Know the Correct Way.

A gentleman gave good advice to a young lady who complained of sleeplessness. He said: "Learn to breathe, and darken your room completely, and you won't need any doctoring!"

"Learn how to breathe! I thought that was one thing we learned before coming into the world," the insomnic said, ruefully.

On the contrary, not one in ten adults know how to breathe. To breathe perfectly is to draw the breath in long, deep inhalations, slowly and regularly, so as to relieve the lower lungs of a noxious accumulation.

I have overcome nausea, headache, sleeplessness, seasickness, and even more serious threatenings, by simply going through a breathing exercise pumping from my lower lungs, as it were, all the malarial inhalations of the day by long, slow, ample breaths. Try it before going to bed, making sure of standing where you can inhale pure air, and then darken the room completely. We live too much in an electric glare by night. If you still suffer from sleeplessness after this experiment is fairly tried, I shall be surprised.

The Man at Fault

While angling the other day a full size man was pulled overboard by a 12-lb. flounder, and narrowly escaped drowning. In fixing the blame a newspaper gravely points out that it should be clearly seen the man was at fault rather than the fish, for he could have let go, but the fish couldn't.

MAN OF THE PAST

James Grant Refers to Some Canadian Pioneers

Sir James Grant, Ottawa, addressing the members of Kotland Masonic Lodge, Toronto, said in part: "Canada cannot boast of historic temples, ancient monuments or archaeological developments, but she has a pride in the men of the past century, who, throughout the country, have taken an active part in making Canada the great centre of attraction in the civilized world. In 1854 I entered McGill University in Montreal as a student of medicine, and resided with the late Mr. Allan Macdonald, ex-chief factor of the Hudson Bay Company in the Northwest. He was a gentleman of high culture and refinement of taste, and was a remarkable example of the intellectual ability common amongst the factors of the Hudson Bay Company." Sir James spoke of the days he spent with Sir George Simpson and other Hudson Bay factors at the home of the late Mr. Macdonald, and how the conversations always turned to the wonderful work of the Hudson Bay Company from the Atlantic to the Pacific in the fur trade. Mr. Macdonald lost his eyesight two years after Sir James first met him, and the latter was asked to take charge of the bulk of Mr. Macdonald's correspondence, and Sir James said that in this way he was in a position to learn a great deal about the workings of the historic fur-trading company, and of the extent of its influence on the future of Canada's commerce. He said that in 1863 he delivered in the city of Ottawa, where he moved in 1854, an address on the desirability of closer union between the different Provinces of the Dominion, and of the early construction of the Trans-continental Railway. Sir John Macdonald asked the speaker where he got so much information relative to these subjects, and Sir James's reply was that he got most of it as a result of his close associations with the factors of the Hudson Bay Company.

FUEL FROM POTATOES

In the Form of Denatured Alcohol They Will be Valuable

Culled potatoes will be furnishing the power for the gang plow and the engine on the farm before many more years go by.

A bushel of culled potatoes is worth fifty-six cents. Turned into denatured alcohol they would be worth seventy-two cents. The process of extracting the alcohol is not one that every farmer can carry on, but the alcohol is there all right.

Alcohol is produced by the fermentation of sugar. Potatoes contain starch that may be converted into sugar by the addition of malt and then fermented. The potatoes are steamed until the starch is cooked thoroughly. Then the malt is added. When the starch has been converted into sugar a yeast mash is added and the sugar is fermented. What is left from the potato mash can be fed to cattle. Experiments have proved that the mash has a high feeding value.

Denatured alcohol is used for heating and lighting, in chemicals, in varnishes, in explosives, and as a fuel for engines. For some years the tax laws were such that alcohol was too expensive as fuel for engines. For this reason machinery has not been adapted for using denatured alcohol. But it is coming into use.

The United States Department of Agriculture has issued a bulletin recently on this subject. Denatured alcohol is being extracted from potatoes in other countries with success.

A distillery for this sort of work might be conducted by a farmer's co-operative association or as a private enterprise. A plant with a daily capacity of eight thousand pounds of potatoes would cost approximately $12,000. This is larger, considerably than would be practicable for a co-operative enterprise. The plant would have to be in a potato growing country with good railway facilities.—Kansas Industrialist.

A Coal Stove That Keeps The Floor Warm

The Regal does this in two ways:

In the first place it creates continuous currents of warm air in the room. There is a special flue inside the stove, apart from the fire chamber and free from gas or smoke. This flue draws in the cold air from the floor, heats it, and passes it out at the top. See diagram.

In addition to this the Regal radiates extra heat near the floor. All the hot smoke and fumes from the fire pass down and through a flue under the ash-pit before they reach the pipes. This keeps the stove hot at the bottom and helps materially to warm the floor.

The REGAL PENINSULAR

With its massive nickel parts, heavily plated and elegantly formed—with its large oven—with its perfect duplex grates and durable fire-box, the Regal Peninsular has a combination of beauty and heating comforts not usually found in a heater.

It is thoroughly Peninsular and that means that it is honestly made.

It has proven economical both in fuel consumed, and in its years of service.

If you are interested in heaters or ranges, get "THE COST." It is a booklet you should read before you buy. Ask for it.

STORY OF A SHIPWRECK

Thrilling Narrative of the Survivors of the Fifeshire.

Five members of the crew of the wrecked liner, Fifeshire, which went ashore off the coast of Somaliland, told a thrilling story when they landed. Death at the hands of frenzied Somalis, or by drowning or starvation were the alternatives that seemed to face those on board when the Fifeshire ran on the rocks. "Most of the passengers were in their bunks and many of them were asleep," said Robert Mason, steerage steward. "Signals of distress were made and rockets fired, but these brought no assistance. We passed a horrible night, and in the morning, to make matters worse, we saw that the shore was lined with savages, armed with spears and looking decidedly unfriendly. They made threatening gestures, and altogether made it clear to us that our presence was not desired. The shore was only about four hundred yards away, and about twenty of the natives swam out to the ship; Captain Cramer, however, would only allow one of the men to come on board. When the man got on deck he pointed to those of his party who were on shore and drew his hand across his throat in a significant manner. He muttered something the whole time, but we could not make out a word of it. The mate dressed him in a gold-braided suit and made him presents of tobacco, and with these he swam ashore."

All through the day the natives watched events on the liner, and after dark it was thought they might attempt to surprise the ship's company. Careful watch was kept and guns were discharged at intervals. The ship was abandoned, and those on board—110 altogether—left in four boats for Aden, some 450 miles away. The third officers' boat capsized, but the occupants were rescued, and their craft was righted. At eleven o'clock at night, those in the third officers' boat sighted the light of a liner, the French steam-ship Adour. After sixteen hours searching the Adour picked up two of the other boats, but no trace could be found of the boat containing the second officer and twenty-three other persons. There were about five women and two children among those in the missing boat. A number of animals, including a kangaroo, four goats and several donkeys were on the Fifeshire, and were set free by the captain before leaving the vessel. The cargo consisted mainly of provisions.

TO HONOR SHAKESPEARE

The New Theatre in London Will Cost a Fabulous Sum

The executive committee of the Shakespeare National Theatre Fund now feel almost certain that an immense theatre facing Trafalgar Square will not only be an accomplished fact, but that it will be actually opened on April 23rd, 1916, the tercentenary of Shakespeare's death. The site alone will cost about $2,500,000, and the theatre itself an even larger amount. The fund now possesses only $500,000, but this money has been raised without appealing to the public. Such an appeal will now be made, and the committee expects to raise the necessary $5,000,000 in two years.

"As to the repertoire," says the secretary of the committee, "it will include, on an average, at least one Shakesperian and one other English classical play each week, and will also embrace new or recent plays. English architects of the first order of merit. The architectural features of the theatre are matters for the future. The design will be the subject of competition, of course. We hope to secure the endowment before we put up the building."

INVISIBLE BANDITS

Some Crimes are Committed by Murderers Whom No One Has Seen

The neighborhood of La Roquette sur-Siagne, near Cannes, France, has again been thrown into a panic by the attempt to murder a farmer and his wife by the "invisible bandits of Perguman."

A year ago a band of murderers who were known by this name ravaged the district, attacking villas and farmhouses. The bandits were nicknamed "invisible" as no one had ever seen them.

Lately, Mme. Roussey-Dalon, the wife of a wealthy farmer, while standing at the window of her father's villa, was shot by an unknown person, expiring almost immediately. The only clue was a piece of wadding discovered on the window sill.

An attack was made on a farm at Mouans-Sartoux, a village close to La Roquette sur-Siagne. While a farmer and his wife were going to bed a hail of stones rained on the shutters of the windows. About two hours later, when the couple were in bed, a gun was pushed through an air-hole in the shutters and three shots discharged into the room.

One bullet lodged in the head of the bed, and on examination it was found to be similar to that which caused the death of Mme. Roussey-Dalon. Detectives are scouring the country-side in search of the bandits.

GRANDMOTHERS' BEAUTIFUL HAIR
Color and Beauty of the Hair Preserved with a Harmless Remedy Made from Sage.
Druggists everywhere comment on the fact that they are selling large quantities of sage for making old-fashioned "sage tea," such as was used by our grandmothers for promoting the growth of their hair, making it fluffy and beautiful and restoring its natural color.
The demand for this well-known herb for this purpose has been so great that one manufacturer has taken advantage of the fact and has placed on the market an ideal "sage tea," containing sulphur, a valuable remedy for dandruff and scalp rashes and irritations, called Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy.
The manufacturers of this remedy authorize druggists to sell it under guarantee that the money will be refunded if it fails to do exactly as represented.
This preparation is offered to the public at fifty cents a bottle, and is recommended and sold by all druggists.

WOMEN STEEPLEJACKS

Instances of Where They Have Climbed to Perilous Heights

Lady Constance Pelham, whose failure to put in an appearance at St. Peter's, Eaton Square, where she was due to be married to the steeplejack of Whitwell-on-the-Hill, Yorkshire, created such a sensation, is an enterprising steeple-climber. In September, 1909, she, accompanied by two lady friends, climbed the spire of Whitwell Church, which was then undergoing repair.

In order to take some unique photographs, the sale of which was for the benefit of the church funds, the daughter of a well-known Leicester steeplejack accomplished the hazardous feat of climbing the steeple of St. Mark's Church, which is 200 feet high. When at the top she daringly walked round the narrow, unprotected staging, whence she took some fine views.

The steeple of All Saints', Hereford, which rises to the height of 340 feet, was two years back the scene of a daring exploit on the part of the pet of the daughter of one of the churchwardens. Accompanied by the professional steeplejack, who was engaged upon some repairs, she ascended to the summit, the feat being watched by an immense crowd of townsfolk and farmers from the neighboring villages and farms, who had come into the town to attend the Wednesday market.

Equally daring was a Stoke Newington lady, who, in February, 1874, scaled the spire of St. Mary's Church, the summit of which is 245 feet above the pavement. The last part of the journey was especially dangerous, as it had to be accomplished by means of a couple of unprotected ladders, leading directly to the weathercock, which the lady, to signalize the achievement of her task, sent spinning round.

In 1761, shortly before it was rebuilt, the spire of St. Mary's Church, Leicester, was ascended by a steeplejack named Wright, accompanied by his wife, as expert a climber as himself. The woman, dressed for the occasion in male attire, rendered her husband efficient assistance in the repairs that he had in hand, and so greatly was her pluck admired that a number of the townsmen entertained her to a supper at the principal inn, when she was presented with a purse containing five guineas.

Two years later this same woman undertook, in the absence of her husband through illness, to ascend the spire of Trinity Church, Coventry, which stood in need of slight repair. She accomplished her task to the entire satisfaction of her employers. In more recent years the wife of a Bradford steeplejack has not only frequently accompanied her husband on his ascents, but at times has, unaided completed work which he had in hand. She owed her ability to her father who, himself a steeplejack, had taught her to climb from early girlhood.

During the rebuilding of the spire of Wakefield Cathedral in the early years of the eighteenth century, a woman disguised in male attire, was among the most zealous of the workers, ascending to perilous heights and positions with the utmost intrepidity. Having met with an accident, her sex, until then unsuspected, was disclosed, and she was claimed by her relations, well-to-do people, whom, in the pure spirit of adventure, she had left in utter ignorance as to her whereabouts.

Mme. Saqui, the funambulist, whose performance at Vauxhall drew all the town, made, in 1812, an ascent of the church spire at Harfleur. Her feat would seem to have partaken of the nature of "steeple-flying," for having successfully made her way to the summit, where she beat a drum and blew a trumpet which she had taken up with her, she descended by gliding down a rope to the street below.

Previous to Mme. Saqui's appearance, another woman athlete, named Rayner, had toured through England, alternating her performances on the tight-rope with acrobatic displays on church steeples. Among other spires which she climbed was that of Lichfield Cathedral, in the ascent of which she was accompanied by a younger sister. On arriving at the summit the couple played on various instruments, drank a glass of wine to the health of the spectators below, and fired off a gun. They then made a safe descent amid considerable applause.

"I had been given up to die by three of our best doctors,
I could not stand it to be on my feet and I was so swelled in the abdomen I could hardly breathe.
But thanks to Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy and Nervine I am able to be about the streets, a walking advertisement of the curative qualities of your remedies, although I am 70 years old."

PANDORA RANGE

for Coal or Wood

Its Long Life

THE Pandora Range is for those who desire to make a permanent investment. The high quality of the materials and the superior method of construction assure long life.

The Body of the Pandora is very heavy. The Rods and Bolts are on the outside where they cannot burn or rust out. The Expansion Rings of the cooking section provide ample allowance for extreme expansion and contraction and eliminate the possibility of the metal cracking.

The Cooking Top is Burnished which toughens the surface of the metal and increases its strength. McClary Oil Cement is used between the joints. Unlike cheap, ordinary cement, it will not dry out and need replacing. The Nickelling will not tarnish and is, many times more durable than the single coat of nickel on ordinary ranges.

The Semi-Steel Fire Box Linings are twenty per cent. heavier than cast or gray iron linings. Sulphur fumes, so destructive to cast iron, cannot penetrate the hard, smooth as glass surface of Semi-Steel. The Grates have Three Faces, which allows the wear to be distributed on three sides, insuring triple durability.

If you want a range of guaranteed quality get the Pandora. It's built to give you lasting service.

LUNACY STATISTICS

Interesting Figures of the British Commissioners—Unemployment as a Cause of Insanity

Some figures of interest to life insurance are contained in the sixty-fifth report of the British Commissioners on Lunacy. Their returns show that alcohol is responsible for about 16 per cent. of the cases reported, while 30 per cent. were traced to unemployment. One of the commissioners thinks that lunacy will be largely lessened directly some method is found of increasing the general prosperity of Great Britain.

It is pointed out in the commissioners' report that in 9.6 per cent. of the cases has mental stress alone been the assignable cause of attack, though it is also explained that prolonged mental strain has been associated with nearly every other assignable factor in the category of causes. In confirmation of the assertion that insanity is an hereditary disease, the report states that:—

"Our statistics show—and since their introduction, upwards of fifty years ago, have shown—that there is a family history of insanity in persons admitted to asylum care amounting, on an average, in the case of males, to 19 per cent., and of females to 23 per cent., of the total yearly admissions. This is probably an under-estimate, for there is always a considerable residuum concerning whom it is impossible to obtain positive information on this point."

But the report states that to ignore the factor of inheritance because three times the number of insane apparently come of sane stock would be unwarrantable. It is gratifying to note, further, that:—

At marriagiable ages—twenty-five and upwards—the proportion of the unmarried of both sexes is considerably higher amongst the insane than it is in the general population, and to a slighter extent also in the widowed. Considerabl ymore single than married or widowed persons were admitted to care.

It also appears from the report that the proportions of the sexes certified yearly as insane are exactly the same, so far as relation to the number of persons in the country is concerned. There are, it is well known, more females than males in the country, and the estimated proportion per 1,000 in the general population for the middle of 1910 are—males, 483.8; females, 517.2.

The proportions amongst the insane annually admitted to care are practically identical—males, 484.0; females, 516.0. Concerning readmissions to care, it is stated that they form from 17 to 18 per cent. of the total admissions, and may be considered to consist mainly of those who, in previous years, have been discharged as "relieved" or "not improved," and also of patients who, having left an asylum "recovered," are admitted with a recurrent attack. So far as asylum statistics go, the proportion of such occurrences is about one-fourth of those originally discharged as "recovered."

THE USEFUL CEDAR

Used by Indians for Everything, From Canoe to Food.

The Indians made much use of Western red cedar before white men became acquainted with the region in which it grew. From it they obtained food, clothing, shelter, means of transportation and apparatus for fishing and the chase. From the tree trunks the savages made canoes of all sizes, from the small trough that carried two men to the enormous dugouts that transported fifty or more upon long expeditions in war and peace. Before the Indians obtained metal tools from white traders they hollowed their canoes with fire and with their primitive stone and bone implements. Some of their dugouts are of enormous size, hewed from single trunks, and with lines so perfect that civilized men can scarcely suggest improvement. The making of a canoe of moderate size, by the crude means at the Indians' command in the early days, required several months of hard labor with flint adzes that chipped away pieces of wood not much larger than grains of sawdust.

The Indians of the region where western red cedar abounded generally chose it for such carpentry as they were capable of doing. Their choice was due to the softness of the wood, which meant a great deal to beams and doors with no better tools than fire, flint, bone and shell. They made fully as much use of the bark as of the wood. With it they roofed, ceiled, floored, and papered their huts. They wove long strips of bark—sometimes thirty feet in length—into mats, which they used for beds, tables, blankets, and on ceremonial occasions. They made clothing of the same material. They twisted the bark into ropes for dog harness, ladders, fishlines and snares for wild animals and nets for catching fish. The list of uses for the bark did not end there, for they were able to make food of it. They beat the bark to a pulp, baked in cakes, and after completely saturating it with salmon oil they pronounced it a palatable and nutritious article of diet. It is believed, however, that the food value of the cakes was derived more from the fish oil than from the bark. —Agricultural Report.

FOREIGN COLONIES GROWING

Discontent Among the Foreign Population of South Wales

The rapid growth of foreign colonies in South Wales is causing discontent among the native population. The latest protest is from Newport, where many of the residents of the Pigwenlly district, a working-class area, have sent a petition to the Watch Committee, directing attention to the large and rapidly growing settlement of Chinese and other foreigners in their midst, and suggesting that the committee should take measures to check this growth. One of the means proposed is that property owners should be advised not to let premises to foreigners.

SIX MILLION GERMS FOUND ON ONE FLY

Dr. Gordon Hewitt of Ottawa Tells of Dangers of Common Pest

"The House Fly and its Relation to Public Health," was the subject of an address by Dr. G. Hewitt, the prominent entomologist of Ottawa. Had a large number of pictures thrown on the canvas to illustrate the different points of his discourse. By the aid of these he showed the hairy nature of the fly's legs abdomen, which, he explained, could not fail to collect filth and bacteria wherever they were met with. Photos of culture plates were shown over which flies had passed and large colonies of typhoid, tubercular and other bacteria had subsequently formed. Far more germs find lodging inside of a fly tan hwithout, and according to Dr. Hewitt, these may be taken in by the fly or the egg may have become innoculated by the usually filthy substance in which it is deposited. After a few hours the maggot emerges, already infected, nor does it recover when passing through the pupa stage. And so you have your fly born innoculated. Throughout the various transitions from the laying of the eggs till the full-fledged flies are ready to propagate no more than nine or ten days transpire in hot weather. Now a fly deposits from 120 to 150 eggs at a time, and repeats this performance six or eight times during the season. A fly captured in a living room was allowed to stroll over a culture plate. Thirty colonies of six different species of germs developed. Another captured in a dining-room walking over a culture plate gave rise to 46 colonies of seven varieties, and yet another found in the flies' filthy slum, the putrefying garbage heap, deposited in the plate the nucleus of 110 colonies of ten varieties. Over 6,000,000 germs have been found on one fly. Some of the pictures graphically set forth the facility with which the fly passes from the garbage can, stable refuse, excreta, and sputa of the victime of typhoid and tuberculosis, to the kitchen, the dining-room, and the nursery with attending deleterious results. Primarily the cause is untreated or unprotected filth, for without these the fly could not propagate. Effective cures must then deal with these. To banish the fly, the putrifying garbage heap, the exposed manure piles, and various other breeding places must be treated, destroyed or enclosed.

Summer diarrhoea, the most copious source of infantile mortality in summer, is due in no small degree to fly contamination. According to Dr. Hewitt the annihilation of the fly is of the utmost importance. We can succeed, he states, in the same way as the United States Government did in banishing yellow fever by abolishing the mosquitos by destruction of the breeding places.

HER NOVEL

It Was Not a Best Seller, but It Regenerated a Man

By GWENDOLEN WHITING

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

Archie Trever had permitted himself to be drawn into an affair with a woman whom it would not be desirable for him to marry.

Mr. Trever made up his mind to leave the city in which he resided, remain in hiding for awhile, then take up his abode in another place. The summer season was coming on, enabling him to go to the country, remain there till fall, then turn up in the city of his new residence.

For his temporary abode he selected a secluded spot on Lake E., among beautiful hills. He had artistic tastes that he desired to cultivate, and there were many vistas about the lake that would bear being transferred to canvas. The place was not a summer resort, and he was unlikely to meet any one who knew him. He would pass under the name of Brown so that if his presence was reported among those sojourning in the rural districts his identity would be concealed.

For two or three days after his arrival at the Coventry inn, where he took up his abode, he felt very well satisfied with himself. To be good was a new sensation with him, and he rather enjoyed it. He did more or less daubing, but he had very little artistic talent, and his copies of beautiful scenes in the neighborhood would never have been recognized for the originals.

One morning while he was sketching a girl, whose fashionable attire indicated that she was city bred—she carried a silk parasol covered with expensive lace—came sauntering down the road.

The lady, having literary tastes, was endeavoring to make a name for herself in belles-lettres. She had about as much talent for scribbling as Mr. Brown had for painting. But she had submitted a number of her effusions to her intimate friends, all of whom told her that she was a genius. She had therefore determined to bury herself for the summer among woods and waters to gain the inspiration of solitude and write a novel.

The moment she saw Archie Trever his face struck her as familiar. Then it came to her that she had seen his photogravure in an art journal, and lastly she remembered that this likeness was that of a celebrated artist. Had Archie been a nobody not even their lonely surroundings would have induced her to break conventional city rules by speaking to him. But, recognizing him, as she supposed, for a genius and feeling that freemasonry which exists among geniuses, barring jealousy, she stood behind him and looked at his picture.

"Excuse me, sir," she said, "but I am a great admirer of the fine arts, especially painting. That bit of farm vista is beautiful. The pile of hay in the center looks so rural!"

"You are mistaken in that pile of hay," replied Brown, rising and pulling off his little felt top covering. "It is a pond."

"Oh, you impressionista!" exclaimed the critic. "What peculiar methods you use for producing effects! Now that I stand farther away from your picture I see a veritable pond, and the swan is perfect."

"That is a boy in a punt."

"Another impressionist method. The light struck the paint glaringly. From this point I see what you intend."

Archie remained silent.

"I should not have known you had I not seen a picture of you," continued the lady.

"A picture of me!"

"Yes, just before coming to the country."

Archie knit his brows. Could his disappearance have caused a commotion? Had his picture been published for his identification? Surely the woman he was trying to break with would not descend to that.

"I confess," said the girl, "that I, too, am incog. I came to the country to get away from the world."

"But how in the world did you get on to me?"

"Oh, you men of genius can't conceal yourselves. Your very presence bespeaks a difference from other men."

"Men of genius!"

"How clever you are in your method of throwing one off the track? That look of surprise is very well feigned."

Archie heaved a sigh of relief. Evidently the girl had mistaken him for some one else.

"You say you are incog.," he ventured. "May I ask the reason for your not wishing to be known?"

"I don't mean that I am passing under an assumed name. I came to the country to write fiction. I am Irene Iddleston."

"Indeed!" said Archie. He supposed that Irene Iddleston was a great novelist and didn't care to display ignorance of her or her works.

"We two, both having artistic tastes, may assist each other in our work. I should be pleased to see you at a farmhouse where I am stopping, Mr Brown."

Trever started.

"What surprises you?"

"That you should know my—the name I"—

"Oh, you can't get rid of your identity. You may hide your head, like the ostrich, but you will still be visible."

"I shall be delighted to call upon you."

She described the house where she was staying so that he could find it and passed on. Trever stood looking after her with a puzzled expression.

"Well, I'll be jinged!"

He sat down on his three legged stool and tried to go on painting. But he was preoccupied with the girl. Finally he sprang up and exclaimed:

"I have it. She's a detective!"

There was no other explanation. The woman he was trying to "shake" had discovered his whereabouts and sent another woman after him. Ten to one this one who called herself Iddleston would try and get some compromising evidence from him that would serve a purpose in a breach of promise suit. Trevor resolved to be wary and if possible pay the detective in her own coin—that is, if she pursued him. As to going to see her, he had no idea of doing that.

But curiosity prevented his staying away.

One day, passing the farmhouse where she stopped, he saw her sitting on the porch driving a pen. Sheets of manuscript were scattered about. A click of the gate caused her to look up.

"Oh, Mr. Brown," she exclaimed gushingly, "how good of you to come to see me! How honored I feel to receive a visit from a celebrated artist—I, who am entirely unknown in my profession."

"Taffy!" muttered Trever to himself.

"They say," she continued, "that the pen and the brush usually go together. Have you never written anything?"

"Nothing but letters," replied Trever, with a cunning look.

"Letters! Oh, do let me see some of them. I love to read the letters of literary people."

"I have a few that I once wrote a woman whom I thought I loved. After a little spat between us she returned them."

"The very thing I need for a part of my novel that I am now working upon. In them I shall get that genuine feeling we novelists find it difficult if not impossible to imitate."

Trever breathed hard. All doubt that Miss Iddleston had been sent to inveigle him into surrendering certain letters he had written and fortunately recovered was set at rest. An idea struck him. The best defense against a woman is the opposite of fighting her—that is, making love to her. He would outwit her in this way. It did not occur to him that by so doing he would get another affair on his hands. Men never really use their reasons about women. They think they do, but they are under the influence of their feelings instead.

Trever was an attractive fellow, and since he was to Miss Iddleston a celebrated artist he had only to say a few honeyed words and look at her in a melancholy, yearning way to achieve a complete victory. He was not fool enough to give her the letters he had written to another woman; that affair was passed so far as any tender feeling was concerned. Instead, he wrote letters to Miss Iddleston direct. It wasn't necessary for him to write her, for he could see her every day, but she said she needed these letters in her work, so he consented to write a few for her. He intended to refrain from committing himself in any of them, but a man's letters to a woman may be interpreted to mean more than he intends, and he is apt to grow incautious. Trevor had been through the mill before and should have known better. He did know better. The trouble was not in what he knew, but what he did.

A very curious condition existed between Mr. Trevor and Miss Iddleston just before their separation at the end of the summer. Mr. Trevor had treated her as a spy and had taken means to outwit her as such. She considered him a famous artist and an honorable man, whereas he had never achieved anything remarkable and was hiding from a woman he feared.

Then suddenly her eyes were opened to the fact that he had been entirely mistaken in the authoress. Some friends came to see her whom Trever met, and he became aware that she was an eminently respectable young woman and very highly connected. Moreover, he discovered that he had been caught in his own trap and was in love with her.

What was he to do? Confess? Confess what? That he had taken her for a detective. Suppose he should conceal this, his only reason for permitting her to remain under the impression that he was a great artist. And in any event he must make love to her.

Soon after the lady's arrival at home she received the manuscript of her novel with a letter from her critic which said very truthfully that it had excited in him a thrill. It had made a new man of him. Then followed his confession with the statement that without her his regeneration would have been incomplete and hence a failure. With her all there was noble in him would come out.

The young lady suffered a great reaction, but the effect of her literary work brought her around. She married Trever and instead of writing more novels began the care of children.

Doctor Failed to Help—But Morrisey's No. 14 Blood Remedy Restored Health.

TORONTO, ONT., June 8, 1911.

"For the past two years I had been suffering from nervousness and a run-down condition, caused from worry and overwork. I tried several remedies to build up my nervous system, and also had my physician prescribe for me, but I seemed to get no better until I tried your No. 14 Blood Remedy. I used one box, and began to brace up, and by the time I had finished the fifth box was feeling fine. They seemed to quiet my nerves and revive me generally and my complexion is lots better. My appetite is fine—I feel keen and fresh, and am better able to do my work than I have been for over a year. I suppose there are a lot of people troubled as I was, and if this letter will help any of them to find the right remedy, you may publish it for their benefit. I cannot refrain from giving this expression about your No. 14 Blood Tonic, as I consider it without an equal."

Wm. Stewers.

The above prescription is not a "Cure-All" or so-called patent medicine. Dr. Morrisey prescribed it for 44 years, and it cured thousands after other doctors failed.

TWO ROWING CELEBRITIES.

E. B. Butler and Jeff Taylor Promise to Do Big Things.

The present season has seen the Argonaut Rowing Club make the greatest clean-up ever accomplished by one organization in the history of local rowing, and possibly of local sport. The boys who wear the light and dark blue have carried off all the chief national and international championships of the continent, winning with equal ease at both St. Catharines and Saratoga, where the chief regattas took place. When it is all narrowed down, the two youths who stand most in the limelight are E. B. Butler, the sculler, and Jeff Taylor, the stroke of the senior crews.

It was said a few years ago that Ned Hanlan was Canada's best advertisement, and it now remains to be seen whether Butler will take his place. The sculler is a big, boyish fellow, who likes to discuss his contests in a characteristically youthful manner. He came to the front as a sculler rather slowly, but always impressed those who saw him row with the fact that he was the makings of a man who could try for the Diamond Sculls. That will be his next venture. He outclasses all the scullers who have met him this year, as one fact indicates. It is one of the amateur rules of this sport that no contestant can be coached during a race, but at Saratoga an enthusiast in the judge's boat forgot himself and started to tell one of Butler's opponents what to do. The Canadian stopped his craft and protested against such "unoarsman like" conduct. Then dipped his oars in again and won the race.

Jeff Taylor is a finer all-round sport than Butler as he also shines in Rugby, and it might be legitimately added that he sings in the National Chorus. He made his appearance on the horizon several seasons ago, when the Argonauts happened to be particularly weak in seniors, and Taylor saved the day for them at the Canadian Henley by winning the junior, intermediate and senior fours with a crew of unknowns. At that time, Tom Longboat was the athletic idol of the hour, and as the newly discovered stroke was tall, angular and the color of bronze from the effects of sunburn, the sporting public promptly called him "Longboat" Taylor. Although the name was also appropriate for the winner of eight-oared races, it did not stick to him, possibly because he never liked it particularly. Indeed on one occasion, a local sporting editor received a card with the phrase cut from a paper and pasted on it with the request written beneath: "Mr. Jeff Taylor, if you please." Anyway the once popular nick-name has been forgotten, though the oarsman continues to win races. —Saturday Night.

A Landmark in New Brunswick.

"The First European Settlement in New Brunswick was established in 1611 by Captain Marveille and others from St. Malo, France."

This is the inscription on a cairn which the New Brunswick Historical Society erected a few days ago, to commemorate the beginning of civilization in the province by the sea. Caton's Island is several miles up the St. John River. The society made the trip quietly by a brand new steamboat. Three hundred years ago, weary St. Malo voyageurs crept up the river after weeks on the Atlantic and faced a tribe of redskins, whose feelings they hurt somewhat by appropriating their island.

The present owner of Caton's Island is Mr. James Lowell. He has given the New Brunswick Historical Society a deed for the site of their monument that the public may take a look at it whenever they so wish.

The action of the New Brunswick Historical Society in honoring this landmark in the story of New Brunswick, is but a commencement of a campaign in the province to evoke public interest in the past. Both in Nova Scotia and New Brunswick a historical movement at present seems to have a hold on the minds of the people. Very recently in this department mention was made of work done by the Nova Scotia Society in Halifax.

A Variable Condition.

"Any malaria around here?" asked the tourist.

"Some say they is an' some say they ain't," replied the native. "It 'pears to depend mostly on whether the person enjoys the kind of medicine that's mostly took for it."—Washington Star.

The Worst Way.

"We need rain the worst way."

"Oh, no, we don't."

"Why, look! Everything's drying up!"

"Yes, but if we got rain the worst way it would be a repetition of what Noah had to go up against, you know."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Lively Cheese.

The cheese will play."

PORCUPINE GOLD DOME EXTENSION

Underground development on both of these Porcupine properties has reached such an advanced stage, which the market has as yet not responded to, that, judging from the heavy buying by the insiders in these securities yesterday, we are convinced the proper time to secure a stock ownership in either or both of these mines is now.

As large has become the ore reserves at the Vipond above the 100-foot level in the main workings, the directors have decided to erect at once a mill with a capacity to crush 100 tons of ore daily. The treasury is sufficiently strengthened to defray future developments and install the mill, and already the foundation work has started. We are officially informed that at a depth of 125 feet in the main shaft on the Vipond the vein measures 16 feet and the south wall of the vein thus far has not been reached. The ore at this point shows an average assay of over $30 to the ton.

The wonderful showing on the Dome Mines, now known as the "Golden Sidewalk," has been traced to within a few feet of the Dome Extension line, and, according to Mr. George Monteith, there is no longer any doubt but what this sensational vein will be found strong and rich on Dome Extension.

Diamond drills are now at work to prove this vein at depth, and from all reliable and authoritative sources the general opinion is that it will be found equally as rich on Dome Extension as on the Dome Mine itself.

It requires no further facts or arguments to emphasize the great speculative opportunity which Vipond and Dome Extension offer.

Now is the right time to buy.

We have prepared for free distribution a detailed statement regarding the latest developements on these two properties. Mailed on application.

MAKING PROGRESS

New Power Dam at Auburn is Well On Its Way to Completion—Contractor Satisfied With the Conditions

SOON BE READY

A visit was paid to the new power house and dam at Auburn by an Examiner reporter yesterday afternoon, when, although many engineering difficulties presented themselves to a casual observer, who would describe in detail the construction and work it was noticed that the contractors were making steady progress. The power house is now complete and presents a striking aspect from the road. The excavation of the dam is walled up, and, excepting a small portion, is cemented. The main structure for the sluice gates is also nearing completion. Mr. Thomas Levins is the foreman of the Works.

It would be a difficult proposition to number the men employed, as they worked, for the most part, in groups, which were scattered over a large area. An approximate estimate, however, might place the number at about one hundred at the time of the visit.

The reporter interviewed Mr. Clark of Messrs. Clark and Monde, who have a contract for a portion of the work. Mr .Clark gave his opinion that the work was progressing fairly well and that the dam proper would probably be in running order in about a month. The necessary additional work would be proceeded with through the winter until completion. The object of the dam, continued Mr. Clark, is to supply more power for the Auburn Power Co., and the Peterborough Light and Power Co. may have part with it. The work on the dam has now been in progress for twelve months.

SCIENCE "RUSH" AT QUEEN'S

Special to The Examiner.

KINGSTON, OCT. 14.—The Science "rush" at Queen's University took place this morning between 10 and 11 o'clock. The sophmore year was much the stronger and had little difficulty in tieing up the freshmen, though some of the new students were particularly good fighters.

After painting their faces with the college colours and upsetting a package of flour on each one's head the 'sophs' loaded them on waggons decorated with such banners as "Friday the 13th, you know it now"; "Specimens of science freshmen captured at Queen's—perfectly harmless" and "What would the girls back home think of him now," and drove them around the city for an hour.

The Arts rush is expected at the first of the week.

FIRE CAPTAIN IS KILLED

WASHINGTON, D.C., OCT. 14. — Fire Captain Timothy Brown was killed and several of his men injured at a fire in the American Tobacco Company's warehouse this morning, when the floor gave way and buried them in the ruins.

TEETHING TIME WORRY

Baby's teething time was once a source of worry to all mothers—it is yet a time of worry to many, though there are thousands of mothers who have learned the secret which banishes this worry. Mothers who worry, who see their little ones suffering from difficult teething; who are worn out by day and kept awake at night by the cries of the baby in distress, should follow the example of the thousands and give their little ones Baby's Own Tablets — the remedy for worry—the never failing banisher of baby's pains. Concerning them Mrs. H. Monette, Jr., Rapide de l'Original, Que., says: "My baby cried day and night and suffered from his teeth. A few doses of Baby's Own Tablets made him healthy and happy and his teething easy and painless. I would not be without them. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

REVOLUTION SPREADING; WHOLE TOWNS GO OVER

Sanguinary Battles Resulting in Defeat of Government Troops Have Been Fought in China During Past Twenty-four Hours—Government Depending Largely Upon Their Well-Manned Gun-Boats.

Special to The Examiner.

LONDON, OCT. 14.—Authoritative despatches from Pekin and Tokio this morning indicate that the Chinese revolution continues to spread, and there have been sanguinary battles within the last twenty-four hours, which have resulted in the defeat of government troops by the Republican revolutionists. As the hours pass, citizens of whole towns proclaim their city under new Republican government and in most cases, if there are any troops in the town, they go over to the revolutionaries. The government must depend largely on its well organized and manned gunboats on the rivers. These fleets have been sent up with instructions to bombard all cities and towns which have gone over to the revolutionists, and the foreign consuls at Pekin are extremely anxious lest in general reprisals on both sides foreign residents may be generally massacred. Each hour brings reports of terrible massacres of Manchus.

A RIVER DRIVER WAS ATTACKED ON CHEMONG ROAD BY HIGHWAYMEN

William Rutherford While on His Way to the City Was Held Up and Brutally Assaulted—Attempt to Secure His Wad Was Unsuccessful.

A man with a badly battered up countenance, and his right hand swathed in bandages, was observed lingering around the G. T. R. station last night. On being questioned by an Examiner representative as to the cause of his dilapidated-looking condition, he replied that he had been held up on the Chemong Road, by thugs on Thursday evening, while on his way to the city. The victim of the assault gave his name as William Rutherford. He was a river driver by occupation, and has been working on the drive back at Cavendish during the past summer. When within about six miles of Peterborough on Thursday night, two husky-looking forms loomed up in the darkness, and offered to relieve him of his cash. This he strongly objected to do, whereupon they retaliated, by striking him in the face. Rutherford, who, by the way, is a strapping big fellow, quickly assumed the defensive, and, to use his own expression, "the blood and hair flew in all directions." The battle was short and decisive and culminated in a complete rount for the highway men, but not before Rutherford had been badly cut about the face and hands. However, his wad was intact, and he was able to continue his journey. He left for Toronto last night via G. T. R., from which place he will proceed to Sudbury. When questioned as to why he did not report the matter to the police, he said that business in Sudbury demanded his immediate presence there, and he had no desire to be delayed or be mixed up in any police court proceedings which might arise. He considered himself very fortunate that he did not lose his wad which amounted to about $175, and attributes the failure of the thugs to secure it to the fact that it was hidden in his boots. At one stage of the proceedings he was down on the ground, but was enabled to regain his feet before his assailants closed in on him. The appearance of a headlight in the distance was responsible, he thinks, for their hasty retreat.

HERE FOR A FEW DAYS LONGER

Peterborough Citizens Very Much Interested in the Wonderful Exhibit

Owing to the persistency with which the Peterborough public is now interesting itself in the exhibit of the wonderfully preserved or mummified Alaskan Eskimo, Mr. D. H. McInis has decided to remain in the city for a few days longer in order that all the citizens may have the opportunity of seeing this most marvellous phenomenon. There is nothing of the kind known to science outside of this one case, and it is past belief unless you see for yourself that such a state of preservation of a human body is possible.

The exhibit is a clean one and may be witnessed by all citizens. Mr. McInis, the owner of the Exhibit, is going to take the mummy across the water to the British museum in London, England.

Everybody in Peterborough should see this exhibit before it leaves. It is a marvellous one and cannot be explained. Ladies and children should call in the afternoon, when it is not crowded. Admission 10c.

The New England Tea Was A Great Success

The New England tea held by the ladies of All Saints' congregation last night was a decided success in every way. After the tea, the assembly went upstairs and heard the concert, under the efficient direction of Mr. Geo. Chandler ,the choir master. Master Cyril Devey, the church organist, was at the piano.

The following programme was rendered with distinct success:

Piano Solo—Il Trovatore (Dorn) Mr. Cyril Devey; melody in F. (Rubenstein.

Quartette—The Bank of Allan Water, Messrs. Barling, Downs, Brown and Chandler.

Solo—Mr. Herb. Rush.

Piano Duet— The Misses Lee and Stark.

Solo—Mr. Geo. Brown.

Solo—Mr. H. Rush.

Quartette—Banish O' Maiden.

One of the features of the evening was the quartettes rendered by four male members of the choir. They were quite tuneful, both being encored.

Canon Davidson was chairman, assisted by Mr. F. Dawson. Rev. Davidson was well received. He spoke of the good work of the Women's Auxiliary in the past and commended them on their effort this evening to pay off the debt on the surplices.

Mr. Chandler then spoke a few words, after which the meeting closed with the national anthem.

RUSH FOR DIVORCES

Fifty Men Ask For Them on Grounds of Extravagance

PITTSBURG, OCT. 13.—The fall season for divorces opened here Monday ,with 100 women and 98 men asking for separation. Exactly 50 of the men nasked divorces on the ground of extravagance. Nearly all coincided in the view that their wives spent too much money on fashionable gowns and hats.

"Someone ought to murder these Paris freaks, who are continually creating fashions and subsequently making the poor men of Amrica suffr. My wif has bought 44 hats and 29 gowns in one year," dramatically declared Harry Worthington in asking for a divorce from his wife, Pauline.

Shoes to Burn.

They were married in 1910, and Worthington said that $1,000 he had saved has been converted into fine gowns and hats. Forty-nine others besides Worthington declared that their wives had spent hundreds of dollars on fine gowns and hats.

One man said his wife had purchased 28 pairs of shoes, 12 fancy belts, 21 hats and 14 gowns during the year, and that he has discovered his salary of $70 a week is not sufficient to keep her, so he wanted a divorce.

BIG LITTLENESS

Perhaps the Review and those responsible for the telegram to the Minister of Militia, informing him that Mr. Stratton was using the Armouries as coach house, will be more proud, or less proud, as the case may be, of their high-minded and neighbourly solicitude for a fellow-citizen, when they learn that Mr. Stratton has made arrangements to dispose of all his show horses and the appertaining vehicles and equipment. Thus we can breathe again; the country will be saved from the threatening danger which these large-souled patriots seemed to feel so imminent that they exhausted all the resources of red tape to remove it. They sent a telegram of warning to the Minister of Militia; he, in turn, communicated with the Commanding Officer in Kingston, and he, in turn, brought the treasonable condition to the notice of the local commanding officer, and Hon. Mr. Hughes had the matter presented to him personally on the occasion of his brief visit. Mr. Stratton did not feel that he was committing an unpardonable crime. He secured the consent of the military authorities for the use of the Armouries for the purposes of the Horse Show held there last winter, in the interests of the public; and he did not think it a very grave offence if he secured similar consent to use the unused part of the artillery quarters as a safe repository for his vehicles, which, as the best that can be made, or obtained, suggested this use of the part of the Armouries, in default of any other available place, as a safe place of protection. Their presence there did not, and could not, interfere in the slightest degree with the use of the armouries for military purposes.

It is a pleasure to know that we have amongst us high-minded, generous-souled citizens, so alert in the public interests, so solicitous to show neighbourly and kindly attention to a fellow citizen. For downright littleness of soul, meanness of motive, and leanness of the spirit of cooperative citizenship, the action referred to is without a parallel in Peterborough. The offending vehicles and horses will be removed from Peterborough, and we shall see whether any of these gentlemen will bring them, or similar, back to the city. If these gentlemen prefer to see "plugs" and ramshackle conveyances on the city streets, instead of the best horse flesh of Great Britain and the best vehicles obtainable, they should be satisfied, and complacently claim the credit, as they will do, of being champions in redressing a great wrong and neutralizing a grave menace to the national safety.

However, it will likely be fine. The leaders of both teams declare it is just what the peculiar characteristics of their respective teams need and all are confident of victory.

The opinion of people of this city naturally favours the Giants. Outsiders consider the chances are about even.

MR. H. P. KENNEDY GIVES IMPRESSIONS OF WEST

Tells of the Stock Conditions in the Prairie Provinces—He is Very Enthusiastic Over the Prospects Before the City of Edmonton.

While the west has some cattle to spare it is thought shipments to Ontario this fall will be considerably lighter than last year. This is the opinion of Mr. H. P. Kennedy, who returned to Toronto yesterday after an extended tour of the prairie country in quest of first-hand information.

Recalling the fact that the western ranges were depleted last autumn, when 50,000 export cattle, 40,000 butchers' and 30,000 feeders were shipped east from Winnipeg, on account of the scarcity of feed, Mr. Kennedy said the best-posted western men believed shipments this year would show a material decrease, because there has been a shortage of beef west of the great lakes for the past six months, and the prospects are that supplies will be none too plentiful for some time to come. "A few cattle," he continued, "are being shipped to Montreal, some of them for slaughter there and some for export, but the majority are being bought on speculation, and these are losing money because prices are too high in Winnipeg to give shippers a profit. Local demand is supplemented by calls from British Columbia, both for beef and pork. Large shipments of the latter, of course, are now going to the Prairie Provinces from Ontario. More will be needed. The western production of hogs has not kept pace with the influx of immigrants. And while the west has not a great many cattle to spare, it will not require beef from Ontario, immediately at all events."

Mr. Kennedy was much impressed with the progress made by such cities as Calgary and Edmonton. "The latter has great possibilities. Calgary is busier at the present but it has not the country to back it up like Edmonton, with its three transcontinental railways and the Peace River district to the north."

Mr. H. P. Kennedy has just spent some time carefully going into western city real estate values. After looking over a number of the most progressive cities in the west, Mr. Kennedy was of the opinion that Edmonton had prospects which would give her a quicker and bigger future than any of the other cities he visited although they were all exceedingly prosperous and showed splendid prospects.

There must be in the neighbourhood of ten million dollars to be immediately spent in this city by the railways, and two immense pork packing establishments, and with the Peace River District back of the city, nothing can keep Edmonton from going ahead very fast.

In evidence of Mr. Kennedy's faith in Edmonton he purchased a large number of city lots in one block, situated most favourably, which have since his arrival home, brought offers which would entail him already substantial profits, but Mr. Kennedy has no intention of disposing of them in this manner, as yet.

The Packing Companies Form Five Million Merger

MONTREAL, OCT. 13.—It was today announced that three of the large Canadian packing houses had formed a merger, under the name of Matthews, Laing, Limited, with a capital of $5,000,000. The companies included in the merger are George Matthews, Limited, with plants at Hull, Peterborough and Brantford; the Laing Packin & Provision Co., Ltd., of Montreal, and the Park-Blackwell Company of Toronto.

Mr. W. E. Matthews will be President of the merger, while the Board of Directors will be chosen from the officers of the various companies, whose business will be carried on as before.

It is thought that the capital of the three compaules in the merger is about $2,000,000, and that after the consolidation is effected there will be a flotation of common and preferred stock, which will afford ample scope for improving their plants, it being stated that the intention of the new company is to extend its business in all lines, and to largely increase its plant and equipment to meet the growing trade of the country. Several strong companies remain outside the merger.

TERRIBLY BURNED

Mrs. Peter Gifford, 555 Albert St. Sustained Severe Burns While Lighting the Fire

RECOVERY DOUBTFUL

A terrible accident occurred this afternoon at 555 Albert street, as the result of an explosion of coal oil.

Mrs. Peter Gifford was pouring a little coal oil in her stove to augment the fire, which already existed in a limited degree, when the oil exploded.

The first notification of the accident occurred when some neighbours, hearing screams and groans, looked and saw Mrs. Gifford rushing into the street burning from head to foot. She fell and the neighbours gathered round her, extinguished the flames and rendered what assistance they could under the circumstances.

Meanwhile, the contents of the house were in danger of being consumed by fire. The fire brigade was summoned and soon appeared on the scene, extinguishing the flames, while the Dan Spence ambulance, which had also been telephoned for, arrived and took the injured lady to the Nicholls Hospital. The injuries received by the unfortunate lady presented a lamentable sight. Her arms and legs were badly scorched, while her face was burned almost beyond recognition. Prior to the arrival of the Dan Spence ambulance she repeatedly called for water.

As Mrs. Gifford lived alone, at the request of certain of the neighbours, Chief Howard, accompanied by Mrs. John Theobald, Mrs. Fred Shepherd and two firemen, went through the house and took possession of the valuables, in the form of a bank book, $2.95 in cash, a valuable chain and locket of old gold, three veteran medals and some letters.

"We did not find any deeds or fire insurances," said the Chief.

It was ascertained that the good lady had lived at 555 Albert street for a very long time. The cottage was a comfortable one and gave every indication that Mrs. Gifford was in fairly good circumstances.

In the sheds were found a milch cow, calf, a number of hens and chickens and a large quantity of eggs in the house.

Drs. Cameron and Young were in attendance.

Found Dead In Toronto

Examiner Special:

TORONTO, ONT., OCT. 14.—Lying outstretched as if in sleep the body of J. G. Galbraith, of Port Hope, was found lying beside a large heap of earth at the foot of John street, this morning. The man, from papers found in his pockets was evidently a traveller. The cause of his death is as yet unknown and an inquest will be opened.

6 BOXES CURED PSORIASIS

Mrs. Nettie Massey, Cameron, Ont., writes: "Three doctors described my trouble as psoriasis, and one said I could never be cured. The disease covered all over me, even on my face and head, and the itching and burning was hard to bear. I used eight boxes of Dr. Chase's Ointment, and am entirely cured—not a sore to be seen. I can hardly praise this Ointment enough."

MR. BORDEN'S TROUBLES.

No political leader ever gained power in this country with so absolute an independence of majority over all sorts of cliques than Mr. Borden. No premier ever had a freer hand than Hon. R. L. Borden. No premier ever wanted his opportunities for large action and got in more initial trouble by disregard of the powers he commanded than Hon. R. L. Borden. Elected largely by help of the "no surrender" elements, he has weakly surrendered to the elements in deadly contradiction to them. Elected largely by help of the outcry of national danger from the United States Trusts, Mr. Borden's Conservative supporters in Tory Toronto are accusing him of weakly encroaching to the Canadian trusts by taking a representative of the trusts into his cabinet, who adds insult to injury by being a Grit, instead of one of the patient and long-suffering faithful. If Mr. Borden had shown more courage he would have had less trouble, both present and prospective.

SATURDAY, OCT. 14, 1911

THINGS CHANGE.

When the Nationalist members return for re-election and are nominated as Conservative standard-bearers, the natural inquiry will be — which flag, the tri-colour or the Union Jack? The cries have changed with the conditions. The "Down with Laurier" cry has served its purpose, and "Down with the Navy" has taken its place. The former cry was common to both Quebec and Ontario. The latter was copy-righted by Quebec, but the copyright has been assigned to Mr. Borden by the Nationalist members of his cabinet.

A BUSINESS REASON.

The Toronto Star, counters cleverly on the World in respect of a Sam Hunter cartoon, representing Sir James Whitney as an insurance agent interviewing Mrs. Ontario for a renewal of the policy of assurance of good government. The Star repeats the cartoon, but aptly changes the reply of Mrs. Ontario—"You go right along with you; that last policy I paid for has another year to run, and I can show you the receipt now." There she had the Premier. The Ontario legislature has another year of life, and there is no legitimate reason for thrusting another election on the heels of another to the detriment of business and public convenience, wihtout serving any good purpose whatever. Sir James cannot justify his action, except by bluster and bull-dozing, in which gentle arts he is recognised as a past master.

A LITTE JUG-HANDLED.

The Whitney Government takes considerable credit to itself, for its Hydro-electric power policy, though perhaps the credit is more largely due to Hon. Adam Beck, who had to practically force his policy upon the acceptance of the Government. Without entering into the merits of the Government's power policy and its admitted benefits to some parts of the province, the very fact that it discriminates as to locality in its distribution of its benefits renders it unfair. While the whole credit of the Province is pledged, and the whole Province has to contribute to the working out of the scheme, the result is that, while the whole province pays, only one section gets the advantages. The direct tendency and effect of this is that the towns and cities, situated close to the centre of power supply, are in a position to monopolise the concentration of industrial establishments, and become competitors for the location of factories, against which the more distant parts of the Province are not in a position to fight on equal terms. Thus we see such places as Welland, St. Catharines, Hamilton and Toronto much more favourably situated in regard to ability to offer power at tempting prices than more distant places. This disparity of opportunity and attractions may in part, explain why Peterborough is not getting a share of new industries under a policy that gives favoured sections superior advantages of attraction as sites for the establishment of new industries. So far the power arrangement is very much jug-handled.

EASILY QUIETED CONSCIENCES.

How readily can men square their consciences with their interests, even in the high moral domain of politics. We had, during the last election, one class in Ontario fiercely fighting Laurier on racial and religious grounds and in deadly opposition to another set of men in another province, hostile to everything these Ontario patriots and defenders of the faith and all true Canadians hold dear. Yet the moment these two factions accomplish what they both sought, they bury the hatchet with the greatest alacrity and fall into each others arms. Mr. Borden takes these Nationalists into his cabinet, thus converting self-confessed doctrinaires of treason and disruption of the Empire and Confederation, into patriots of the first water. And the Nationalists return the compliment by recognising the high statesmanship of Mr. Borden and the virtues of his following, and establishing an affectionate entente cordiale between two recently hostile elements. There never was very grave danger from the Nationalist movement. Its triumph was doomed to be short; it was bound to be condemned and discredited, as it was in Quebec, where the success for the moment of the Nationalists in the Drummond-Arthabaska bye-election, was extinguished by the condemnation implied by the return of a Liberal candidate at the general elections. Nationalism, with all its sinister significance, would not have amounted to much ,except for its official recognition by Mr. Borden as a legitimate element of Canadian politics. It remained for the great Conservative party — the custodian of all possible loyalty and the bulwark of religious liberty, to give a new lease of life to a movement, that stands for the rupture of the unity of the Empire and of Confederation.

A GOOD RECORD.

Here is a record that is worth a little attention as showing in what periods and under what King, Canada made the greatest progress:

Canada's total trade with Great Britain rose from $73,113,879 in 1878 —the Conservative period—to $85,512,446 in 1896, to $234,879,372 in 1910—under Liberal administration. Canada's total trade with the United States rose from $70,134,217 in 1879 to $87,869,818 in 1896, to $321,708,080 in 1910. The assets of the chartered banks amounted to $175,450,274 in 1878; they amounted to 331 millions in 1896; they amounted to 1,211 millions in 1910. The bank discounts in 1878 were 126 millions; in 1896 they were 226 million; in 1910 they were 870 million. In 1878 there were 5378 post offices in Canada, and 44 million letters were mailed; in 1896 there were 9103 post offices and 116 million letters were mailed; in 1910 there were 12,887 post offices, and 456 million letters were mailed. In 1878 there were 6236 miles of steam railways in operation in Canada; in 1896 there were 16,270 miles; in 1910 there were 24,731 miles. The number of tons of freight carried by the railways was 7 millions, in 1878; it was 24 millions in 1896; and it was 74 millions in 1910.

In the above, we have the story shortly told of the progress made by Canada under Liberal administration compared with the progress made during the Conservative regime. The figures of this record are inspiring, and the Liberal record of phenomenal progress should be pasted on the walls of the council chamber so that the members of Mr. Borden's Cabinet should have them as a stimulus to endeavour to equal such a record.

WELCOME THE DUKE.

Canada has now a royal governor, a royal vice-regal representative. The enthusiastic reception tendered the Duke of Connaught, shows that the loyalty of Canada to the Crown is not diminishing. Old Quebec led the way in right, hearty welcome, of an earnestness that cannot be and will not be, exceeded in any part of the Dominion. This is all the more significant, in view of the movement inspired by certain disgruntled French Canadians to weaken the bonds between Canada and the Throne. And although the head of a Conservative government has placed a premium on disloyalty to Great Britain and the Empire, by official recognition of the disloyal element, the reception of the Duke shows that, as a people, the hearts of our French Canadian fellow subjects of the King are in the right place and beating soundly in tune. The sending of a Governor-General of the royal house of Great Britain to Canada may have been regarded as something of an experiment, but the indications are that in the beginning, the experiment is swallowed up in assured success. Before he reached our shores Connaught showed some of the qualities that will tend to make his vice-regal rule highly successful and acceptable. To royalty of position, he adds a simple royalty of nature, a royalty of common sense and democratic demeanor. His affability to his fellow passengers on the voyage over charmed them with the dignified simplicity and cordiality of his manners. His splendid reception at Quebec, where he encountered a striking spontaniety of loyal acclaim, constituted a popular demonstration, such as has never greeted an arriving governor at the gateway of the Dominion. The whole city was ablaze with colour, as all hearts were ablaze with welcome. We welcome the Duke of Connaught for his exalted position and also for the manly simplicity and promise of successful administration of his great trust.

LEST HE FORGET.

On October 14, 1910, just a year ago, Mr. Borden uttered these words at Halifax:

"One governing principle at least should control, namely that out of our material, by our own labour, and by the instructed skill of our own people, any necessary provision for our own naval defence should be made. In this connection may we not hope that there shall be given a stimulus and an encouragement to the shipbuilding industry of which Canada has been long lacking? To-day should be Nova Scotia's opportunity in this regard. Providence has endowed this province with the material, with the men, and with the maritime situation, which are essential for developing a scheme of naval defence and protection."

It will be well to remember these words when Mr. Borden comes to develop his stand in the naval matter; when he shall have had time to profit by the advice of his Nationalistalist, anti-naval and anti-British colleagues.

WILL ASSUME LAKEFIELD CHARGE

The citizens of Lakefield generally will be exceedingly sorry to learn that Rev. Father Phelan who has had charge of the parish of Lakefield and Young's Point for the past ten years, has decided with the permission of the Bishop, to resign his duties here and leave Lakefield, owing to ill-health. For the past year Father Phelan's health has been failing, and a short time ago he decided to give up his parish and take a trip to the southern States to see if his health would not be benefitted by the change. Next Sunday he will bid farewell to his congregation. Rev. Father John O'Brien of Peterborough has been appointed as his successor. —Lakefield News.

LIBERALS ARE ACTIVELY PREPARING FOR ELECTION; THE ONTARIO SITUATION

(Toronto Star)

The Liberals of the Province are busy drawing up their lines for the fight in the coming Provincial elections. They are not deceiving themselves with any dreams, but feel fairly confident that in spite of the handicaps under which they are working they will be able to strengthen their position in the Legislature.

Twenty-four candidates are already in the field. J. T. Anderson, of Lucknow, was nominated for South Bruce yesterday. Local organizations are being urged to proceed at once with the selection of candidates and there will probably only be a few ridings in which the election will go by acclamation. There will be some such because after the expenses of the recent Dominion campaign some local organizations do not feel in a position to put up a fight against what, in some cases, are hopeless odds. Candidates accepting nominations will have to depend almost altogether on their own resources, and must find their active workers among men willing to give their time and service quite voluntarily.

Will be Re-Nominated.

Of the seventeen Liberal members in the present Legislature five have already been renominated, and all probably will be with one exception of W. J. McCart, M.P.P., for Stormont. Mr. McCart is leaving Ontario for the North-West. One of the hardest fights in the campaign will be in North Grey, Hon. A. G. MacKay's seat. Here the Conservative forces are making a determined effort to unseat the leader of the Opposition.

One hopeful sign for the Liberal party since the Waterloo of September 21st, has been the formation of a number of Liberal clubs. At the Ontario Reform Association's office during the past week there have come no less than eleven applications for the necessary constitutions, etc.

The Reform Associations.

The annual meeting of the Ontario Reform Association which should have been held early in September, but was postponed on account of the election, has been called for October 31st. It is expected that it will be an unusually large meeting, and a real factor in pulling the party together for the coming campaign. The Association is made up of Liberal members of both Houses, candidates, and Senators, as well as the presidents and secretaries of associations in the various ridings. Other Liberals are admitted to its discussions, but may not vote. The total membership is about five hundred. It is not likely that at a meeting of this kind anything that might be called a new platform will be adopted, but it is likely that its resolutions will formulate what the party stands for, and put definitely before the public the issues in the campaign.

Date of Elections.

The great topic of discussion among political workers just now is the probable date of the elections. Some speak, as if with authority, of December 5th as the date. Others speak of December 11. The latter date is the most probable, although for the sakeof interfering as little as possible with the Christmas trade the Government will bring the election on at the earliest possible date. The difficulty in the way of an earlier date is the preparation of the voters' lists in the north. In those districts, where there are so municipal organizations to assist in the preparation of the lists, enumerators have to be appointed. These enumerators have to post notices at all polling places, at post-offices and all public buildings that they are to be present at that place to prepare the voters' lists. Thirty days must elapse between the notice and the closing up of the lists. Then fifteen days must be allowed for appeals to the district judge. Even allowing hardly any time for the actual work of posting the notices and of going around making the enumeration, the lists could not be completed until December. How speedily the actual enumeration can be done depends of course upon the number of enumerators, but unless an unusually large number is appointed it will take several days.

LAWYER PREVENTS SUICIDE OF DOCTOR

Despondent Travelling Physician Is Prevented From Taking His Life

CALGARY., OCT. 13.—Making desperate attempts to slit open the veins in his wrist, and loudly shouting his intentions of committing suicide because he "had made a mess of things," Dr. George, a travelling medical man, threw pedestrians on Ninth avenue into a furore of excitement shortly before two o'clock this afternoon.

George made his attempt to commit suicide in front of the Empire Hotel, and B. W. Collison, the well known criminal lawyer, who was passing, immediatley leaped upon him, and after a short struggle, took the knife from his hands.

The would-be suicide has been drinking heavily, and after the knife was taken from him pleaded vainly for its return in order that he might complete his task, but fearing that he would run amuck again, his friends took the knife and, after some time, succeeded in quieting him and getting him to leave the street. Although he only succeeded in scratching one wrist slightly, George was very serious in his intentions, and but for the prompt assistance of Mr. Collison would have committed suicide.

WHO HOLDS YOU DOWN?

By DR. ORISON SWEET MARDEN.

What object is more pitiable than that of a healthy, strong, well-educed young man whining about the hard times, or the lack of opportunity in this land, which is so packed with chances? In what other country, or at what other time in the history of the world, were the times better or the opportunities greater?

Tens of thousands of young people in this country try to excuse themselves for their failure to do something worth while by saying that it is the fault of society, that it is due to economic conditions, to the fact that a few good-for-nothing idlers get all the money and all the good things, while the many do all the work and bear all the burdens.

Many young men and women idle away their lives, waiting for somebody to turn up, for somebody to boost them: while other boys and girls, with half their chance, educate and lift themselves out of poverty. The veriest nonsense that ever entered a youth's head is that the good chances are in the past, that somebody must help him or he can never start.

The mainspring of your watch is not outside of its case. No power or influence outside of the watch can make it keep good time. Its mainspring is inside. The power which will carry you to your goal is not in somebody else. It is in yourself, or nowhere.

A middle-aged man was recently discharged by a large firm in New York because he asked for an increase in salary of two hundred dollars a year. He writes me that he had been with the firm for twenty-two years, had worked very hard and faithfully, and had tried in every way to advance the interests of the concern, and yet at the end of all these years he was getting only at the rate of one thousand dollars a year. This man complains that the firm had kept him down, and that he had been very unjustly treated. He is now working for the municipal government of New York at a salary of twelve dollars a week.

On the face of it, the action of the firm in discharging an employee after twenty-two years of faithful service seems harsh, even to cruelty. But the charge that he was "kept down," is a very different matter. In the first place it would be extremely foolish for the firm to part with him if he had made his services invaluable. They could not afford to lose him.

We find that during these twenty-two years scores and scores of employes were advanced all around him. While he was rising to a thousand dollars a year, others had risen to five thousand, ten thousand, or more; and some of those who began far below him had, in the meantime, become superintendents, managers, or partners.

Will any sane person say that these promotions were all due to favoritism, "pull," or "graft"? Do employers knowingly work against their own interests? Are they not usually very sharp to see where any advantage to themselves lies?

The chances are that this man was kept down by himself, that the cause of his failure to rise was to be found in himself, not in the firm. It may be soothing to his self-love to think that he was kept back while others were pushed on ahead of him, but that is not the truth.

A young drug clerk tells me that he is hopelessly tied down to a salary of ten dollars a week, with no prospect of advancement. Young married men say that they are not earning more than they did before marriage, and that their increased expenses make any considerable degree of success absolutely impossible. Others write of being tied down to uncongenial employment in small towns where there is no chance to rise where there are no great opportunities. They say that even by hard work they can not hope to earn more than just a fair living. Some have invalid relatives to support, and others have old debts to pay. They all seem to have some excuse for not rising in the world.

In some cases the writers can not define or specify what keeps them back; but they feel that here is something and they call it fate or bad luck Perhaps these are the most bitter complainers of all. Others tell what wonderful things they would do if they could only cut the cords which hold them back, and get free from the shackles which bind them to uncongenial work or compel them to support others, or which keep them on farms when they would go to the city, where the great chances are. They feel that if they could only get rid of their impediment, the thing that holds them down, they would soar into the ether of a larger opportunity and a completer life, as does the eagle when freed from a cage.

Do not hypnotize yourself with the idea that you are being kept down. Do not talk such nonsense. Nobody of any sense would believe it. People will only laugh at you. Only one thing is keeping you down, and that is yourself.

Progressive employers are always looking for the exceptional man or womna, the one who can step out from the crowd and do things in an original way, who can economize in processes, who can facilitate business. They are always looking for the earmarks leadership, or superior ability. They are looking for the progressive employee with new ideas who can help them to be more of a success. They know very well that they can get any number of automatons—multitudes who will do a thing just well enough to keep their places—but they are looking for originality, individualtiy, or up-to-date methods. They want employees who can put things through with vigour and determination, without lagging, whining, apologizing, or asking questions. Nothing can bar the advancement of employees of this kind. Nobody can keep them down.

If by chance some one above you is actually trying to prevent your promotion for selfish reasons, it ought to be very flattering to you to know that he is trying to keep you back, and should make you all the more determined to get ahead. It is a pretty good indication that there is some reason for his fear, and that you have material in you for a better place. This should encourage you to redouble your efforts to do your work so well, to stamp such superiority upon everything you toch, to acquit yourself so much better than the man who is trying to keep you down—to be so much pleasanter, so much more of a man, that it will only be a question of time when you will get the position for which you are striving, or perhaps a better one.

The quickest way to get away from the counter is to work hard, to be polite and obliging at the counter. The trouble with people who complain that they can not get above the positions they are in is that they can not see that the step to the thing above them is in the thing they are doing, in their manner of doing it, that the opportunity for advancement is in the promptness, the thoroughness, the efficiency they show in the positions they now occupy.

If you are made of the stuff that wins, nobody can keep you back, for if you do not find your chance where you are, you will find it somewhere else. But remember that your achievement can not rise higher than your resolution. So long as you think you are tied down so that you can not move you will never get up or get on. The man who acknowledges that he is a "perpetual clerk" will never become manager or proprietor of anything until he changes his conviction. His own lack of confidence and push, not circumstances, is the chain which binds him.

It is natural that we should obtain the thing we long for with all our hearts ,and persistently work to obtain, as that a stone should come to the earth when hurled into the air. The ambition, the desire, the longing the hunger, the struggle toward the aim, these are the forces of gravitation which bring us the desired result.

Do you realize, my complaining friend, what it means to achieve anything of note in this world, to pay the price of success? How hard have you tried to succeed? Have you ever set your face toward prosperity and success with clenched fist, set teeth, and a firm determination never to turn back, no matter what opposed you, not to be deflected to the right or left of your purpose? If not, you must not complain of your small measure of success.

You can never accomplish anything by taking hold of an opportunity with the tips of your fingers. You must take off your coat, roll up your sleeves, and fling your life power into your aim.

POST CARD COLUMN

AN APPEAL TO SCOTCHMEN.

Friends,—Although "only an Englishman" I have so many friends amongst you and have had for years, that anything and everything that looks good for you interests me very much. Now there's great doings in the air just now with you Scots, and I want you to rally round and do your share to help. There's to be a great gathering of the Clans to-night and a good supper and plenty of harmony at Coleman Bros. rooms on George street. A society will be formed to be run on something after the lines of the "Caledonian Society" and will probably be called the St. Andrew's Society. Briefly its aim will be ot help as much as possible all Scotch lassies and lads in the city to hold meetings for mutual benefit. Now, this really does deserve your help and sympathy. All to do with it are Scotch, and it is all for the Scotch. I have been wanting to see this for some time and now a start has been made I wish it every success. It rests with you, my friends. Will you all do your best to make it a grand success. I believe you will. To start at 8 to-night. All come and help. Wishing you good luck.

Yours sincerely.

PRICE OF MILK SOARS IN LINDSAY

(Lindsay Post.)

Last night the milk vendors doing business in Lindsay, met in the Butler House and decided to raise the price of milk to four cents a pint and seven cents a quart. The reason for the advance is due to the scarcity of feed. This has been a poor season. It is pointed out, for fodder, and the milk vendors have been forced to raise the price on account of the shortage. The increase will take effect on Nov. 1st.

A Style Study of Fashion's

FALL SUITS FOR WOMEN

The showing of Women's Suits for Fall at this store is replete with new and fascinating ideas. Dame Fashion never gave her sanction to styles more bewitchingly pretty, more interesting in every way to Fashion's devotees. Gathered here you will find the most charming garments made by Canada's leading tailors, after New York's styles.

We attribute our leadership in Women's wear to many things prominent among which is the fact that we devote a great deal of our time to the selection of our stocks.

Last year we had phenomenal success with our Suits for Women at $17.50 to $25. Our values for this season at these prices are greater than ever before, and women folk in search of a quality garment at modest price, cannot afford to miss this 1911 showing.

Come here now while the stocks are at their best. Study the fascinating styles for Fall. See our comprehensive and unequalled display, notice the high quality of the materials, the perfect workmanship, and the alluringly moderate prices.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

THE FAMILY HEARTH

THE FRIEND MOST VALUED.

In the past year, since my father's death," said a dear girl, "I have separated the sheep from the goats among my friends. Before that I had lived happily, and without care. The girls whom I knew at school and with whom I had grown up, were my friends by virtue of the same interests. We had everything in common, and we played together, and studied together, and when we were older went into society at the same time, to the same dances, the same dinners.

"Among my friends, however, there was one girl whom I called my chum. There were occasions when I felt a lack in her of some deeper sympathy, but I would not admit it. She was congenial, gay and fond of life. Now and then I would say to her, 'No matter what comes we will always be friends,' and she would laugh lightly and respond, 'Of course.' There was another girl, a shy little creature, upon whom I bestowed a condescending attention, but she did not interest me as the other girls did. Now and then, as we talked together, I was conscious of a broad vision and tender sympathy which made we want to know her better, but I always drifted away on the gay tide of frivolity and failed to grasp my opportunity.

"After my father's death I found that his finances were in a complicated condition, and the settling up of the estate showed that there would be only a small balance left for my mother and myself. Through the influence of a member of my family, a position was obtained for me in another city, so I left my friends and went away. The dear girl who had been my chum gave me a box of candy and wept bitterly as she kissed me good-bye. The shy little girl brought me a book and a bunch of violets. She did not cry and I thought her cold. I began my lonely life in a strange world, working hard all day and tired to death at night.

"My whole happiness was in my mail, the letters from my old home comforted and cheered me. A week after my arrival I received a letter from my chum, then for months there was silence, except that, now and then, a postcard came with a brief message. When I complained of this a scrawled line said, "You know how I hate to write letters. I have written more to you than to anyone else.' After that I made no complaint. I was too proud. The shy little girl, on the other hand, wrote to me three times a week. She gave me a bulletin of all the things my friends were doing. Her letters were full of chatty gossip and of things I craved to hear. She sent me dance programmes, church papers and all the news, which kept me in touch with old times. She was my friend in the truest sense; when I could do nothing for her she loved me enough to try to make me happy and to bring brightness into my life. The other girl, whom I had counted my best friend, failed me when I needed her most.'

It is sorrow which tests friendship. The friend who is willing to give time and thought to us when we have nothing of gayety or good times to bestow in return is the one whom we must love the most. Those who suffer together, who have had mutual sorrows ,who have known pain and misunderstanding, will find their friendship cemented by the strongest ties. Not until grief has tried us and trouble tested us shall we be able to say, to anyone, "I am your friend," nor to be sure of friendship in return.

THE GIRL WITH ONE IDEA.

Last summer Marcia went to Europe. Since then she has bored her friends to extinction. She talks of only one thing. No matter what subject is brought up she leads the conversation back to her trip abroad.

One of her girl friends expresses the situation frankly. "Marcia was a nice little thing," she said, "responsive and interesting until she traveled, but now she forces upon us her half-baked opinions and experiences, and we want to fly from her."

It is always a bad thing to be a girl with one idea; to over estimate the value of your day's work, your popularity, your political influence, your religious convictions, your social experiences, your studies, your accomplishments. It is not wise to dwell too much upon them. People tire easily of egotistical talk.

Marcia does not seem to realize that others have traveled, that in most instances they have seen more than her two months' vacation allowed her. In the eyes of these seasoned travelers her little airs and graces are funny. She shrugs her shoulders and says, "Mon Dieu" at every opportunity, and feels excessively Parisian when she is really ridiculous. Not until the effects of her trip have worn off will Marcia be worth anything to her friends.

Catherine is also a girl of one idea. She is studying music, and has a voice of some promise. Her teacher is a fadist, one of the men whose theories as to voice-placing and tone-production have not yet been fully demonstrated as successful, but Catherine will hear no word against him. All other singers, even the most famous of them, have faults, which, in her opinion, will eventually bring them to failure and to silence.

No matter how beautiful the opera, she prophesies darkly that the bird-like tones of the soprano will succumb to a wrong method of training, or that the contralto is "muscle bound." Always she talks of her singing, and her friends flee from her.

It is a good thing for a girl to observe people who have really achieved, As a rule they are modest. They talk little of themselves, and place their attainments somewhat in the background.

It was a funny thing the other day to hear Catherine say to a famous writer, "I was so embarrassed by the compliments which were showered upon me on shipboard when I sang. Don't you feel that way?"

"But I have so few compliments," was the quiet response, and everyone but Catherine smiled. Her egotism did not even take the rebuke.

It is not always young people, however, who err in this direction. We all know the housekeeper who can talk of nothing but servants, and the mother whose one subject is her children, while the next door neighbour may be willing to spend hours in discussion of the merits or demerits of housemaids. The average public will have none of it, unless now and then a humorous tale of a delinquent cook may give variety to other subjects.

There are men who can talk of nothing but their business. They give details which may be intensely interesting to themselves, but which bore other people to extinction. They dilate upon insurance, or real estate, or law, or medicine from the business and professional standpoint and, except in rare cases, what they say has no interest for outsiders.

Young people naturally sin in this direction more than the older ones, hence the warning. The girl who would be interesting must have more than one idea. She may devote herself, heart and soul to her work, she may travel and talk of her travels if she will, but she must not harp on one strain constantly. Wide reading, interest in others, a little reserve as to personal matters will fit her to be something more than a monologist who talks only of herself.

THE RIGHT WAY.

My uncle Tom says catching birds is easy when you know
The proper way to do it; an' I guess
it's so;;
He knows a splendid way, he says, 'at hardly ever fails,
Des creep up close an' drop a bit of salt upon their tails.

I tried it all the afternoon; I know des how to do,
You see a bird down on the ground—
but don't let it see you—
Nen creep up near wiv the salt, an'
be des awful still—
I didn't catch a bird to-day, but tomorrow p'r'aps I will.

—Frances Josephine Boyce in Woman's Home Companion.

WOMAN.

The Baby.

Where did you come from, beautiful
elf,
Cooing and gooing and kicking yourself?
How many miles from the mystic land,
Where wonderful gifts come in baby's hand?
How many miles by the Shadow
Train
Bringing you here to this sphere mundane?

The Girl.

Frolicsome, rollicsome little girl
With your twinkling eyes and your waving curl;
Hugging me tight and loving me
since
You think of me, dear, as a fairy
Prince!
I'll whisper you something that's sweet and true:
The best thing in Heaven is girls like you!

The Fiancee.

That marvelous ring on your finger,
What a wonderful thing it tells:
How your kisses greet it, and linger
As a dream in your young heart
swells;
And the whole world smiles to the smile of You,
Newborn in the thought of a love
that's true!

The Bride.

The Rose shall envy the blush
That colours your fair young cheeks;
Your song shall rival the thrush,
That joy from your full heart speaks!

The Mother.

No gilded throne, no tinsel crown,
No courtiers, no unrest—
But more than kingly ransoms, you
Shall nourish at your breast;
To all the world Man shall be brother,
Under the banner of "Our Mother!"

The Grandmother.

She wears upon her head a silv'ry crown
Wrought gently of the loving care of years;
Her patient smile shall greet our troubled tears
As sorrowing, we see her sun go down.
We pay her homage, in her rocking chair,
For lo! A Queen upon her Throne is there!

—Baltimore Sun.

THE HOME CIRCLE COLUMN

Hard hands, strong arms, and sunburned faces are honourable. Take "Excelsior" for your motto, and if you are patient, in a few years you can surely write under it that other good word, "Eureka."

• • •

Youth and old age have too little sympathy with each other. If the young would remember that they may be old, and the old remember that they have been young, the world would be happier.

Did you ever realize that nothing on earth can smile but a human being? Gems may flash reflected light but what is a diamond flash? A face that cannot smile is like a bud that cannot blossom, and dies upon the stalk.

How sad is he who can never go back to his childhood without a shudder. Who can never recall a period when his life was filled with sweet and simple satisfaction. When a kind and loving mother read aloud to the family the Home Circle Department from the columns of this paper.

How few, comparatively, of the young people of the present day, appreciate as they should the inestimable privileges they enjoy. Surrounded as are the young in all cities and most towns, with all the opportunities necessary for the cultivation of a literary taste, not one in a thousand appears to improve these golden chances. Occasionally, it is true, we meet with a young man or woman who firmly grasps the idea that 'knowledge is power," but these, unfortunately ,are the exceptions, not the rule.

We doubt if one instance in a thousand can be found of a young man's making shipwreck of hopes and character who was accustomed to spend his evenings at home reading good books, and we say to any parent that a well stocked library and an abundant supply of newspapers and magazines, with the habit of reading on the part of your boy, is worth more to keep him out of mischief, and to make a man of him, than any other single influence at your command.

Don't say the world owes you a living until you have earned one. Idleness in boys and girls is the blackest curse of any land. There is just as great a work and just as noble for the young woman as for the young man. When the girls, in earnestness, cast aside the loose cloak of vain fickleness, and, donning the beautiful garments of laboring purity, come forth from the sickly chamber of the "accomplished" asking "What shall we do?" and bearing the motto, "Woman's ability shall see light," then the boys will become more earnest, more temperate, more like men. Dear young people, be not afraid or ashamed of labour.

There are hundreds of young men in every great city, in the very lowest depths of degradation, whom the home influence, carefully and prayerfully extended through tender, affectionate, womanly letters, might have saved. There are hundreds of others, just taking their first lesson in vice, who may be brought back to purity by loving words from mothers, sisters or sweethearts. Until a man becomes thoroughly vicious, the thought of a pure woman's love will do much to restrain him from iniquity. If that love grows careless of him, he grows careless of himself. Think of this, you who have sons, brothers or lovers away among strangers. Remember that you owe them a sacred duty, and give them frequent missives from the home, freighted with love and accompanied by earnest prayer.

Teach your children to love the beautiful Give them a corner in the garden for flowers; encourage them to put it in the shape of hanging baskets; show them where they can best view the sunset; rouse them in the morning, not with the stern "time to go to work," but with the enthusiastic "see the beautiful sunrise." Buy for them pretty pictures and encourage them to decorate their rooms in his or her childish way. Give them an inch and they will go a mile. Allow them the privilege and they will make your home beautiful.

There is food for thought in the story that is told of a young lad, who for the first time accompanied his father to a public dinner. The waiter asked him, "What will you take to drink." Hesitating for a moment, he replied, "I'll take what father takes." The answer reached his father's ear, and instantly the full responsibility of his position flashed upon him. In a moment his decision was made; and in tones tremulous with emotion, and t othe astonishment of those who knew him he said: "Waiter, I will take water."

Place a young girl under the care of kind-hearted women, and she, unconsciously to herself, grows into a graceful lady. Place a boy in the establishment of a thorough-going and straight-forward business man, and the boy becomes a self-reliant, practical business man. Children are susceptible creatures, and circumstances and scenes and actions always impress.

Mothers sometimes forget that the active and receptive stage of child-life in the nursery is never surpassed at a later period. The little one is taking impressions every moment, acquiring gentle habits or the opposite, picking up words and sentences, surprising his elders by the facility with which he learns what they would rather he should not know. In the baby's home the foundation is laid for the good or bad manners of the mature man.

THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron

"HAVE you called on Mrs. R. yet?" inquired the lady-who-always-knows-somehow.

"I have n't," said Molly, the little stenographer.

The rest of us added our negative to hers.

"Why?" pursued the lady-who-always-knows-somehow.

"I hate formal first calls," said Molly. "I always put them off as long as I can."

"I've been so busy," I pleaded. "I'm really going soon."

"I guess I was just lazy," confessed the Butterfly.

"How long do you think it is since Mrs. R. moved here?" asked the lady-who-always-knows-somehow.

"Why, I suppose it must be five or six weeks," reckoned Molly.

"It's over three months," said the lady.

"It can't be," cried Molly.

"It is," said the lady. "and listen. Yesterday afternoon I was over there and what do you think that poor little woman did when I asked her if she liked the neighbourhood? She just broke down and cried. You know, she moved here from a long ways off and she hasn't a friend or relative within a thousand miles. She hasn't any children either. She lost her only little girl last year. Her husband is devoted to her, but he has to be away on business a good deal. And what do you think, she said that in all this neighbourhood only two other persons besides myself had called upon her."

"She asked me if I thought she had done anything to offend people, or if I had any idea what the trouble was. She said she was almost crazy with lonesomeness. Now don't you think we all ought to feel pretty much ashamed?"

Needless to say, we did think so, and incidentally registered our intention of calling the very next day, as early as the law would allow.

Perhaps you may be persuaded by this little tale that our neighbourhood is a peculiar one.

I don't believe it is.

I think it is typical, and that little tragedies like this one are going on every day in every community.

Laziness, forgetfulness, indifferences, procrastination, busyness—these are the feeble excuses that we offer for our cruelty.

And meanwhile the woman whom we have isolated on a desert island of loneliness by our selfishness or our carelessness, waits and wonders, and eats her heart out with lonesomeness and homesickness.

I do not doubt but there have been many cases of nervous prostration, perhaps even of suicide, caused by the people who didn't call.

Of course, few people enjoy formal first calls. But, since they are the inevitable first step toward neighbourliness, I think we surely ought to endure the evil for the sake of the good that follows.

And not only endure it, but endure it quickly.,

Don't you?

"WELL, I would like to know what became of that quarter I just gave away," 'I heard a man say the other day. "The poor devil I gave it to swore that he hadn't anything to eat for two days. Of course, he may have wanted it for a drink, or he may have more money that I have, but what can you do when a man says he is starving? I'd rather help ten men who didn't serve it, than refuse one who was really hungry."

I think the quandary in which this man found himself is a very common one. I don't believe there is anyone who goes about much, but has often been asked for money to buy food with, and has wondered, as he gave it, if it would really be used for that purpose.

Wherefore, I want to tell you of the man-who-thinks' solution of this quandary.

From the Salvation Army in the city in which he lives, he procured a number of tickets, some good for a meal and some for a night's lodging at the Army's headquarters. When anyone asks him for money for food or lodging, he gives him one of these tickets. If the suppliant is really hungry, he presents the ticket and receives the meal or the lodging. At the end of each month, the man-who-thinks settles with the Salvation Army for all the tickets marked with this special number which have been presented.

In this way, he is sure of never turning away anyone who really wants food, and at the same time, of not giving money to professional beggars.

Doesn't the man-who-thinks' way appeal to you as a rather clever solution of the difficulty?

"My Dear Miss Cameron:—

"Will you please, some time, write one of your little articles on the subject of a man taking a woman's arm when on the street coming home from the theatre and so on? When the lady is old or there is a crowd, or it is raining, or the couple are engaged, it may be all right (though even then it seems to me she should take his arm); but in pleasant weather, when the streets are not crowded, nothing arouses my resentment like having a man take hold of my arm and "walk me ahead" faster, perhaps, than I care to go. As a general thing, after a man has done it once, I refuse further invitations to go out with him, yet, I think it is done unconsciously, without meaning to give offense, and I know no way to stop it.

"Seems to me a woman ought, literally, to 'set the pace'— be free to step one way or the other, as she likes, and not be 'poked.'

"Please, in your own inimitable way, write it up some time, and very much oblige

"One Who Usually Agrees With Miss Cameron"

If "my own inimitable way" were half so inimitable as my correspondent's, I should have gladly complied with her request.

As it is, I feel quite justified in merely passing along the hint with the endorsement—"Them's my sentiments, too."

By the way, I wonder that she omitted to mention a similar masculine trick — that of "shoving" one up the curbstone by the elbow.

When one is quite able-bodied it is certainly infuriating to be thus "hoisted" up a perfectly ordinary step.

As my correspondent says, I believe that this is done "unconsciously and without meaning to give offense," but, I trust that every man who reads this will stop, look and reflect, and if he is an offender in this respect, offend no more.

SKIN TROUBLES GROW WORSE

Eczema, Psoriasis, and other skin troubles are caused by myriads of germs at work in the skin. Unless these germs are promptly destroyed they rapidly multiply, gnawing their way deep into the sensitive tissue. This is what causes that awful itch, and what seemed a mere rash may grow worse and develop into a loathsome and torturing skin disease, with its years and years of misery.

Don't take any chances! Destroy the germs at the beginning of the trouble with that soothing and cleansing wash, the D.D.D. Prescription for Eczema.

We have had experience with many remedies for skin trouble but have never—never seen such remarkable cures as those from D.D.D. Prescription. Instant relief from the very first application.

If you have skin trouble of any kind, we certainly advise you to drop in and investigate the merits of D.D.D. or why not drop a line to the D. D. D.—Laboratories, Dept. P. E., 49 Colborne street, Toronto.

We know that D. B. D. will help you.—McDermid and Jury, and E. L. Payne, druggist.

THE RETURN OF THE SHEFFIELD CHOIR AND INCIDENTS OF THE TOUR

An English journal gives the following interesting reference to the return of the Sheffield Choir.

A tour unprecedented in British history came to a close in the early hours of yesterday morning, when the Sheffield Choir landed in London after a journey of about 25,000 miles, during which they gave 157 concerts in Canada, the United States, South Africa, Australia, New Zealand, and the Fiji Islands.

The choir of 200 gave their services and a £60,000 bill was paid by Dr. Charles Harriss, of Montreal, who is believed to have lost money on the tour.

"My idea is the British Empire all the time," Dr. Harriss told an "Express" representative yesterday. "The Colonies spent thousands on immigration, but I got the idea of taking two hundred English folk all round the Empire, letting them see what the Empire really meant, and then bringing them back here and turning them loose to act as Empire agents.

"They are full of it," he added, with a chuckle. "They have taken 10,000 photographs and some of them are going round lecturing on what they have seen. They have a cinematograph film of the trip through South Africa, and they have vivid memories of rousing Anglo-Saxon reunions in a hundred towns all round the world.

Musical Revival.

"It took me years to plan this tour. I went all round the Empire a couple of years ago and fixed it, but nobody seemed to believe I could induce 200 people to give their services for months just to sing to folks at the other end of the earth. But that was my idea—to have a kind of musical imperial revival all round the Empire, to make folks realize the unity of the race through the stirring agency of music.

"Well, we went all round, with the United States thrown in, and governors and governments and mayors and everybody else received us with open arms. In one State in America the House of Representatives vacated their seats for us. At Sydney the acting Prime Minister and members of the Government came out on a steamer to meet us, and ten thousand people stood on the quays. At Capetown the Archbishop conducted an open-air service in the square a couple of hours before we started away, and we sang the "Messiah" to 20,000 people.

"It was the same all round the world. Nobody could do enough for us. In the Fiji Islands, where we called to give them a song, a native prince came to the concert in a dress coat and white front. His hair was a foot high, his legs (apart from short silk trunks) were bare, and he twiddled his toes under his chair, while we sang.

"We tok three nurses from St. Thomas' Hospital to look after possible invalids. One of them was married in South Africa to a man she had nursed during the war. She was the only member of the party we lost.

Dramatic Reunion.

"At one of our concerts in Australia I heard a man suddenly shout, "Minnie, Minnie!" I took no notice but a moment later he yelled 'Alice, Alice!" and then I saw one of the women in the choir sink down fainting.

"She was carried from the platform and the man came round. He was her husband. Several years ago they quarrelled and he disappeared. When the Sheffield Choir arrived in Australia he could not resist going to hear singers from his native place, and in the midst of the concert he lost all control of himself when he saw his sister and his wife before his eyes. That man has come back home, and they are all happy.

"Everywhere we went our singers were received in the best of homes, and many friendships were made and I am sure some of them will go out to the Colonies to live, and the accounts they give at home here will send others.

"And that is what I live and work for," said Dr. Harries with a burst of enthusiasm only to be expected from one who has lived in one of the Colonies. "It's England all the time," he exclaimed with a rousing thump on the table.

Dr. Harriss, although generally regarded as a Canadian, was born in London in the 'sixties, and went to Canada in 1886. He declared that the Sheffield Choir tour was only an incident in his imperial music campaign. The rest is to come.

FISHING CLUB HAVING ENJOYABLE TIME AT LAKES

The following members of the Ketcheeum Lake fishing club are spending some holidays near Westlake's Landing: Ald. Bradburn, Messrs. A. H. Stratton, John Belcher, Henderson Nesbitt, A. E. Peck, T. H. Hooper, Robert Gibbs, Vincent Eastwood, Jack McCarthy, Herb. Stinson, Wm. Boyd of Bobcaygeon, Edwards, of Lindsay; Robert Munro, Robert Stuart, Mr. Dobbie of the C. G. E., B. Denne and H. C. Winch.

The fishing is reported not to be the best, but all the members of the clubs are enjoying a good time. Mr. Eastwood has the distinction of landing the biggest fish, while Mr. Stratton and Ald. Bradburn come next. Mr. McCarthy, however, is considered the best fisherman of the club, as he can land more minnows in five minutes than all the rest put together. The club's regular canoe races are a feature that tends to make the camp famous, not to speak of the numerous swimming races for shore, and the many heroic rescues. Every man is a hero, and if he isn't he is considered an outside member. In short, the Club is having one of the most enjoyable times it has had for many a long season, and the men regret that the time is getting near, when they must vacate their fishing quarters. Mr. Roland Denne, who has been spending the last week with the Club, has returned home, after enjoying a week of continuous pleasure.

OBITUARY

GERTRUDE M. PUFFER.

The death of Gertrude Madeline, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Puffer, a bright little child of six months and ten days, occurred at their home in this city on Friday, Oct. 6th, 1911, after a three days' illness of bronchial pneumonia.

The sad news was sent by wire to friends in Minden, the former home of the bereft parents, where Mr Puffer's father and mother still reside and arrangements were made for the funeral to take place from the residence of Mr. and Mrs. L. Pringle, Lochlin, on Sunday morning.

The funeral service was in charge of the Captain of the Salvation Army, assisted by Mr. Geo. Puffer, grandfather of the child, after which interment took place at Ingoldsby cemetery.

The bereft father and mother accompanied by two children, made a brief call on friends at Lochlin and Minden, returning to Peterborough on Wednesday morning.

The following lines were dedicated by a friend, to the departed:

When we see a precious blossom,
That we've tended with such care
Rudely taken from our bosom,
How our aching hearts despair.

Round its little grave we linger,
Till the setting sun is low,
Feeling all our hopes have perished,
In the flower we cherished so.

WHOOPING COUGH

Mrs. Charles Lovell, Agassiz, B.C. writes: "Seven of our nine children had whooping cough the same winter and we attribute their cure to Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine. We always have it in the house, and recommend it as the king of all medicines. I was for merly completely cured of protruding piles by using Dr. Chase's Ointment."

POTATOES TAKE A DROP OF 40c

There was a splendid market this morning. Chickens and ducks were in abundance, and there was also a bountiful supply of geese, but the turkeys were missing. There was only one load of hay on the market and it sold for $15.00. The grape season is practically over. There were very few baskets on the market this morning, and the fruit growers state that the grapes are all on the ground now. Potatoes took a drop of about 40 cts per bag to-day. They sold at $1.25 per bag, and the outlook is that they will still come down, although the supply this morning was limited.

The following are the prices:

Carrots—70c per bag and 15c per peck.
Beets—15c peck.

READY FOR SEASON

St. Peter's Ladies' Literary Society Prepare for the Winter Meetings.

St. Peter's Ladies' Literary Society held a meeting in St. Alphonsus' Lyceum last evening, to prepare for the season's work. There was a good representative attendance. Nominations were made for the various officers. Miss L. Hurley was re-eleteed president and Mrs. Alfred Lehane vice-president, by acclamation. The election of the other officers will be held Monday evening, when the various committees will also be appointed. Everything points to a very prosperous winter's work.

AN EXCITING RUNAWAY

A disastrous runaway was narrowly averted by the prompt action of George Donaldson, a south end resident, when a pair of spirited horses, driven by a Smith farmer, were coming down Water street to-day at noon, and a bridle on one of the animals dropped off, causing them to bolt. A couple of pedestrians barely sidestepped in time to avoid the oncoming rush of the maddened brutes, but their flight was short lived. At the corner of Water and King streets they were checked by George Donaldson, who at considerable risk, grabbed the bit of the nearest horse, and with the assistance of the driver, who had retained his position on the rig, succeeded in bringing the horses to a standstill. No damage was done to the outfit.

MISSION BAND RE-ORGANIZED

An interesting event took place in the George street Methodist Sunday school room last evening when the Mission Band was re-organised and new officers elected. After wards the members of the Mission Band and of the Mission Circle were entertained at tea by the Women's Missionary Society. A pleasant social hour was spent. The prospects before the Mission Band are very bright. The Band has chosen capable officers, in Miss Lillian Hill, Miss Aggie Davis, Miss Gertrude Allison and Miss Payne.

Manuel and Miguel Will Compete for the Throne of Portugal

CHANCES VERY SLIM

Lisbon, (via frontier) Oct. 14.—It is reported here that a part of the Royalist command left Serra da Corda and retreated across the border into Spain, where they were reinforced and again re-entered Portugal. The reinforced column aggregates about 2,500 men. A newspaper here says the Royalists are armed with Kropatschek, Mauser and Remington rifles, and that there are about 4,000 of them along the Spanish-Portuguese frontier. The newspaper says, however, that they seem greatly disheartened.

It is rumored that a fight took place Thursday night in which the Royalists sustained heavy losses and were forced to retreat. Details of this engagement are not yet obtainable here.

The Republicans have four batteries of heavy artillery at Serra da Pilar, and much surprise has been caused by their never being brought into action against the Monarchists. The newspaper Novivades says a document has been discovered which shows that the Monarchists distributed $80,000 among the artillerymen with the proviso that they should not be fired upon. This statement has caused a commotion here and the Government has started an enquiry.

It has been ascertained that Captain Couciere, the leader of the Royalists, has made another appeal to the Brazilian Monarchists for $2,500,000 which he says is necessary for the purchase of additional arms, ammunition and provisions.

It is now known that a secret arrangement exists between ex-King Manuel and the pretender of the throne, Dom Miguel of Braganza, whereby, if the Monarchists are victorious, general elections shall be held throughout Portugal to decide whether Manuel or Dom Miguel shall be king. In case Manuel is chosen, the decree banishing Dom Miguel's family will be revoked and his entire family will return to Portugal as royal princes and receive an aggregate of $100,000 annually.

Moreover, in case of the death of Manuel, it has been agreed that his uncle, the Duke of Oporto, being childless, the eldest son of Dom Miguel, Prince Miguel of Braganza, who married Anita Stewart of New York, shall succeed to the throne. A further provision of the agreement is that if Dom Miguel is elected king, a heavy indemnity shall be paid to Manuel.

According to the latest advices, however, neither party to the agreement apparently has much chance of success, as the Republican form of government seems firmly implanted in Portugal.

Nothing In It.

Montreal, Oct. 14.—The report cabled from London that the Canadian Pacific Railway will operate a steamship service between Rotterdam and Boston was absolutely denied yesterday by Mr. Bosworth, fourth vice-president of the C.P.R. Mr. Bosworth said: "I have no knowledge whatsoever of any such service." He was asked: "Has this any bearing on an Antwerp-Boston line?" He said: "I say officially I have never heard of it."

Side of Island Blown Off.

Seward, Alaska, Oct. 14.—There have been three different eruptions of Bogoslof, the celebrated Aleutian volcano, this season. Deputy U. S. Marshal Hastings of Unalaska, who arrived here yesterday, passed Bogoslof on Sept. 10. Bogoslof is noticed to have completely changed its physical appearance. There was no longer a boiling lake in the centre. Its place was a bay of cold water, the side of the island having been blown off.

CHINA IS ALARMED

Government Sending Out Troops Against the Revolutionists

CRISIS IS AT HAND

Pekin, Oct. 14.—China to-day faces an unprecedented crisis. With the spread of revolutionary activity the opinion is gaining ground that the fate of the ruling dynasty hangs in the balance. The revolution is no longer confined to the central provinces, a thousand miles away from the capital. Pekin itself is threatened. Members of the Cabinet admitted yesterday that the garrison here are known to be honeycombed with the revolutionary sentiment. The same condition exists in the two great military posts which guard the capital, Pao Ting Fu and Tien Tsin.

Yesterday's news included reports that Chung King was in danger, that I-Chang had been taken, that Yo-Chow had fallen, and that communication between Hankow and Chang-Sha, the capital of Hunan province, was interrupted.

The revolutionary army is strongly entrenched in Wu Chang and Han Yang with guns mounted in commanding positions.

Eight train loads of troops yesterday started from Pao-Ting-Fu, Province of Chi-Li, for the affected district.

The revolutionists have informed the mission schools at Hankow that they will respect all treaties and loans and indemnities contracted by the Chinese Government.

All the available railway cars are carrying to the south troops who will be used first to guard the line and thereafter in an attempt to recapture the towns taken by the revolutionists.

It is reported that the rebels yesterday allowed the weekly express to leave Hankow crowded with refugees. It is believed the rebels found over a million dollars of Mexican money when they raided the treasury at Hankow, and also obtained half a million dollars in the same coin from the Hankow merchants.

A well-informed revolutionary sympathizer told the Associated Press last night that the rebels probably would leave the capture of Pekin and Shanghai to the last, because of the danger of foreign complications. He said the utmost confidence seems to prevail among the rebels. It is stated that they have been two years in perfecting their negotiations and now have members in all the Government offices.

The National Assembly showed revolutionary tendencies last winter, and the reassembling of that body in a fortnight is regarded with anxiety. The provincial assemblies, almost without exception are anti-government.

Rebels Unable to Keep Order.

Hankow, Oct. 14.—The rebels have been unable to maintain order, and business has been completely suspended here and at Hank-Yang and Wu Chang. The working classes are without employment and are attempting to plunder. Fully a half-million persons have fled to the countryside.

It is reliably reported that rebels are proceeding northward to meet the imperial troops and that a thousand troops in the Province of Honan, adjoining the disaffected Province of Hu-Peh, on the north, also are prepared to resist the imperials.

Thrown From Wagon.

Hamilton, Oct. 14.—Instant death from a broken neck was the fate which befell Edward Cooper when the team which he was driving ran away and threw him from his wagon at the corner of Burlington street and Ferguson avenue, about five o'clock yesterday afternoon. Cooper was driving along Ferguson avenue when his horses became frightened, and in their mad flight caused the empty wagon to collide with the fountain at the corner of Burlington street. The unfortunate man was hurled violently to the ground, and was dead when picked up.

Spanish Losses in Morocco.

Madrid, Oct. 14.—The Moors in the Riff country are attacking the Spaniards at every opportunity, usually sustaining losses greatly in excess of those inflicted. The Moors assaulted the camps at Imarufen, and Izhafen on the night of Oct. 10. They left 30 dead on the field. Two of the Spanish soldiers were wounded.

El Correo, however, publishes a letter from its correspondent at Melilla, Morocco, in which the losses to the Spaniards in the fight of Oct. 7, are estimated at 400 dead and wounded.

Not Dead Yet.

Chicago, Oct. 14.—While being carried into an undertaking establishment on the west side, David Easley, 35 years of age, of La Grange, Ill., who was thought to be dead, suddenly regained consciousness and shouted, "Take me out of here, I'm not going to die yet." He was taken to a hospital for treatment and may recover from injuries received when he was struck on the head with a rifle while quarreling with Roscoe Holtz over a woman, to whom both men had been showing attention.

Major MacLaren Killed.

Barrie, Oct. 14.—Dr. W. D. MacLaren, major of "A" Squadron of the Mississauga Light Horse, was thrown from his horse on his way in from attending a gathering at Major Sneath's in Vespra, about 1.30 Thursday night. A small bruise on the head produced concussion of the brain, which ended fatally at 7.30 yesterday morning.

Guelph, Oct. 14.—Conductor William Herbett of Guelph, who runs on the G. T. R. between Guelph and Hamburg, received a telegram yesterday stating that his brother, E. E. Herbert, had been killed at North Battleford, Sask., on Thursday.

Canada Made an Offer.

Manchester, Oct. 14.—Prof. Hewins, an ardent tariff reformer, says that the opponents of tariff reform have constantly said that the colonies made no offer. Well, now, there was an offer, in the voice of the Canadian people, and the present Government had no authority to reject reciprocal preference because the subject was not before the electors of Britain at the last election.

The Guardian, anent this declaration, asks Hewins, when and where did the victorious Canadians make the offer and asks what Hewins thinks of the inclusion in the Canadian Government of a statesman opposed to Borden's Imperial policy, and also of Laurier's modified policy?

Banquet to Hon. Mr. King.

Berlin, Ont., Oct. 14.—The Liberals of North Waterloo will tender Hon. Mackenzie King, ex-Minister of Labor, a complimentary banquet in the Masonic Hall here next Thursday evening, Oct. 19. Addresses will be delivered by Hon. Mr. King, Rev. B. H. Stauffer, Toronto, and others.

No Jurors Selected Yet.

Los Angeles, Oct. 14.—After two days of court session in the trial of James B. McNamara for the murder of Charles J. Haggerty, a victim of The Los Angeles Times explosion and fire on Oct. 1, 1910, no juror had been selected even tentatively last night and no decision had been reached as to the eligibility of the first talesman examined. Although court proceedings moved forward without interruption, the magnitude of issues involved in the examination of Z. T. Nelson, the first talesman, made proceedings deliberate.

At sunset, when court adjourned, arguments on Mr. Nelson's status remained unfinished.

A provision of the constitution of the state, differing somewhat from the constitution of the United States, sections of the penal code regarding the qualifications of jurors, and a contest over the meaning of the record of Nelson's examination, combined to furnish points of conflict which affect not alone the talesman under examination but every prospective juror, and for this reason were stubbornly contested.

New Brunswick's Lieutenant-Governor

Ottawa, Oct. 14.—The office of Lieutenant-Governor of New Brunswick becomes vacant on March 1 next, and it is now certain that the appointment will go either to Dr. Daniel or Senator Wood.

Dr. Daniel steps aside to provide Hon. J. D. Hazen a seat in St. John, and in the event of Senator Wood accepting the position, he will go to the Red Chamber. There is also some talk of appointing Mr. C. A. Magrath Lieutenant-Governor of Alberta when the present occupant, Hon. Mr. Bulyea, steps out. Mr. Magrath was defeated in the constituency of Medicine Hat at the recent elections, and would undoubtedly have found a seat in the Cabinet had he been successful.

There may be a meeting of the Cabinet after the ceremonies to-day in connection with the arrival of the Duke of Connaught, but it is likely to go over until Monday. The Treasury Board is to meet on Monday, and one of the matters to be dealt with is the issue of the certificate giving running rights to the Banque Internationale du Canada.

DUKE TAKES THE OATH

Is Sworn Into Office at the Quebec Parliament Buildings

A CORDIAL WELCOME

Quebec, Oct. 14.—Amid the cheering of the hospitably minded citizens of the ancient capital, Canada's royal Governor-General, the Duke of Connaught, accompanied by the duchess, landed yesterday at the King's Wharf, and, preceded by a mounted guard, passed through bunting bedecked streets to the Parliament buildings, where the ceremony of administering the oath of office to His Royal Highness was held.

The scene was an impressive one.

Seated round the table in the Legislative Council Chamber were Hon. R. L. Borden and the members of the Dominion Cabinet. On the right of the dias was seated the Lieutenant-Governor of Quebec, and on the other side were the judges of the Supreme Court in their robes of office.

On the entry of Their Royal Highnesses, Mrs. Borden advanced and presented the duchess with a magnificent bouquet.

The commission of appointment was read by Lieut.-Col. Lowther.

At the completion of the installation, the guns of the citadel thundered out a royal salute, and the band played the National Anthem.

Addresses of welcome were read by the Lieutenant-Governor, and the mayor of Quebec, the duke replying briefly.

The duke's message to the people was brief. He said:

"For myself personally I have only one wish, and that is to serve Canada, to make myself at home in this country, and to do all I can to promote its best interests, and also to promote that connection to the Empire which I think of such importance to Canada."

An unfortunate accident occurred as Their Royal Highnesses were driving from the Parliament Buildings to the Citadel after the installation. Turning the corner just through the St. Louis gate, the horse of Trooper George Snape of the Royal Canadian Dragoons, who formed the escort, slipped on the inclined pavement and fell, throwing Snape to the ground. The horse next him also fell. Snape was picked up and carried into the Garrison Club. These were the horses immediately in front of the carriage bearing the duke and duchess. The quick action of Captain Douglas Young, who commanded the escort, and who rode up and helped to get them out of the way prevented Their Royal Highnesses' carriage being delayed.

Then the royal party passed to the Chateau Frontenac, where they were entertained at luncheon by the Dominion Government.

In the evening a dinner at Government House was followed by a reception at the Parliament Buildings, after which, preceded by a mounted escort, the duke and duchess left for the C.P.R. station, where they boarded the special train that is to bear them to the capital of the Dominion.

As Their Royal Highnesses passed down the street to the station, there were displays of fireworks and crowds of people assembled all along the route to give the vice-regal party a greeting.

North Bay, Oct. 14.—Gerald G. Thompson, a prominent young merchant of North Bay, died suddenly from peritonitis, while hunting at the west arm of Lake Nipissing yesterday. WOMEN IN CHURCHES.

Their Work Is Discussed By the Ecumenical Conference.

Toronto, Oct. 14.—Yesterday afternoon was indeed women's day with the Methodist Ecumenical Conference, and the able manner in which Mrs. W. T. Haven of the Methodist Episcopal Church presided, indicated the power which is possible in women of Methodism when put to the test. The firmness with which Mrs. Haven rapped the delegates down when out of order and the tact she used in recognising those entitled to speak on the topic of the afternoon, "Woman's Claims and Responsibilities," won admiration.

In speaking on "Methodism and the Woman's Movement," Mrs. J. Johnson of London, England, maintained that men and women were still in the process of making, and they were far from perfect. She said the talk of women not occupying important places in the world's affairs was nonsense.

"Men cannot advance without women," she said, "neither can women advance without men."

She said there was a wind coming up in the west, whistling woman's suffrage, and it would eventually sweep everything before it. The speaker said women were superior to men in detecting emotion and character in church work, which was invaluable in saving souls.

Mrs. T. J. Copeland, speaking on behalf of Miss Belle Bennett, on "Woman and Missions," said: "We women of the Methodist Episcopal Church are looking towards the rising sun. It is in the eastern uncivilized countries, where women are showing their worth in church work as missionaries."

On the subject of "Deaconesses and Sisterhoods, Mrs. Lucy Rider Meyer of the Methodist Episcopal Church, told of the great work of the deaconesses nurses. Last year, according to Mrs. Meyer, 16,461 sick and maimed persons unable to help themselves were taken care of by the nurses."

Shock of Earthquake Slight.

Toronto, Oct. 14.—The earthquake which occurred last night in the Gulf of Mexico began at 10.03 o'clock, according to the local observatory record, and gave only a slight shock at this distance. The disturbance took place underneath the water of the Gulf and caused a tidal wave which rolled up 20 feet high and destroyed the towns of San Jose, Guaymas, Eycalama and Irsths. Seventeen ships in Guaymas were also destroyed with nearly all the inhabitants.

ALL CUT AND DRIED

Manuel and Miguel Will Compete for the Throne of Portugal

CHANCES VERY SLIM

Lisbon, (via frontier) Oct. 14.—It is reported here that a part of the Royalist command left Serra da Cordo and retreated across the border into Spain, where they were reinforced and again re-entered Portugal. The reinforced column aggregates about 2,500 men. A newspaper here says the Royalists are armed with Kropatschek, Mauser and Remington rifles, and that there are about 4,000 of them along the Spanish-Portuguese frontier. The newspaper says, however, that they seem greatly disheartened.

It is rumored that a fight took place Thursday night in which the Royalists sustained heavy losses and were forced to retreat. Details of this engagement are not yet obtainable here.

The Republicans have four batteries of heavy artillery at Serra da Pilar, and much surprise has been caused by their never being brought into action against the Monarchists. The newspaper Novivades says a document has been discovered which shows that the Monarchists distributed $80,000 among the artillerymen with the proviso that they should not be fired upon. This statement has caused a sensation here and the Government has started an enquiry.

It has been ascertained that Captain Couciera, the leader of the Royalists, has made another appeal to the Brazilian Monarchists for $2,500,000 which he says is necessary for the purchase of additional arms, ammunition and provisions.

It is now known that a secret arrangement exists between ex-King Manuel and the pretender of the throne, Dom Miguel of Braganza, whereby, if the Monarchists are victorious, general elections shall be held throughout Portugal to decide whether Manuel or Dom Miguel shall be king. In case Manuel is chosen, the decree banishing Dom Miguel's family will be revoked and his entire family will return to Portugal as royal princes and receive an aggregate of $100,000 annually.

Moreover, in case of the death of Manuel, it has been agreed that his uncle, the Duke of Oporto, being childless, the eldest son of Dom Miguel, Prince Miguel of Braganza, who married Anita Stewart of New York, shall succeed to the throne. A further provision of the agreement is that if Dom Miguel is elected king, a heavy indemnity shall be paid to Manuel.

According to the latest advices, however, neither party to the agreement apparently has much chance of success, as the Republican form of government seems firmly implanted in Portugal.

Nothing In It.

Montreal, Oct. 14.—The report cabled from London that the Canadian Pacific Railway will operate a steamship service between Rotterdam and Boston was absolutely denied yesterday by Mr. Bosworth, fourth vice-president of the C.P.R. Mr. Bosworth said: "I have no knowledge whatsoever of any such service." He was asked: "Has this any bearing on an Antwerp-Boston line?" He said: "I say officially I have never heard of it."

Side of Island Blows Off.

Seward, Alaska, Oct. 14.—There have been three different eruptions of Bogoslof, the celebrated Aleutian volcano, this season. Deputy U. S. Marshal Hastings of Unalaska, who arrived here yesterday, passed Bogoslof on Sept 10. Bogoslof is noticed to have completely changed its physical appearance. There was no longer a boiling lake in the centre. Its place was a bay of cold water, the side of the island having been blown off.

CHINA IS ALARMED

Government Sending Out Troops Against the Revolutionists

CRISIS IS AT HAND

Pekin, Oct. 14.—China to-day faces an unprecedented crisis. With the spread of revolutionary activity the opinion is gaining ground that the fate of the ruling dynasty hangs in the balance. The revolution is no longer confined to the central provinces, a thousand miles away from the capital. Pekin itself is threatened. Members of the Cabinet admitted yesterday that the garrison here are known to be honeycombed with the revolutionary sentiment. The same condition exists in the two great military posts which guard the capital, Pao Ting Fu and Tien Tsin.

Yesterday's news included reports that Chung King was in danger, that I-Chang had been taken, that Yo-Chow had fallen, and that communication between Hankow and Chang-Sha, the capital of Hunan Province, was interrupted.

The revolutionary army is strongly entrenched in Wu Chang and Han Yang with guns mounted in commanding positions.

Right train loads of troops yesterday started from Pao-Ting-Fu, Province of Chi-Li, for the affected district.

The revolutionists have informed the mission schools at Hankow that they will respect all treaties and loans and indemnities contracted by the Chinese Government.

All the available railway cars are carrying to the south troops who will be used first to guard the line and thereafter in an attempt to recapture the towns taken by the revolutionists.

It is reported that the rebels yesterday allowed the weekly express to leave Hankow crowded with refugees. It is believed the rebels found over a million dollars of Mexican money when they raided the treasury at Hankow, and also obtained half a million dollars in the same coin from the Hankow merchants.

A well-informed revolutionary sympathizer told the Associated Press last night that the rebels probably would leave the capture of Pekin and Shanghai to the last, because of the danger of foreign complications. He said the utmost confidence seems to prevail among the rebels. It is stated that they have been two years in perfecting their negotiations and now have members in all the Government offices.

The National Assembly showed revolutionary tendencies last winter, and the reassembling of that body in a fortnight is regarded with anxiety. The provincial assemblies almost without exception are anti-government.

Rebels Unable to Keep Order.

Hankow, Oct. 14.—The rebels have been unable to maintain order, and business has been completely suspended here and at Hank-Yang and Wu Chang. The working classes are without employment and are attempting to plunder. Fully a half-million persons have fled to the countryside.

It is reliably reported that rebels are proceeding northward to meet the imperial troops and that a thousand troops in the Province of Honan, adjoining the disaffected Province of Hu-Peh, on the north, also are prepared to resist the imperials.

Thrown From Wagon.

Hamilton, Oct. 14.—Instant death from a broken neck was the fate which befell Edward Cooper when the team which he was driving ran away and threw him from his wagon at the corner of Burlington street and Ferguson avenue, about five o'clock yesterday afternoon. Cooper was driving along Ferguson avenue when his horses became frightened, and in their mad flight caused the empty wagon to collide with the fountain at the corner of Burlington street. The unfortunate man was hurled violently to the ground, and was dead when picked up.

She said there was a wind coming up in the west, whistling woman's suffrage, and it would eventually sweep everything before it. The speaker said women were superior to men in detecting emotion and character in church work, which was invaluable in saving souls.

Mrs. T. J. Copeland, speaking on behalf of Miss Belle Bennett, on "Woman and Missions," said: "We women of the Methodist Episcopal Church are looking towards the rising sun. It is in the eastern uncivilized countries, where women are showing their worth in church work as missionaries."

On the subject of "Deaconesses and Sisterhoods, Mrs. Lucy Rider Meyer of the Methodist Episcopal Church, told of the great work of the deaconesses nurses. Last year, according to Mrs. Meyer, 16,461 sick and maimed persons unable to help themselves were taken care of by the nurses."

Shock of Earthquake Slight.

Toronto, Oct. 14.—The earthquake which occurred last night in the Gulf of Mexico began at 10.03 o'clock, according to the local observatory record, and gave only a slight shock at this distance. The disturbance took place underneath the water of the Gulf and caused a tidal wave which rolled up 20 feet high and destroyed the towns of San Jose, Guaymas, Eeycalama and Iraita. Seventeen ships in Guaymas were also destroyed with nearly all the inhabitants.

SAVED HERSELF YEARS OF PAIN

If She Had Used Dodd's Kidney Pills First

Mrs McRea suffered for over two years, then two boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills made a new woman of her.

Previl, Gaspe Co., Que., Oct. 13.—(Special)—That she might have escaped two years and seven months of suffering had she tried Dodd's Kidney Pills in the first place is the firm conviction of Mrs. John McRea, an old and respected resident of this place. And this is the reason she gives for believing so:

"For two years and seven months I was a sufferer from Kidney Disease brought on by a strain and a cold. My eyes were puffed and swollen, my muscles cramped and I suffered from neuralgia and Rheumatism. My back ached and I had pains in my joints.

"For two years I was under the doctor's care but he never seemed to do me any lasting good. Two boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills made a new woman of me."

To save yourself suffering cure your Kidneys at the first sign of trouble Dodd's Kidney Pills are the one sure cure.

MACK'S TRUMP CARDS

Connie Mack will pitch Chief Bender (Albert) in the first game of the big series. The Indian has been resting up especially for this game, and will carry a heap of Philadelphia money in the initial performance. Bender first saw the light of day in Brainard, Minn., May 5, 1883. He is a graduate of the Carlisle Indian School and Dickinson College. Although he measures 6 feet 2 inches, he weighs only 180 pounds. In the spring of 1902 he signed with the Harrisburg Athletic Club, and made such a record that Connie Mack signed him early in 1903 for the Athletics. He did good work in 1904; but was greatly handicapped by sickness. An operation for appendicitis put him in shape for better work in 1905, but in mid-season he was laid up with kidney trouble. Later he recovered and did brilliant work, and won the deciding game of the American League race from Washington two days from the close. He pitched the Athletics to their only victory over the Giants for the 1905 world's title, shutting out the New Yorkers. In 1906 Chief Bender won 15 games and lost 10; in 1907 he won 16 and lost 8; in 1908 he won 8 and lost 8; in 1909 he won 8 and lost 9; in 1.909 he won 13 and lost 8; in 1910 he won 23 and lost 6; in 1911 (to date) he has won 17 and lost 6. And since he is in fine shape, Mack expects him to win.

Jack Coombs (John Wesley), the hero of last year's championship series, who ,with Bender will do again the bulk of the Athletics twirling, hails from Portland, Maine, where he was born in 1881. He is 6 feet 1 inch and tips the beam at 197 pounds. He first became known as a pitcher in 1902 when he established a fine record at Colby College. He pitched for the Varsity team until the end of the 1905 season, when Connie Mack secured his services. He did not report to the Philadelpia Club until 1906, however. His first year with the Athletics saw him pitch that famous 24-inning game against Boston, which Coombs won 4 to 1. That feat stamped him as a wonder, but later he fell short of expectations, and for a whole season Mack tried to make an outfielder of him. The next year he started in pitching again, but was never a bearcat until last season, when he and Bender won the pennant and then the championship for the Athletics. During the 1910 season he went 53 innings at one stretch without letting an opposing club score on him. His full record since joining the clan of Mack is as follows: In 1906, won 10 and lost 11; in 1907, won 6 and lost 9; in 1908, won 7 and lost 5; in 1909, won 12 and lost 11; in 1910, won 30 and lost 9, and up to present date this year he has won 27 and lost 11.

Local Club In Tankard Group

In the proposed plan for the tankard grouping of the clubs which the executive of the Ontario Curling Association will consider, Lindsay is mentioned in group 2 in the Ontario Tankard Competition, which is to be played at Lindsay. The other clubs in the group are Fenelon Falls, Peterborough, Campbellford, Port Hope, Bobcaygeon, Cannington. Umpire, Mr. J. D. Flavelle, of Lindsay.

The District Cup Competition for this district may be played off at Peterborough, with the follwing clubs competing: Cannington, Peterborough, Keene, Lindsay, Fenelon Falls, Bobcaygeon, Port Hope, Campbellford. Umpire, R. M. Waddell, of Peterborough.

RUGBY

Peterborough has two representatives on the Ottawa College football team to-day. Dick Sheehy playing full back and Frank Heffernan right half. The number will likely be increased next week, as the Ottawa papers say that Vernie Hayes is sure of a place. He is not eligible this week but will be all right next Saturday. He is playing on the half line of Ottawa College Seconds this afternoon against Renfrew Collegiate.

Dr. McPherson is refereeing this afternoon's game between Toronto Central Y.M.C.A. and Peterborough West Ends at Riverside Park.

WILL DIE GAME

Murderer Beattie, If Necessary, Would Turn on the Current

RICHMOND, VA., OCT 14.—Henry Clay Beattie, Jr., the convicted slayer of his wife, is determined to die game and indignantly scouts the rport strad some time ago that he would cheat the electric chair by committing suicide. The papers appealing his case are all ready and early next month the Supreme Court will be asked to grant a new trial upon the strength of the exceptions made by his lawyers. Beattie is under sentence to die November 24.

Would Turn Switch Himself.

The other day Beattie was visited by his particular friend, William Sampson, who was one of the witnesses at the trial. Beattie felt hurt that anyone should have thought that he would not die game. "I'll show them," he said to Sampson "how a man should die if that is what they are waiting for. The electric chair, bah! Why, what's that? Nothing. I tell you. If the lever on the switchboard is near enough to me I'll turn on the current myself.

"When a man has got to die, let him die like a man, without a whimper; but there's the Supreme Court. It has still got to act on this case before everything is over."

FUNERAL NOTICE

The funeral of the late Richard Milburn, who met death in the Otonabee yesterday, will take place from the deceased's late residence, 265 Lake street, at 2 o'clock on Tuesday afternoon to the Little Lake cemetery.

WON BET OF $20

A bet of unusual interest was won by a local mill manager from a traveller in the bar of a local hotel this afternoon. The two men had been betting on the world's series games, and A bet $20 that B. could not go and get $20 in twenty minutes and be back in the bar room. A. bolted and in considerably less than ten minutes was back in the barroom with $50 and the cash was handed over to him.

TO WED HIS WARD

Brooklyn Millionaire, Twice Divorced, to Take a Third Wife

BROOKLYN, N.Y., NOV. 14.—One of the well known belles of Brooklyn is Miss Marie Winthrop, who is noted as a dog fancier and who has gained many prizes at exhibitions in the eastern states. She is the ward of Thomas Monroe Turner, a millionaire of the metropolis, and within a short time, it is announced, she will become his wife.

The venture will be the third for Turner. His first wife secured a divorce, and to show his satisfaction with the decree he eloped with his second spouse .The second marriage was as unsatisfactory as the first had been and wife No. 2 soon secured her freedom in the divorce mill. What will be the outcome of the third venture it is impossible to say, but it is hard to regard the auspices as favourable to marital bliss.

FINANCIAL STATEMENT

Dominion Revenue Increases Nearly Eight Millions in Six Months

OTTAWA, OCT. 13.—The financial statement of the Dominion to the 30th of September shows that for the six months of the current fiscal year the revenue amounted to $64,089,524, an increase of $7,921,331; the ordinary expenditure to $35,933,456, an increase of $824,784, and the capital expenditure to $12,318,027, a decrease of $112,109.

Expensive Tastes.

No jewel fair
With woodrous glow
To envy moves my heart.
The colors rare
Its prisms show
No vain ambitious start.
Though radiant gleams
Through it may stir,
'Tis but a scant device.
When August steams
I much prefer
A simple chunk of ice.

Ethics of Visiting.

The two children were playing in the yard at the home of Constance. She remembered the teaching of her parents, but she wished to play a certain game, and Taylor desired to play another game.

"You ought to play my game," said Taylor, "because I'm your visitor, and you ought to do what I want to do."

Constance realized the truth of this, yet she did not wish to give in to her little friend.

"Let's go over to your house, Taylor," she said.—Indianapolis News.

AN UNLUCKY DAY

Accidents Are Rife in Toronto on Friday the 13th.

Toronto, Oct. 14.—Yesterday was Friday, the 13th, and it preserved its reputation for calamity with a long list of deaths from misadventure and several serious accidents were tallied during the day.

Baby Dick, aged 2 1-2 years, was playing in the roadway on Manning avenue, near Barton street, and ran in front of a newspaper delivery motor car. He was struck down and instantly killed. His father is J. Dick, of 778 Manning avenue. His parents and other witnesses of the accident joined in saying that the driver was blameless in the matter, and could in no way have prevented the accident.

Despite the plucky efforts of her fourteen-year-old son to save her when her clothing caught fire from the explosion of a can of coil oil with which she was trying to liven a fire in her home at 168 Christie street early yesterday morning, Mrs. Esther Fish died at three o'clock in the afternoon at the Western Hospital, where she had been taken in the police ambulance. When the mother, who was clad only in her night robe, found that the garment was in flames, the lad rushed out and poured a quantity of water over her, but by this time it was almost consumed and the woman's body was so severely burned that she died.

Andrew Culverwell, who was struck by a Dupont street car in Yonge street, near Agnes street, Wednesday evening, sustaining a fracture of the skull, died at St. Michael's Hospital last night. An inquest will be opened this afternoon.

The body of a man believed to be that of J. G. Galbraith of Port Hope, Ont, was picked up on a pile of earth on the bay shore at the foot of John street early yesterday morning. He wore a masonic emblem in his coat.

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES.

Morris Irwin, a G. T. R. brakeman, was fatally crushed between cars at Guelph.

The Toronto Public Library Board has refused to open the buildings on Sundays.

The Ontario Government may appoint a commission to develop the clay belt in north Ontario.

Joseph B. Blackburn, an aged resident of Chatham, committed suicide by swallowing carbolic acid.

A large banquet was tendered the Ecumenical Conference delegates by the Methodist Social Union in Toronto.

The police are out with a big stick after street loafers in Kingston. Magistrate Farrell has promised that everyone found guilty will be fined $5.

Magistrate Ball of Woodstock sentenced John Falconer, a young Scotchman, to six months in the Central Prison with ten lashes for criminal assault.

A disastrous fire occurred on the farm of James Bell, four miles from Markdale, completely destroying his large barn and stables and several valuable animals.

First Petition In.

Toronto, Oct. 14.—At one o'clock yesterday afternoon the first protest arising from the elections of Sept. 21st was filed with the Senior Registrar at Osgoode Hall by E. .B Ryckman, K.C.

The petition is that of Alexander McCall, lumberman, of Simcoe, the defeated Conservative candidate in Norfolk, and it is lodged against William A. Charlton, lumberman, of Toronto, his successful opponent.

With the usual circumlocution of election petitions under the Controverted Elections Act, Mr. McCall insinuates that the return of Mr. Charlton was not the expression of the free and untrammelled voice of the independent electors. In fact he goes further, and charges Mr. Charlton and his agents with bribery, treating, personation, intimidation, undue influence, and corrupt practices. He insinuates that the result of the election was not won by the merits of reciprocity, but by the promise of money, office, and such inducements to the voters to vote or refrain from voting.

Suffragists Jubilant.

New York, Oct. 14.—The National headquarters of the Woman's Suffrage organizations are in gala dress over the news of the victory in California. Unquestionably the strongest element in San Francisco and Oakland, which gave a majority of 16,000 against suffrage, in opposition to suffrage was the saloon. In the country, granges and other farmers' organizations endorsed suffrage, and much to the surprise of the politicians the farmers went to the polls. Instead of the light vote that was expected the vote in the country was heavier than in the city.

Servies preparatory to the communion, were held in St. Andrew's Presbyterian church last evening. Rev. Mr. Pogue preached a forcful sermon. The Sacrament of the Lord's Supper will be observed at the morning service to-morrow.

HOW TO COOK A COON

Bill Crouse, a guide for 52 years at Charleston lake in Ontario, Canada, has a novel recipe for cooking a loon. Here is the recipe that Bill gave: "Cook the loon in water for 12 hours; at night pour off the water and cook him over night; in the morning throw in a piece of grindstone and when you can stick a fork in the grindstone, the loon is done."—Fur News.

GIANTS WIN

FIRST GAME OF WORLD'S SERIES PRODUCES BRILLIANT BASEBALL BY BOTH TEAMS

The Pitchers on Opposing Teams in Excellent Control---Score is Very Close---Athletics Score in the First Innings----Giants Make Run in Fourth on Error by Collins ----Winning Run Scored in Seventh Innings By New York.

POLO GROUND, N.Y., OCT. 14. — The Giants won the first game of the world's series from the Athletics today by 3 to 1, after a pitchers battle between Mathewson and Bender. Both twirlers pitched superbly, but the great New Yorker was a shade steadier in pinches. Bender had 11 strikeouts and Mathewson 5. As against this, Bender hit a batter and passed four, while only one charity was issued by Mathewson. Collins' error gave the Giants their first run, while the New Yorkers played gilt-edged ball behind "Matty." The feature fielding stunt was contributed by Merkle in the fifth, when he fielded Collins' slow hit ball and made a diving tag to get a runner at first, thereby cutting off two sure runs for the Athletics. After the game, bets were offered at even money and 6 to 5 that New York would win the series.

New York Nationals—Devore, left; Doyle, 2nd; Snodgrass, centre; Murray, right; Merkle, 1st; Hersog, 3rd; Fletcher, short stop; Myers, catcher; Mathewson, pitcher.

Second Innings.

Athletics — Baker singled to right field; Murphy sacrificed; Baker going to second; and third, on a passed ball; Davis singled to left, scoring Baker; Barry and Thomas grounded out.—1 run.

Giants—Merkle out on grounder. Herzog taking Fletcher's place in batting order, out on grounder. Fletcher struck out.—No runs.

Third Innings.

Athletics — Bender grounded out. Lord flied to Murray; Collins walked. Baker struck out.—No runs.

Giants.—Meyers flied to Oldring; Mathewson fanned. The Indian is pitching wonderful ball. Devore walked; Doyle flied to Lord. No runs.

Sixth Innings.

Athletics—Baker singled to centre, making sixth hit; Murphy flied to Snodgrass, with Baker out stealing. Davis out at first. No runs.

Giants—Snodgrass goes to first hit by a pitched ball, Murray sacrificing him to second. Merkle fanned, while Snodgrass stole third. Baker is spiked in play and dropped the ball, delaying the game. Hersog walked. Snodgrass out at the plate on attempted double steal. No runs.

Seventh Innings.

Athletics.—Barry fanned; Thomas flied to Snodgrass; Bender out at first on a grounder. No runs.

Giants—Fletcher out on a grounder. Meyers doubled to left; Mathewson struck out; Devore doubled to left, and Meyers scored. Doyle walked; Snodgrass fanned. One run.

WEST ENDS DEFEATED BY THE CENTRAL Y. M. C. A., TORONTO

The Local Rugby Game in the O. R. F. U. Series Resulted in Win For Visitors 22-0

The Central Y.M.C.A. rugby team of Toronto, defeated the local West End rugby team before a small crowd today, at Riverside park, by the score of 21-0.

The game was a much better one than the score indicates. The principal reason for the locals' defeat was due to lack of condition and the fact that the Toronto team was better drilled in team play. The opposing players had about the same weight, and with the locals in condition a closer score would have resulted.

ST. JAMES' CHURCH FOOTBALL TEAM DEFEATS PARK ST. IN GOOD GAME

To-day's Soccer Game Results in a Close Score, With Good Football By Both Teams.

The game played this afternoon at the Exhibition grounds between St. James' and Park street, was keenly contested, and drew a large number of spectators.

From the outset the play was very even, and at no time did one team overshadow the other. Towards the end of the second half great excitement prevailed. At that time the score stood at 1-0 in favour of St. James (goal scored by Tart) when a beautiful shot from Williams of Park Street, went home and the score was equalled. Subsequent to this the game became somewhat heated and great excitement prevailed.

Simonites, of St. James', rushed up the field with the ball, and Jackson, who received it, found the goal with a magnificent shot, and the game resulted in a win for St. James' by two goals to nil.

The line-up was as follows:

Park Street—Goal, Taylor; backs, Renshawe and Donnell; halves, Allen, Dawson and Irwin; forwards, Smith, Boycott, Miller, Millburn and Williams.

St. James—Goal, Evans; backs, Gribb and Jackson; halves, Sanderford, Simonite and Brown; forwards, Hudson, Lawrence, Turner, Hunter, and Tart.

VARSITY BEAT McGILL 18 TO 11

Special to The Examiner

TORONTO, OCT. 14.—Seven thousand people saw Varsity defeat McGill in the opening game of the Inter-collegiate season here this afternoon. McGill started off in a lively style and had the score six to nothing the first five minutes. Varsity bucked up and scored a few rouges and then, with the aid of Quarterback Peter Campbell's famous ball disappearing act, in conjunction with Capt. Maynard, slipped over a touchdown on the McGill men and took a narrow lead, which they held to half time. It was 10-9 then and McGill evened up right off the reel. Then Campbell and Ramsay executed a couple of slippery line stunts, and with another touch, made it 17-10. Campbell's slippery work at quarter, featured Varsity's game. Maynard, Ramsay and Dale did grand work behind the line and so did Basil Frith, when he replaced Capt. Maynard, when his ankle twisted in the final quarter. McGill has a good back division, but they were none too sure with their hands. Their line was as speedy as Varsity's. McGill's best line man was Laing. He was upon the play all the time and created all sorts of trouble for Varsity's back division.

SURPRISE FOR OTTAWA

Were Badly Beaten By Hamilton Tigers This Afternoon

Special to The Examiner:

H.A.A.A. GROUNDS, HAMILTON, ONT., OCT. 14.— With Hamilton's chances of figuring in the Big Four championship on the outcome of today's battle, the Tiger-Ottawa Rough Rider game drew a crowd of four thousand rugby fans this afternoon to see Hamilton win by 33 to 0. The weather was superb and the field in fine shape for fast football. Ottawa played the same team that trimmed Montreal last Saturday, but there was a re-arrangement of Captain Isbisters' speed boys. Isbister himself shifted from flying half to inside wing. McNellie, who decided to go over to the Alerts, but changed his mind, replaced Kid Smith at half, and Oliver was made the flying half.

WORLD'S SERIES REPORTS

The Examiner will contain daily reports of the world's series during the battles between the New York Giants and Philadelphia Athletics, which opened this afternoon. Arrangements have been made for a complete telegraph service.

MRS. GIFFORD NOT LIKELY TO RECOVER

The latest report re the condition of Mrs. Peter Gifford was received at five o'clock. Dr. Young, one of the medical men attending, stated that he thought there was very little chance for her recovery. He said that the burns extended all over the body, and were deep. He said it was possible that she might live for three or four days, but it was not probable. The last report from the Hospital was to the effect that she was resting easily, but was very low.

THINGS CHANGE.

When the Nationalist members return for re-election and are nominated as Conservative standard-bearers, the natural inquiry will be — which flag, the tri-colour or the Union Jack? The cries have changed with the conditions. The "Down with Laurier" cry has served its purpose, and "Down with the Navy" has taken its place. The former cry was common to both Quebec and Ontario. The latter was copy-righted by Quebec, but the copyright has been assigned to Mr. Borden by the Nationalist members of his cabinet.

A BUSINESS REASON.

The Toronto Star, counters cleverly on the World in respect of a Sam Hunter cartoon, representing Sir James Whitney as an insurance agent interviewing Mrs. Ontario for a renewal of the policy of assurance of good ogvernment. The Star repeats the cartoon, but aptly changes the reply of Mrs. Ontario—"You go right along with you; that last policy I paid for has another year to run, and I can show you the receipt now." There she had the Premier. The Ontario legislature has another year of life, and there is no legitimate reason for thrusting another election on the heels of another to the detriment of business and public convenience, without serving any good purpose whatever. Sir James cannot justify his action, except by bluster and bull-dozing, in which gentle arts he is recognized as a past master.

A LITTE JUG-HANDLED.

The Whitney Government takes considerable credit to itself, for its Hydro-electric power policy, though perhaps the credit is more largely due to Hon. Adam Beck, who had to practically force his policy upon the acceptance of the Government. Without entering into the merits of the Government's power policy and its admitted benefits to some parts of the province, the very fact that it discriminates as to locality in its distribution of its benefits renders it unfair. While the whole credit of the Province is pledged, and the whole Province has to contribute to the working out of the scheme, the result is that, while the whole province pays, only one section gets the advantages. The direct tendency and effect of this is that the towns and cities, situated close to the centre of power supply, are in a position to monopolize the concentration of industrial establishments, and become competitors for the location of factories, against which the more distant parts of the Province are not in a position to fight on equal terms. Thus we see such places as Welland, St. Catharines, Hamilton and Toronto much more favourably situated in regard to ability to offer power at tempting prices than more distant places. This disparity of opportunity and attractions may in part, explain why Peterborough is not getting a share of new industries under a policy that gives favoured sections superior advantages of attraction as sites for the establishment of new industries. So far the power arrangement is very much jug-handled.

EASILY QUIETED CONSCIENCES.

How readily can men square their consciences with their interests, even in the high moral domain of politics. We had, during the last election, one class in Ontario fiercely fighting Laurier on racial and religious grounds and in deadly opposition to another set of men in another province, hostile to everything these Ontario patriots and defenders of the faith and all true Canadians hold dear. Yet the moment these two factions accomplish what they both sought, they bury the hatchet with the greatest alacrity and fall into each others arms. Mr. Borden takes these Nationalists into his cabinet, thus converting self-confessed doctrinaires of treason and disruption of the Empire and Confederation, into patriots of the first water. And the Nationalists return the compliment by recognizing the high statesmanship of Mr. Borden and the virtues of his following, and establishing an affectionate entente cordiale between two recently hostile elements. There never was very grave danger from the Nationalist movement. Its triumph was doomed to be short; it was bound to be condemned and discredited, as it was in Quebec, where the success for the moment of the Nationalists in the Drummond-Arthabaska bye-election, was extinguished by the condemnation implied by the return of a Liberal candidate at the general elections. Nationalism, with all its sinister significance, would not have amounted to much ,except for its official recognition by Mr. Borden as a legitimate element of Canadian politics. It remained for the great Conservative party — the custodian of all possible loyalty and the bulwark of religious liberty, to give a new lease of life to a movement, that stands for the rupture of the unity of the Empire and of Confederation.

A GOOD RECORD.

Here is a record that is worth a little attention as showing in what periods and under what King, Canada made the greatest progress:

Canada's total trade with Great Britain rose from $73,113,879 in 1873 —the Conservative period—to $85,512,446 in 1896, to $234,879,372 in 1910—under Liberal administration. Canada's total trade with the United States rose from $70,134,217 in 1879 to $87,989,818 in 1896, to $321,702,090 in 1910. The assets of the chartered banks amounted to $175,490,274 in 1878; they amounted to 321 millions in 1896; they amounted to 1,211 millions in 1910. The bank discounts in 1878 were 128 millions; in 1896 they were 226 million; in 1910 they were 870 million. In 1878 there were 5378 post offices in Canada, and 44 million letters were mailed; in 1896 there were 9103 post offices and 116 million letters were mailed; in 1910 there were 12,887 post offices, and 456 million letters were mailed. In 1878 there were 6226 miles of steam railways in operation in Canada; in 1896 there were 16,270 miles; in 1910 there were 24,731 miles. The number of tons of freight carried by the railways was 7 millions, in 1878; it was 24 millions in 1896; and it was 74 millions in 1910.

In the above, we have the story shortly told of the progress made by Canada under Liberal administration compared with the progress made during the Conservative regime. The figures of this record are inspiring, and the Liberal record of phenomenal progress should be pasted on the walls of the council chamber so that the members of Mr. Borden's Cabinet should have them as a stimulus to endeavour to equal such a record.

WELCOME THE DUKE.

Canada has now a royal governor, a royal vice-regal representative. The enthusiastic reception tendered the Duke of Connaught, shows that the loyalty of Canada to the Crown is not diminishing. Old Quebec led the way in right, hearty welcome, of an earnestness that cannot be and will not be, exceeded in any part of the Dominion. This is all the more significant, in view of the movement inspired by certain disgruntled French Canadians to weaken the bonds between Canada and the Throne. And although the head of a Conservative government has placed a premium on disloyalty to Great Britain and the Empire, by official recognition of the disloyal element, the reception of the Duke shows that, as a people, the hearts of our French Canadian fellow subjects of the King are in the right place and beating soundly in tune. The sending of a Governor-General of the royal house of Great Britain to Canada may have been regarded as something of an experiment, but the indications are that in the beginning, the experiment is swallowed up in assured success. Before he reached our shores Connaught showed some of the qualities that will tend to make his vice-regal rule highly successful and acceptable. To royalty of position, he adds a simple royalty of nature, a royalty of common sense and democratic demeanor. His affability to his fellow passengers on the voyage over charmed them with the dignified simplicity and cordiality of his manners. His splendid reception at Quebec, where he encountered a striking spontaneity of loyal acclaim, constituted a popular demonstration, such as has never greeted an arriving governor at the gateway of the Dominion. The whole city was ablaze with colour, as all hearts were ablaze with welcome. We welcome the Duke of Connaught for his exalted position and also for the manly simplicity and promise of successful administration of his great trust.

LEST HE FORGET.

On October 14, 1910, just a year ago, Mr. Borden uttered these words at Halifax:

"One governing principle at least should control, namely that out of our material, by our own labour, and by the instructed skill of our own people, any necessary provision for our own naval defence should be made. In this connection may we not hope that there shall be given a stimulus and an encouragement to the shipbuilding industry of which Canada has been long lacking? To-day should be Nova Scotia's opportunity in this regard. Providence has endowed this province with the material, with the men, and with the maritime situation, which are essential for developing a scheme of naval defence and protection."

It will be well to remember these words when Mr. Borden comes to develop his stand in the naval matter; when he shall have had time to profit by the advice of his Nationalistalist, anti-naval and anti-British colleagues.

WILL ASSUME LAKEFIELD CHARGE

The citizens of Lakefield generally will be exceedingly sorry to learn that Rev. Father Phelan who has had charge of the parish of Lakefield and Young's Point for the past ten years, has decided with the permission of the Bishop, to resign his duties here and leave Lakefield, owing to ill-health. For the past year Father Phelan's health has been failing, and a short time ago he decided to give up his parish and take a trip to the southern States to see if his health would not be benefitted by the change. Next Sunday he will bid farewell to his congregation. Rev. Father John O'Brien of Peterborough has been appointed as his successor. —Lakefield News.

LIBERALS ARE ACTIVELY PREPARING FOR ELECTION; THE ONTARIO SITUATION

(Toronto Star)

The Liberals of the Province are busy drawing up their lines for the fight in the coming Provincial elections. They are not deceiving themselves with any dreams, but feel fairly confident that in spite of the handicaps under which they are working they will be able to strengthen their position in the Legislature.

Twenty-four candidates are already in the field. J. T. Anderson, of Lucknow, was nominated for South Bruce yesterday. Local organizations are being urged to proceed at once with the selection of candidates and there will probably only be a few ridings in which the election will go by acclamation. There will be some such because after the expenses of the recent Dominion campaign some local organizations do not feel in a position to put up a fight against what, in some cases, are hopeless odds. Candidates accepting nominations will have to depend almost altogether on their own resources, and must find their active workers among men willing to give their time and service quite voluntarily.

Will be Re-Nominated.

Of the seventeen Liberal members in the present Legislature five have already been renominated, and all probably will be with one exception of W. J. McCart, M.P.P., for Stormont. Mr. McCart is leaving Ontario for the North-West. One of the hardest fights in the campaign will be in North Grey, Hon. A. G. MacKay's seat. Here the Conservative forces are making a determined effort to unseat the leader of the Opposition.

One hopeful sign for the Liberal party since the Waterloo of September 21st, has been the formation of a number of Liberal clubs. At the Ontario Reform Association's office during the past week there have come no less than eleven applications for the necessary constitutions, etc.

The Reform Associations.

The annual meeting of the Ontario Reform Association which should have been held early in September, but was postponed on account of the election, has been called for October 31st. It is expected that it will be an unusually large meeting, and a real factor in pulling the party together for the coming campaign. The Association is made up of Liberal members of both Houses, candidates, and Senators, as well as the presidents and secretaries of associations in the various ridings. Other Liberals are admitted to its discussions, but may not vote. The total membership is about five hundred. It is not likely that at a meeting of this kind anything that might be called a new platform will be adopted, but it is likely that its resolutions will formulate what the party stands for, and put definitely before the public the issues in the campaign.

Dates of Elections.

The great topic of discussion among political workers just now is the probable date of the elections. Some speak, as if with authority, of December 5th as the date. Others speak of December 11. The latter date is the most probable, although for the sakeof interfering as little as possible with the Christmas trade the Government will bring the election on at the earliest possible date. The difficulty in the way of an earlier date is the preparation of the voters' lists in the north. In those districts, where there are so municipal organizations to assist in the preparation of the lists, enumerators have to be appointed. These enumerators have to post notices at all polling places, at post-offices and all public buildings that they are to be present at that place to prepare the voters' lists. Thirty days must elapse between the notice and the closing up of the lists. Then fifteen days must be allowed for appeals to the district judge. Even allowing hardly any time for the actual work of posting the notices and of going around making the enumeration, the lists could not be completed until December. How speedily the actual enumeration can be done depends of course upon the number of enumerators, but unless an unusually large number is appointed it will take several days.

LAWYER PREVENTS SUICIDE OF DOCTOR

Despondent Travelling Physician Is Prevented From Taking His Life

CALGARY., OCT. 13.—Making desperate attempts to slit open the veins in his wrist, and loudly shouting his intentions of committing suicide because he "had made a mess of things," Dr. George, a travelling medical man, threw pedestrians on Ninth avenue into a furore of excitement shortly before two o'clock this afternoon.

George made his attempt to commit suicide in front of the Empire Hotel, and B. W. Collison, the well known criminal lawyer, who was passing, immediatley leaped upon him, and after a short struggle, took the knife from his hands.

The would-be suicide has been drinking heavily, and after the knife was taken from him pleaded vainly for its return in order that he might complete his task, but fearing that he would run amuck again, his friends took the knife and, after some time, succeeded in quieting him and getting him to leave the street. Although he only succeeded in scratching one wrist slightly, George was very serious in his intentions, and but for the prompt assistance of Mr. Collison would have committed suicide.

WHO HOLDS YOU DOWN?

By DR. ORISON SWEET MARDEN.

What object is more pitiable than that of a healthy, strong, well-educed young man whining about the hard times, or the lack of opportunity in this land, which is so packed with chances? In what other country, or at what other time in the history of the world, were the times better or the opportunities greater?

Tens of thousands of young people in this country try to excuse themselves for their failure to do something worth while by saying that it is the fault of society, that it is due to economic conditions, to the fact that a few good-for-nothing idlers get all the money and all the good things, while the many do all the work and bear all the burdens.

Many young men and women idle away their lives, waiting for something to turn up, for somebody to boost them; while other boys and girls, with half their chance, educate and lift themselves out of poverty. The veriest nonsense that ever entered a youth's head is that the good chances are in the past, that somebody must help him or he can never start.

The mainspring of your watch is not outside of its case. No power or influence outside of the watch can make it keep good time. Its mainspring is inside. The power which will carry you to your goal is not in somebody else. It is in yourself, or nowhere.

A middle-aged man was recently discharged by a large firm in New York because he asked for an increase in salary of two hundred dollars a year. He writes me that he had been with the firm for twenty-two years, had worked very hard and faithfully, and had tried in every way to advance the interests of the concern, and yet at the end of all these years he was getting only at the rate of one thousand dollars a year. This man complains that the firm had kept him down, and that he had been very unjustly treated. He is now working for the municipal government of New York at a salary of twelve dollars a week.

On the face of it, the action of the firm in discharging an employee after twenty-two years of faithful service seems harsh, even to cruelty. But the charge that he was "kept down," is a very different matter. In the first place, it would be extremely foolish for the firm to part with him if he had made his services invaluable. They could not afford to lose him.

We find that during these twenty-two years, scores and scores of employees were advanced all around him. While he was rising to a thousand dollars a year, others had risen to five thousand, ten thousand, or more, and some of those who began far below him had, in the meantime, become superintendents, managers, or partners.

Will any sane person say that these promotions were all due to favouritism, rather than to merit? Do employers knowingly work against their own interests? Are they not usually very sharp to see where any advantage to themselves lies?

The chances are that this man was kept down by himself, that the cause of his failure to rise was to be found in himself, not in the firm. It may be soothing to his self-love to think that he was kept back while others were pushed on ahead of him, but that is not the truth.

A young drug clerk tells me that he is hopelessly tied down to a salary of ten dollars a week, with no prospect of advancement. Young married men say that they are not earning more than they did before marriage, and that their increased expenses make any considerable degree of success absolutely impossible. Others write of being tied down to uncongenial employment in small towns where there is no chance to rise where there are no great opportunities. They say that even by hard work they can not hope to earn more than just a fair living. Some have invalid relatives to support, and others have old debts to pay. They all seem to have some excuse for not rising in the world.

In some cases the writers can not define or specify what keeps them back; but they feel that here is something and they call it fate or bad luck. Perhaps these are the most bitter complainers of all. Others tell what wonderful things they would do if they could only cut the cords which hold them back, and get free from the shackles which bind them to uncongenial work or compel them to support others, or which keep them on farms when they would go to the city, where the great chances are. They feel that if they could only get rid of their impediment, the thing that holds them down, they would soar into the ether of a larger opportunity and a completer life, as does the eagle when freed from a cage.

Do not hypnotize yourself with the idea that you are being kept down. Do not talk such nonsense. Nobody of any sense would believe it. People will only laugh at you. Only one thing is keeping you down, and that is yourself.

Progressive employers are always looking for the exceptional man or woman, the one who can step out from the crowd and do things in an original way, who can economize in processes, who can facilitate business. They are always looking for the earmarks leadership, or superior ability. They are looking for the progressive employee with new ideas who can help them to be more of a success. They know very well that they can get any number of automatons—multitudes who will do a thing just well enough to keep their places—but they are looking for originality, individualtiy, or up-to-date methods. They want employees who can put things through with vigour and determination, without lagging, whining, apologizing, or asking questions. Nothing can bar the advancement of employees of this kind. Nobody can keep them down.

If by chance some one above you is actually trying to prevent your promotion for selfish reasons, it ought to be very flattering to you to know that he is trying to keep you back, and should make you all the more determined to get ahead. It is a pretty good indication that there is some reason for his fear, and that you have material in you for a better place. This should encourage you to redouble your efforts to do your work so well, to stamp such superiority upon everything you toch, to acquit yourself so much better than the man who is trying to keep you down—to be so much pleasanter, so much more of a man, that it will only be a question of time when you will get the position for which you are striving, or perhaps a better one.

The quickest way to get away from the counter is to work hard, to be polite and obliging at the counter. The trouble with people who complain that they can not get above the positions they are in is that they can not see that the step to the thing above them is in the thing they are doing, in their manner of doing it, that the opportunity for advancement is in the promptness, the thoroughness, the efficiency they show in the positions they now occupy.

If you are made of the stuff that wins, nobody can keep you back, for if you do not find your chance where you are, you will find it somewhere else. But remember that your achievement can not rise higher than your resolution. So long as you think you are tied down so that you can not move you will never get up or get on. The man who acknowledges that he is a "perpetual clerk" will never become manager or proprietor of anything until he changes his conviction. His own lack of confidence and push, not circumstances, is the chain which binds him.

It is natural that we should obtain the thing we long for with all our hearts, and persistently work to obtain, as that a stone should come to the earth when hurled into the air. The ambition, the desire, the longing the hunger, the struggle toward the aim, these are the forces of gravitation which bring us the desired result.

Do you realize, my complaining friend, what it means to achieve anything of note in this world, to pay the price of success? How hard have you tried to succeed? Have you ever set your face toward prosperity and success with clenched fist, set teeth, and a firm determination never to turn back, no matter what opposed you, not to be deflected to the right or left of your purpose? If not, you must not complain of your small measure of success.

You can never accomplish anything by taking hold of an opportunity with the tips of your fingers. You must take off your coat, roll up your sleeves, and fling your life power into your aim.

POST CARD COLUMN

AN APPEAL TO SCOTCHMEN.

Friends.—Although "only an Englishman" I have so many friends amongst you and have had for years, that anything and everything that looks good for you interests me very much. Now there's great doings in the air just now with you Scots, and I want you to rally round and do your share to help. There's to be a great gathering of the Clans to-night and a good supper and plenty of harmony at Coleman Bros. rooms on George street. A society will be formed to be run on something after the lines of the "Caledonian Society" and will probably be called the St. Andrew's Society. Briefly its aim will be to help as much as possible all Scotch lassies and lads in the city to hold meetings for mutual benefit. Now, this really does deserve your help and sympathy. All to do with it are Scotch, and it is all for the Scotch. I have been wanting to see this for some time and now a start has been made I wish it every success. It rests with you, my friends. Will you all do your best to make it a grand success. I believe you will. To start at 8 to-night. All come and help. Wishing you good luck.

Yours sincerely,

Percival G. S. Webb.

PRICE OF MILK SOARS IN LINDSAY

(Lindsay Post.)

Last night the milk vendors doing business in Lindsay, met in the Butler House and decided to raise the price of milk to four cents a pint and seven cents a quart. The reason for the advance is due to the scarcity of feed. This has been a poor season, it is pointed out, for fodder, and the milk vendors have been forced to raise the price on account of the shortage. The increase will take effect on Nov. 1st.

FALL SUITS FOR WOMEN

The showing of Women's Suits for Fall at this store is replete with new and fascinating ideas. Dame Fashion never gave her sanction to styles more bewitchingly pretty, more interesting in every way to Fashion's devotees. Gathered here you will find the most charming garments made by Canada's leading tailors, after New York's styles.

We attribute our leadership in Women's wear to many things prominent among which is the fact that we devote a great deal of our time to the selection of our stocks.

Last year we had phenomenal success with our Suits for Women at $17.50 to $25. Our values for this season at these prices are greater than ever before, and women folk in search of a quality garment at modest price, cannot afford to miss this 1911 showing.

Come here now while the stocks are at their best. Study the fascinating styles for Fall. See our comprehensive and unequalled display, notice the high quality of the materials, the perfect workmanship, and the alluringly moderate prices.

REVOLUTION SPREADING; WHOLE TOWNS GO OVER

Sanguinary Battles Resulting in Defeat of Government Troops Have Been Fought in China During Past Twenty-four Hours----Government Depending Largely Upon Their Well-Manned Gun-Boats.

Special to The Examiner.

LONDON, OCT. 14.—Authoritative despatches from Pekin and Tokio this morning indicate that the Chinese revolution continues to spread, and there have been sanguinary battles within the last twenty-four hours, which have resulted in the defeat of government troops by the Republican revolutionists. As the hours pass, citizens of whole towns proclaim their city under new Republican government and in most cases, if there are any troops in the town, they go over to the revolutionaries. The government must depend largely on its well organized and manned gunboats on the rivers. These fleets have been sent up with instructions to bombard all cities and towns which have gone over to the revolutionists, and the foreign consuls at Pekin are extremely anxious lest in general reprisals on both sides foreign residents may be generally massacred. Each hour brings reports of terrible massacres of Manchus.

A RIVER DRIVER WAS ATTACKED ON CHEMONG ROAD BY HIGHWAYMEN

William Rutherford While on His Way to the City Was Held Up and Brutally Assaulted----Attempt to Secure His Wad Was Unsuccessful.

A man with a badly battered up countenance, and his right hand swathed in bandages, was observed lingering around the G. T. R. station last night. On being questioned by an Examiner representative as to the cause of his dilapidated-looking condition, he replied that he had been held up on the Chemong Road, by thugs on Thursday evening, while on his way to the city. The victim of the assault gave his name as William Rutherford. He was a river driver by occupation, and has been working on the drive back at Cavendish during the past summer. When within about six miles of Peterborough on Thursday night, two husky-looking forms loomed up in the darkness, and offered to relieve him of his cash. This he strongly objected to do, whereupon they retaliated, by striking him in the face. Rutherford, who, by the way, is a strapping big fellow, quickly assumed the defensive, and, to use his own expression, "the blood and hair flew in all directions." The battle was short and decisive and culminated in a complete rount for the highway men, but not before Rutherford had been badly cut about the face and hands. However, his wad was intact, and he was able to continue his journey. He left for Toronto last night via G. T. R., from which place he will proceed to Sudbury. When questioned as to why he did not report the matter to the police, he said that business in Sudbury demanded his immediate presence there, and he had no desire to be delayed or be mixed up in any police court proceedings which might arise. He considered himself very fortunate that he did not lose his wad which amounted to about $175, and attributes the failure of the thugs to secure it to the fact that it was hidden in his boots. At one stage of the proceedings he was down on the ground, but was enabled to regain his feet before his assailants closed in on him. The appearance of a headlight in the distance was responsible, he thinks, for their hasty retreat.

THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron

"HAVE you called on Mrs. R. yet?" inquired the lady-who-always-knows-somehow.

"I have n't," said Molly, the little stenographer.

The rest of us added our negative to hers.

"Why?" pursued the lady-who-always-knows-somehow.

"I hate formal first calls," said Molly. "I always put them off as long as I can."

"I've been so busy," I pleaded. "I'm really going soon."

"I guess I was just lazy," confessed the Butterfly.

"How long do you think it is since Mrs. R. moved here?" asked the lady-who-always-knows-somehow.

"Why, I suppose it must be five or six weeks," reckoned Molly.

"It's over three months," said the lady.

"It can't be," cried Molly.

"It is," said the lady, "and listen. Yesterday afternoon I was over there and what do you think that poor little woman did when I asked her if she liked the neighbourhood? She just broke down and cried. You know, she moved here from a long ways off and she hasn't a friend or relative within a thousand miles. She hasn't any children either. She lost her only little girl last year. Her husband is devoted to her, but he has to be away on business a good deal. And what do you think, she said that in all this neighbourhood only two other persons besides myself had called upon her."

"She asked me if I thought she had done anything to offend people, or if I had any idea what the trouble was. She said she was almost crazy with lonesomeness. Now don't you think we all ought to feel pretty much ashamed?"

Needless to say, we did think so, and incidentally registered our intention of calling the very next day, as early as the law would allow.

Perhaps you may be persuaded by this little tale that our neighbourhood is a peculiar one.

I don't believe it is.

I think it is typical, and that little tragedies like this one are going on every day in every community.

Laziness, forgetfulness, indifferences, procrastination, busyness—these are the feeble excuses that we offer for our cruelty.

And meanwhile the woman whom we have isolated on a desert island of loneliness by our selfishness or our carelessness, waits and wonders, and eats her heart out with lonesomeness and homesickness.

I do not doubt but there have been many cases of nervous prostration, perhaps even of suicide, caused by the people who didn't call.

Of course, few people enjoy formal first calls. But, since they are the inevitable first step toward neighbourliness, I think we surely ought to endure the evil for the sake of the good that follows.

And not only endure it, but endure it quickly.

Don't you?

• • • • • •

"WELL, I would like to know what became of that quarter I just gave away," 'I heard a man say the other day. "The poor devil I gave it to swore that he hadn't anything to eat for two days. Of course, he may have wanted it for a drink, or he may have more money that I have, but what can you do when a man says he is starving? I'd rather help ten men who didn't serve it, than refuse one who was really hungry."

I think the quandary in which this man found himself is a very common one. I don't believe there is anyone who goes about much, but has often been asked for money to buy food with, and has wondered, as he gave it, if it would really be used for that purpose.

Wherefore, I want to tell you of the man-who-thinks' solution of this quandary.

From the Salvation Army in the city in which he lives, he procured a number of tickets, some good for a meal and some for a night's lodging at the Army's headquarters. When anyone asks him for money for food or lodging, he gives him one of these tickets. If the suppliant is really hungry, he presents the ticket and receives the meal or the lodging. At the end of each month, the man-who-thinks settles with the Salvation Army for all the tickets marked with this special number which have been presented.

In this way, he is sure of never turning away anyone who really wants food, and at the same time, of not giving money to professional beggars.

Doesn't the man-who-thinks' way appeal to you as a rather clever solution of the difficulty?

"My Dear Miss Cameron:—

"Will you please, some time, write one of your little articles on the subject of a man taking a woman's arm when on the street coming home from the theatre and so on? When the lady is old or there is a crowd, or it is raining, or the couple are engaged, it may be all right (though even then it seems to me she should take his arm); but in pleasant weather, when the streets are not crowded, nothing arouses my resentment like having a man take hold of my arm and "walk me ahead" faster, perhaps, than I care to go. As a general thing, after a man has done it once, I refuse further invitations to go out with him, yet, I think it is done unconsciously, without meaning to give offense, and I know no way to stop it.

"Seems to me a woman ought, literally, to 'set the pace'— be free to step one way or the other, as she likes, and not be 'poked.'

"Please, in your own inimitable way, write it up some time, and very much oblige

"One Who Usually Agrees With Miss Cameron"

If "my own inimitable way" were half so inimitable as my correspondent's, I should have gladly complied with her request. As it is, I feel quite justified in merely passing along the hint with the endorsement—"Them's my sentiments, too."

By the way, I wonder that she omitted to mention a similar masculine trick—that of "shoving" one up the curbstone by the elbow. When one is quite able-bodied it is certainly infuriating to be thus "hoisted" up a perfectly ordinary step.

As my correspondent says, I believe that this is done "unconsciously and without meaning to give offense," but, I trust that every man who reads this will stop, look and reflect, and if he is an offender in this respect, offend no more.

The Packing Companies Form Five Million Merger

TORONTO, OCT. 13.—It was today announced that three of the large Canadian packing houses had formed a merger under the name of Matthews, Laing, Limited, with a capital of $5,000,000. The companies included in the merger are George Matthews, Limited, with plants at Hull, Peterborough and Brantford; the Laing Packin & Provision Co., Ltd., of Montreal, and the Park-Blackwell Company of Toronto.

Mr. W. E. Matthews will be President of the merger, while the Board of Directors will be chosen from the officers of the various companies, whose business will be carried on as before.

It is thought that the capital of the three companies in the merger is about $2,000,000, and that after the consolidation is effected there will be a flotation of common and preferred stock, which will afford ample scope for improving their plants, it being stated that the intention of the new company is to extend its business in all lines, and to largely increase its plant and equipment to meet the growing trade of the country. Several strong companies remain outside the merger.

TERRIBLY BURNED

Mrs. Peter Gifford, 555 Albert St. Sustained Severe Burns While Lighting the Fire

RECOVERY DOUBTFUL

A terrible accident occurred this afternoon at 555 Albert street, as the result of an explosion of coal oil.

Mrs. Peter Gifford was pouring a little coal oil in her stove to augment the fire, which already existed in a limited degree, when the oil exploded.

The first notification of the accident occurred when some neighbours, hearing screams and groans, looked and saw Mrs. Gifford rushing into the street burning from head to foot. She fell and the neighbours gathered round her, extinguished the flames and rendered what assistance they could under the circumstances.

Meanwhile the contents of the house were in danger of being consumed by fire. The fire brigade was summoned and soon appeared on the scene, extinguishing the flames, while the Dan Spence ambulance, which had also been telephoned for, arrived and took the injured lady to the Nicholls Hospital. The injuries received by the unfortunate lady presented a lamentable sight. Her arms and legs were badly scorched, while her face was burned almost beyond recognition. Prior to the arrival of the Dan Spence ambulance she repeatedly called for water.

As Mrs. Gifford lived alone, at the request of certain of the neighbours, Chief Howard, accompanied by Mrs John Theobald, Mrs. Fred Shephard and two firemen, went through the house and took possession of the valuables, in the form of a bank book $2.95 in cash, a valuable chain and locket of old gold, three veteran medals and some letters.

"We did not find any deeds or fire insurances," said the Chief.

It was ascertained that the good lady had lived at 555 Albert street for a very long time. The cottage was a comfortable one and gave every indication that Mrs. Gifford was in fairly good circumstances.

In the sheds were found a milch cow, calf, a number of hens and chickens and a large quantity of eggs in the house.

Drs. Cameron and Young were in attendance.

MR. H. P. KENNEDY GIVES IMPRESSIONS OF WEST

Tells of the Stock Conditions in the Prairie Provinces---He Is Very Enthusiastic Over the Prospects Before the City of Edmonton.

While the west has some cattle to spare it is thought shipments to Ontario this fall will be considerably lighter than last year. This is the opinion of Mr. H. P. Kennedy, who returned to Toronto yesterday after an extended tour of the prairie country in quest of first-hand information.

Recalling the fact that the western ranges were depleted last autumn, when 50,000 export cattle, 40,000 butchers' and 32,000 feeders were shipped east from Winnipeg, on account of the scarcity of feed, Mr. Kennedy said the best-posted western men believed shipments this year would show a material decrease, because there has been a shortage of beef west of the great lakes for the past six months, and the prospects are that supplies will be none too plentiful for some time to come. "A few cattle," he continued, "are being shipped to Montreal, some of them for slaughter there and some for export, but the majority are being bought on speculation, and these are losing money because prices are too high in Winnipeg to give shippers a profit. Local demand is supplemented by calls from British Columbia, both for beef and pork. Large shipments of the latter, of course, are now going to the Prairie Provinces from Ontario. More will be needed. The western production of hogs has not kept pace with the influx of immigrants. And while the west has not a great many cattle to spare, it will not require beef from Ontario, immediately at all events."

Mr. Kennedy was much impressed with the progress made by such cities as Calgary and Edmonton. "The latter has great possibilities. Calgary is busier at the present but it has not the country to back it up like Edmonton, with its three transcontinental railways and the Peace River district to the north."

Mr. H. P. Kennedy has just spent some time carefully going into western city real estate values. After looking over a number of the most progressive cities in the west, Mr. Kennedy was of the opinion that Edmonton had prospects which would give her a quicker and bigger future than any of the other cities he visited although they were all exceedingly prosperous and showed splendid prospects.

There must be in the neighbourhood of ten million dollars to be immediately spent in this city by the railways, and two immense pork packing establishments, and with the Peace River District back of the city, nothing can keep Edmonton from going ahead very fast.

In evidence of Mr. Kennedy's faith in Edmonton he purchased a large number of city lots in one block, situated most favourably, which have since his arrival home, brought offers which would entail him already substantial profits, but Mr. Kennedy has no intention of disposing of them in this manner, as yet.

The New England Tea Was A Great Success

The New England tea held by the ladies of All Saints' congregation last night was a decided success in every way. After the tea, the assembly went upstairs and heard the concert, under the efficient direction of Mr. Geo. Chandler, the choir master. Master Cyril Devey, the church organist, was at the piano.

The following programme was rendered with distinct success.

Piano Solo—Il Trovatore (Dorn) Mr. Cyril Devey; melody in F. (Rubenstein.

Quartette—The Bank of Allan Water, Messrs. Barling, Downs, Brown and Chandler.

Solo—Mr. Herb. Rush.

Piano Duet— The Misses Lee and Stark.

Solo—Mr. Geo. Brown.

Solo—Mr. H. Rush.

Quartette—Banish O' Maiden.

One of the features of the evening was the quartettes rendered by four male members of the choir. They were quite tuneful, both being encored.

Canon Davidson was chairman, assisted by Mr. F. Dawson. Rev. Davidson was well received. He spoke of the good work of the Women's Auxiliary in the past and commended them on their effort this evening to pay off the debt on the surplices.

Mr. Chandler then spoke a few words, after which the meeting closed with the national anthem.

SCIENCE "RUSH" AT QUEEN'S

Special to The Examiner.

KINGSTON, OCT. 14.—The Science "rush" at Queen's University took place this morning between 10 and 11 o'clock. The sophmore year was much the stronger and had little difficulty in tieing up the freshmen, though some of the new students were particularly good fighters.

After painting their faces with the college colours and upsetting a package of flour on each one's head the sophs' loaded them on waggons decorated with such banners as "Friday the 13th, you know it now"; "Specimens of science freshmen captured at Queen's—perfectly harmless" and "What would the girls back home think of him now," and drove them around the city for an hour.

The Arts rush is expected at the first of the week.

The "Happy Four" At The Royal

Manager Pappas of the Royal Theatre, has booked a superior attraction for the first three days of next week, when the "Happy Four," the well-known coloured male quartette, will be here. These comedy singers have few rivals in their line and they give a programme of merit and enjoyment. The Royal's reputation for good vaudeville will be enhanced by the appearance of "The Happy Four." The price of admission for the three days will be 10c., both afternoons and evenings.

The election of the other officers will be held Monday evening, when the various committees will also be appointed. Everything points to a very prosperous winter's work.

THE RETURN OF THE SHEFFIELD CHOIR AND INCIDENTS OF THE TOUR

An English journal gives the following interesting reference to the return of the Sheffield Choir.

A tour unprecedented in British history came to a close in the early hours of yesterday morning, when the Sheffield Choir landed in London after a journey of about 25,000 miles, during which they gave 137 concerts in Canada, the United States, South Africa, Australia, New Zealand, and the Fiji Islands.

The choir of 200 gave their services and a £60,000 bill was paid by Dr. Charles Harriss, of Montreal, who is believed to have lost money on the tour.

"My idea is the British Empire all the time," Dr. Harriss told an "Express" representative yesterday. "The Colonies spent thousands on immigration, but I got the idea of taking two hundred English folk all round the Empire, letting them see what the Empire really meant, and then bringing them back here and turning them loose to act as Empire agents.

"They are full of it," he added, with a chuckle. "They have taken 10,000 photographs and some of them are going round lecturing on what they have seen. They have a cinematograph film of the trip through South Africa, and they have vivid memories of rousing Anglo-Saxon reunions in a hundred towns all round the world.

Musical Revival.

"It took me years to plan this tour. I went all round the Empire a couple of years ago and fixed it, but nobody seemed to believe I could induce 200 people to give their services for months just to sing to folks at the other end of the earth. But that was my idea—to have a kind of musical imperial revival all round the Empire, to make folks realize the unity of the race through the stirring agency of music.

"Well, we went all round, with the United States thrown in, and governors and governments and mayors and everybody else received us with open arms. In one State in America the House of Representatives vacated their seats for us. At Sydney the acting Prime Minister and members of the Government came out on a steamer to meet us, and ten thousand people stood on the quays. At Capetown the Archbishop conducted an open-air service in the square a couple of hours before we started away, and we sang the "Messiah" to 20,000 people.

"It was the same all round the world. Nobody could do enough for us. In the Fiji Islands, where we called to give them a song, a native prince came to the concert in a dress coat and white front. His hair was a foot high, his legs (apart from short silk trunks) were bare, and he twiddled his toes under his chair, while we sang.

"We tok three nurses from St. Thomas' Hospital to look after possible invalids. One of them was married in South Africa to a man she had nursed during the war. She was the only member of the party we lost.

Dramatic Reunion.

"At one of our concerts in Australia I heard a man suddenly shout, "Minnie, Minnie!" I took no notice but a moment later he yelled 'Alice, Alice!" and then I saw one of the women in the choir sink down fainting.

"She was carried from the platform and the man came round. He was her husband. Several years ago they quarrelled and he disappeared. When the Sheffield Choir arrived in Australia he could not resist going to hear singers from his native place, and in the midst of the concert he lost all control of himself when he saw his sister and his wife before his eyes. That man has come back home, and they are all happy.

"Everywhere we went our singers were received in the best of homes, and many friendships were made and I am sure some of them will go out to the Colonies to live, and the accounts they give at home here will send others.

"And that is what I live and work for," said Dr. Harriss with a burst of enthusiasm only to be expected from one who has lived in one of the Colonies. "It's England all the time," he exclaimed with a rousing thump on the table.

Dr. Harriss, although generally regarded as a Canadian, was born in London in the 'sixties, and went to Canada in 1886. He declared that the Sheffield Choir tour was only an incident in his imperial music campaign. The rest is to come.

FISHING CLUB HAVING ENJOYABLE TIME AT LAKES

The following members of the Ketchecum Lake fishing club are spending some holidays near Westlake's Landing: Ald. Bradburn, Messrs. A. H. Stratton, John Belcher, Henderson Nesbitt, A. E. Peck, T. H. Hooper, Robert Gibbs, Vincent Eastwood, Jack McCarthy, Herb. Stinson, Wm. Boyd of Bobcaygeon, Edwards, of Lindsay; Robert Munro, Robert Stuart, Mr. Dobbie of the C. G. E., R. Denne and H. C. Winch.

The fishing is reported not to be the best, but all the members of the clubs are enjoying a good time. Mr. Eastwood has the distinction of landing the biggest fish, while Mr. Stratton and Ald. Bradburn come next. Mr. McCarthy, however, is considered the best fisherman of the club, as he can land more minnows in five minutes than all the rest put together. The club's regular canoe races are a feature that tends to make the camp famous, not to speak of the numerous swimming races for shore, and the many heroic rescues. Every man is a hero, and if he isn't he is considered an outside member. In short, the Club is having one of the most enjoyable times it has had for many a long season, and the men regret that the time is getting near when they must vacate their fishing quarters. Mr. Roland Denne, who has been spending the last week with the Club, has returned home, after enjoying a week of continuous pleasure.

OBITUARY

GERTRUDE M. PUFFER.

The death of Gertrude Madeline, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Puffer, a bright little child of six months and ten days, occurred at their home in this city on Friday, Oct. 6th, 1911, after a three days' illness of bronchi pneumonia.

The sad news was sent by wire to friends in Minden, the former home of the bereft parents, where Mr Puffer's father and mother still reside and arrangements were made for the funeral to take place from the residence of Mr. and Mrs. L. Pringle Lochlin, on Sunday morning.

The funeral service was in charge of the Captain of the Salvation Army, assisted by Mr. Geo. Puffer, grandfather of the child, after which interment took place at Ingoldsby cemetery.

The bereft father and mother accompanied by two children, made a brief call on friends at Lochlin and Minden, returning to Peterborough on Wednesday morning.

The following lines were dedicated by a friend, to the departed:

When we see a precious blossom,
That we've tended with such care
Ruddely taken from our bosom,
How our aching hearts despair.

Round its little grave we linger,
Till the setting sun is low,
Feeling all our hopes have perished
In the flower we cherished so.

WHOOPING COUGH

Mrs. Charles Lovell, Agassiz, B.C. writes: "Seven of our nine children had whooping cough the same winter and we attribute their cure to Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine. We alway have it in the house, and recommend it as the king of all medicines. I was for merly completely cured of protrudin piles by using Dr. Chase's Ointment."

AN EXCITING RUNAWAY

A disastrous runaway was narrowly averted by the prompt action of George Donaldson, a south end resident, when a pair of spirited horses, driven by a Smith farmer, were coming down Water street to-day at noon, and a bridle on one of the animals dropped off, causing them to bolt. A couple of pedestrians barely sidestepped in time to avoid the oncoming rush of the maddened brutes, but their flight was short lived. At the corner of Water and King streets they were checked by George Donaldson, who at considerable risk, grabbed the bit of the nearest horse, and with the assistance of the driver, who had retained his position on the rig, succeeded in bringing the horses to a standstill. No damage was done to the outfit.

MISSION BAND RE-ORGANIZED

An interesting event took place in the George street Methodist Sunday school room last evening when the Mission Band was re-organized and new officers elected. After wards the members of the Mission Band and of the Mission Circle were entertained at tea by the Women's Missionary Society. A pleasant social hour was spent. The prospects before the Mission Band are very bright. The Band has chosen capable officers, in Miss Lillian Hill, Miss Aggie Davis, Miss Gertrude Allison and Miss Payne.

Manuel and Miguel Will Compete for the Throne of Portugal

CHANCES VERY SLIM

Lisbon, (via frontier) Oct. 14.—It is reported here that a part of the Royalist command left Serra da Corda and retreated across the border into Spain, where they were reinforced and again re-entered Portugal. The reinforced column aggregates about 2,500 men. A newspaper here says the Royalists are armed with Kropatschek, Mauser and Remington rifles, and that there are about 4,000 of them along the Spanish-Portuguese frontier. The newspaper says, however, that they seem greatly disheartened.

It is rumored that a fight took place Thursday night in which the Royalists sustained heavy losses and were forced to retreat. Details of this engagement are not yet obtainable here.

The Republicans have four batteries of heavy artillery at Serra da Pilar, and much surprise has been caused by their never being brought into action against the Monarchists. The newspaper Novivades says a document has been discovered which shows that the Monarchists distributed $80,000 among the artillerymen with the proviso that they should not be fired upon. This statement has caused a sensation here and the Government has started an enquiry.

It has been ascertained that Captain Couciere, the leader of the Royalists, has made another appeal to the Brazilian Monarchists for $2,500,000 which he says is necessary for the purchase of additional arms, ammunition and provisions.

It is now known that a secret arrangement exists between ex-King Manuel and the pretender of the throne, Dom Miguel of Braganza, whereby, if the Monarchists are victorious, general elections shall be held throughout Portugal to decide whether Manuel or Dom Miguel shall be king. In case Manuel is chosen, the decree banishing Dom Miguel's family will be revoked and this entire family will return to Portugal as royal princes and receive an aggregate of $100,000 annually.

Moreover, in case of the death of Manuel, it has been agreed that his uncle, the Duke of Oporto, being childless, the eldest son of Dom Miguel, Prince Miguel of Braganza, who married Anita Stewart of New York, shall succeed to the throne. A further provision of the agreement is that if Dom Miguel is elected king, a heavy indemnity shall be paid to Manuel.

According to the latest advices, however, neither party to the agreement apparently has much chance of success, as the Republican form of government seems firmly implanted in Portugal.

Herpicide is free from grease, does not stain or dye and possesses an exceedingly delicate and pleasing odour.

Newbro's Herpicide is just the sort of a preparation that always appeals to a lady of refinement and cultured tastes. There is nothing that can take its place. There is nothing just like it or "just as good."

Nothing In It.

Montreal, Oct. 14.—The report cabled from London that the Canadian Pacific Railway will operate a steamship service between Rotterdam and Boston was absolutely denied yesterday by Mr. Bosworth, fourth vice-president of the C.P.R. Mr. Bosworth said: "I have no knowledge whatsoever of any such service." He was asked: "Has this any bearing on an Antwerp-Boston line?" He said: "I say officially I have never heard of it."

Side of Island Blows Off.

Seward, Alaska, Oct. 14.—There have been three different eruptions of Bogoslof, the celebrated Aleutian volcano, this season. Deputy U. S. Marshal Hastings of Unalaska, who arrived here yesterday, passed Bogoslof on Sept. 10. Bogoslof is noticed to have completely changed its physical appearance. There was no longer a boiling lake in the centre. Its place was a bay of cold water, the side of the island having been blown off.

Japan to Intervene?

CHINA IS ALARMED

Government Sending Out Troops Against the Revolutionists

CRISIS IS AT HAND

Pekin, Oct. 14.—China to-day faces an unprecedented crisis. With the spread of revolutionary activity the opinion is gaining ground that the fate of the ruling dynasty hangs in the balance. The revolution is no longer confined to the central provinces, a thousand miles away from the capital. Pekin itself is threatened. Members of the Cabinet admitted yesterday that the garrison here are known to be honeycombed with the revolutionary sentiment. The same condition exists in the two great military posts which guard the capital, Pao Ting Fu and Tien Tsin.

Yesterday's news included reports that Chung King was in danger, that I-Chang had been taken, that Yo-Chow had fallen, and that communication between Hankow and Chang-Sha, the capital of Hunan Province, was interrupted.

The revolutionary army is strongly entrenched in Wu Chang and Han Yang with guns mounted in commanding positions.

Eight train loads of troops yesterday started from Pas-Ting-Fu, Province of Chi-Li, for the affected district.

The revolutionists have informed the mission schools at Hankow that they will respect all treaties and loans and indemnities contracted by the Chinese Government.

All the available railway cars are carrying to the south troops who will be used first to guard the line and thereafter in an attempt to recapture the towns taken by the revolutionists.

It is reported that the rebels yesterday allowed the weekly express to leave Hankow crowded with refugees. It is believed the rebels found over a million dollars of Mexican money when they raided the treasury at Hankow, and also obtained half a million dollars in the same coin from the Hankow merchants.

A well-informed revolutionary sympathizer told the Associated Press last night that the rebels probably would leave the capture of Pekin and Shanghai to the last, because of the danger of foreign complications. He said the utmost confidence seems to prevail among the rebels. It is stated that they have been two years in perfecting their negotiations and now have members in all the Government offices.

The National Assembly showed revolutionary tendencies last winter, and the reassembling of that body in a fortnight is regarded with anxiety. The provincial assemblies almost without exception are anti-government.

Rebels Unable to Keep Order.

Hankow, Oct. 14.—The rebels have been unable to maintain order, and business has been completely suspended here and at Hank-Yang and Wu Chang. The working classes are without employment and are attempting to plunder. Fully a half-million persons have fled to the countryside.

It is reliably reported that rebels are proceeding northward to meet the imperial troops and that a thousand troops in the Province of Honan, adjoining the disaffected Province of Hu-Peh, on the north, also are prepared to resist the imperials.

Thrown From Wagon.

Hamilton, Oct. 14.—Instant death from a broken neck was the fate which befell Edward Cooper when the team which he was driving ran away and threw him from his wagon at the corner of Burlington street and Ferguson avenue, about five o'clock yesterday afternoon. Cooper was driving along Ferguson avenue when his horses became frightened, and in their mad flight caused the empty wagon to collide with the fountain at the corner of Burlington street. The unfortunate man was hurled violently to the ground, and was dead when picked up.

Spanish Losses In Morocco.

Madrid, Oct. 14.—The Moors in the Riff country are attacking the Spaniards at every opportunity, usually sustaining losses greatly in excess of those inflicted. The Moors assaulted the camps at Imarufen, and Izhafen on the night of Oct. 10. They left 30 dead on the field. Two of the Spanish soldiers were wounded.

El Correo, however, publishes a letter from its correspondent at Melilla, Morocco, in which the losses to the Spaniards in the fight of Oct. 7, are estimated at 400 dead and wounded.

Not Dead Yet.

Chicago, Oct. 14.—While being carried into an undertaking establishment on the west side, David Easley, 35 years of age, of La Grange, Ill., who was thought to be dead, suddenly regained consciousness and shouted, "Take me out of here, I'm not going to die yet." He was taken to a hospital for treatment and may recover from injuries received when he was struck on the head with a rifle while quarreling with Roscoe Holtz over a woman, to whom both men had been showing attention.

Major MacLaren Killed.

Barrie, Oct. 14.—Dr. W. D. MacLaren, major of "A" Squadron of the Mississauga Light Horse, was thrown from his horse on his way in from attending a gathering at Major Sneath's in Vespra, about 1.30 Thursday night. A small bruise on the head produced concussion of the brain, which ended fatally at 7.30 yesterday morning.

Killed at Battleford.

Guelph, Oct. 14.—Conductor William Herbert of Guelph, who runs on the G. T. R. between Guelph and Hamburg, received a telegram yesterday stating that his brother, E. E. Herbert, had been killed at North Battleford, Sask., on Thursday.

Canada Made an Offer.

Manchester, Oct. 14.—Prof. Hewins, an ardent tariff reformer, says that the opponents of tariff reform have constantly said that the colonies made no offer. Well, now, there was an offer, in the voice of the Canadian people, and the present Government had no authority to reject reciprocal preference because the subject was not before the electors of Britain at the last election.

The Guardian, in mentioning this declaration, asks Hewins, when and where did the victorious Canadians make the offer and asks what Hewins thinks of the inclusion in the Canadian Government of a statesman opposed to Borden's Imperial policy, and also of Laurier's modified policy?

Banquet to Hon. Mr. King.

Berlin, Ont., Oct. 14.—The Liberals of North Waterloo will tender Hon. Mackenzie King, ex-Minister of Labor, a complimentary banquet in the Masonic Hall here next Thursday evening, Oct. 19. Addresses will be delivered by Hon. Mr. King, Rev. B. H. Stauffer, Toronto, and others.

No Jurors Selected Yet.

Los Angeles, Oct. 14.—After two days of court session in the trial of James B. McNamara for the murder of Charles J. Haggerty, a victim of The Los Angeles Times' explosion and fire on Oct. 1, 1910, no juror had been selected even tentatively last night and no decision had been reached as to the eligibility of the first talesman examined. Although court proceedings moved forward without interruption, the magnitude of issues involved in the examination of Z. T. Nelson, the first talesman, made proceeding deliberate.

At sunset, when court adjourned, arguments on Mr Nelson's status remained unfinished.

A provision of the constitution of the state, differing somewhat from the constitution of the United States, sections of the penal code regarding the qualifications of jurors, and a contest over the meaning of the record of Nelson's examination, cohoned to furnish points of conflict which affect not alone the talesman under examination but every prospective juror, and for this reason were stubbornly contested.

New Brunswick's Lieutenant-Governor

Ottawa, Oct. 14.—The office of Lieutenant-Governor of New Brunswick becomes vacant on March 1 next, and it is now certain that the appointment will go either to Dr. Daniel or Senator Wood.

Dr. Daniel steps aside to provide Hon. J. D. Hazen a seat in St. John, and in the event of Senator Wood accepting the position, he will go to the Red Chamber. There is also some talk of appointing Mr. C. A. Magrath Lieutenant-Governor of Alberta when the present occupant, Hon. Mr. Bulyea, steps out. Mr. Magrath was defeated in the constituency of Medicine Hat at the recent elections, and would undoubtedly have found a seat in the Cabinet had he been successful.

There may be a meeting of the Cabinet after the ceremonies to-day in connection with the arrival of the Duke of Connaught, but it is likely to go over until Monday. The Treasury Board is to meet on Monday, and one of the matters to be dealt with is the issue of the certificate giving running rights to the Banque Internationale du Canada.

DUKE TAKES THE OATH

Is Sworn Into Office at the Quebec Parliament Buildings

A CORDIAL WELCOME

Quebec, Oct. 14.—Amid the cheering of the hospitably minded citizens of the ancient capital, Canada's royal Governor-General, the Duke of Connaught, accompanied by the duchess, landed yesterday at the King's Wharf, and, preceded by a mounted guard, passed through bunting bedecked streets to the Parliament buildings, where the ceremony of administering the oath of office to His Royal Highness was held.

The scene was an impressive one.

Seated round the table in the Legislative Council Chamber were Hon. R. L. Borden and the members of the Dominion Cabinet. On the right of the dias was seated the Lieutenant-Governor of Quebec, and on the other side were the judges of the Supreme Court in their robes of office.

On the entry of Their Royal Highnesses, Mrs. Borden advanced and presented the duchess with a magnificent bouquet.

The commission of appointment was read by Lieut.-Col. Lowther.

At the completion of the installation, the guns of the citadel thundered out a royal salute, and the band played the National Anthem.

Addresses of welcome were read by the Lieutenant-Governor, and the mayor of Quebec, the duke replying briefly.

The duke's message to the people was brief. He said:

"For myself personally I have only one wish, and that is to serve Canada, to make myself at home in this country, and to do all I can to promote its best interests, and also to promote that connection to the Empire which I think of such importance to Canada."

An unfortunate accident occurred as Their Royal Highnesses were driving from the Parliament Buildings to the Citadel after the installation. Turning the corner just through the St. Louis gate, the horse of Trooper George Snape of the Royal Canadian Dragoons, who formed the escort, slipped on the [illegible] pavement and fell, throwing Snape to the ground. The horse next him also fell. Snape was picked up and carried into the Garrison Club. These were the horses immediately in front of the carriage bearing the duke and duchess. The quick action of Captain Douglas Young, who commanded the escort, and who rode up and helped to get them out of the way prevented Their Royal Highnesses' carriage being delayed.

Then the royal party passed to the Chateau Frontenac, where they were entertained at luncheon by the Dominion Government.

In the evening a dinner at Government House was followed by a reception at the Parliament Buildings, after which, preceded by a mounted escort, the duke and duchess left for the C.P.R. station, where they boarded the special train that is to bear them to the capital of the Dominion.

As Their Royal Highnesses passed down the street to the station, there were displays of fireworks and crowds of people assembled all along the route to give the vice-regal party a greeting.

The new company announces that it is its intention to extend its plants and to enlarge both its domestic and export business.

Close of Navigation.

Montreal, Oct. 14.—The close of the present season of navigation was heralded yesterday morning by the announcement made by the Montreal Transportation Co. that no more of their grain steamers would come to Montreal this year. Grain brought down from Fort William to Kingston will be shipped to this port by barge, the regular boats all being employed in moving the season's harvest from the head of the great lakes to the Granite City.

Died While Out Hunting.

North Bay, Oct. 14.—Gerald G. Thompson, a prominent young merchant of North Bay, died suddenly from peritonitis, while hunting at the west arm of Lake Nipissing yesterday. The hunting camp was practically isolated, so that when Mr Thompson was taken ill no medical attention was available in time to save his life. He leaves a wife and two children.

WOMEN IN CHURCHES.

Their Work Is Discussed By the Ecumenical Conference.

Toronto, Oct. 14.—Yesterday afternoon was indeed women's day with the Methodist Ecumenical Conference, and the able manner in which Mrs. W. T. Haven of the Methodist Episcopal Church presided, indicated the power which is possible in women of Methodism when put to the test. The firmness with which Mrs. Haven rapped the delegates down when out of order and the tact she used in recognizing those entitled to speak on the topic of the afternoon, "Woman's Claims and Responsibilities," won admiration.

In speaking on "Methodism and the Woman's Movement," Mrs. J. Johnson of London, England, maintained that men and women were still in the process of making, and they were far from perfect. She said the talk of women not occupying important places in the world's affairs was nonsense.

"Men cannot advance without women," she said, "neither can women advance without men."

She said there was a wind coming up in the west, whistling woman's suffrage, and it would eventually sweep everything before it. The speaker said women were superior to men in detecting emotion and character in church work, which was invaluable in saving souls.

Mrs. T. J. Copeland, speaking on behalf of Miss Belle Bennett, on "Woman and Missions," said: "We women of the Methodist Episcopal Church are looking towards the rising sun. It is in the eastern uncivilized countries, where women are showing their worth in church work as missionaries."

On the subject of "Deaconesses and Sisterhoods, Mrs. Lucy Rider Meyer of the Methodist Episcopal Church, told of the great work of the deaconesses nurses. Last year, according to Mrs. Meyer, 16,461 sick and maimed persons unable to help themselves were taken care of by the nurses."

Shock of Earthquake Slight.

Toronto, Oct. 14.—The earthquake which occurred last night in the Gulf of Mexico began at 10.08 o'clock, according to the local observatory record, and gave only a slight shock at this distance. The disturbance took place underneath the water of the Gulf and caused a tidal wave which rolled up 20 feet high and destroyed the towns of San Jose, Guaymas, Eycalama and Iratis. Seventeen ships in Guaymas were also destroyed with nearly all the inhabitants.

SAVED HERSELF YEARS OF PAIN

If She Had Used Dodd's Kidney Pills First

Mrs McRea suffered for over two years, then two boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills made a new woman of her.

Previl, Gaspe Co., Que., Oct. 13.—(Special)—That she might have escaped two years and seven months of suffering had she tried Dodd's Kidney Pills in the first place is the firm conviction of Mrs. John McRea, an old and respected resident of this place. And this is the reason she gives for believing so:

"For two years and seven months I was a sufferer from Kidney Disease brought on by a strain and a cold. My eyes were puffed and swollen, my muscles cramped and I suffered from neuralgia and Rheumatism. My back ached and I had pains in my joints.

"For two years I was under the doctor's care but he never seemed to do me any lasting good. Two boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills made a new woman of me."

To save yourself suffering cure your Kidneys at the first sign of trouble Dodd's Kidney Pills are the one sure cure.

MACK'S TRUMP CARDS

Connie Mack will pitch Chief Bender (Albert) in the first game of the big series. The Indian has been resting up especially for this game, and will carry a heap of Philadelphia money in the initial performance. Bender first saw the light of day in Brainard, Minn., May 5, 1883. He is a graduate of the Carlisle Indian School and Dickinson College. Although he measures 6 feet 2 inches, he weighs only 180 pounds. In the spring of 1902 he signed with the Harrisburg Athletic Club, and made such a record that Connie Mack signed him early in 1903 for the Athletics. He did good work in 1904; but was greatly handicapped by sickness. An operation for appendicitis put him in shape for better work in 1905, but in mid-season he was laid up with kidney trouble. Later he recovered and did brilliant work, and won the deciding game of the American League race from Washington two days from the close. He pitched the Athletics to their only victory over the Giants for the 1905 world's title, shutting out the New Yorkers. In 1906 Chief Bender won 15 games and lost 10; in 1907 he won 16 and lost 8; in 1908 he won 8 and lost 8; in 1909 he won 8 and lost 9; in 1.909 he won 13 and lost 8; in 1910 he won 23 and lost 6; in 1911 (to date) he has won 17 and lost 6. And since he is in fine shape, Mack expects him to win.

Jack Coombs (John Wesley), the hero of last year's championship series, who ,with Bender will do again the bulk of the Athletics twirling, hails from Portland, Maine, where he was born in 1881. He is 6 feet 1 inch and tips the beam at 197 pounds. He first became known as a pitcher in 1902 when he established a fine record at Colby College. He pitched for the Varsity team until the end of the 1905 season, when Connie Mack secured his services. He did not report to the Philadelpia Club until 1906, however, His first year with the Athletics saw him pitch that famous 24-inning game against Boston, which Coombs won 4 to 1. That feat stamped him as a wonder, but later he fell short of expectations, and for a whole season Mack tried to make an outfielder of him. The next year he started in pitching again, but was never a bearcat until last season. when he and Bender won the pennant and then the championship for the Athletics. During the 1910 season he went 53 innings at one stretch without letting an opposing club score on him. His full record since joining the clan of Mack is as follows: In 1906, won 10 and lost 11: in 1907, won 6 and lost 9; in 1908, won 7 and lost 5; in 1909, won 12 and lost 11; in 1910, won 30 and lost 9. and up to present date this year he has won 27 and lost 11.

Local Club In Tankard Group

(Lindsay Warder.)

In the proposed plan for the tankard grouping of the clubs which the executive of the Ontario Curling Association will consider, Lindsay is mentioned in group 2 in the Ontario Tankard Competition, which is to be played at Lindsay. The other clubs in the group are Fenelon Falls, Peterborough, Campbellford, Port Hope, Bobcaygeon, Cannington. Umpire, Mr. J. D. Flavelle, of Lindsay.

The District Cup Competition for this district may be played off at Peterborough, with the follwing clubs competing: Cannington, Peterborough, Keene, Lindsay, Fenelon Falls, Bobcaygeon, Port Hope, Campbellford. Umpire, R. M. Waddell, of Peterborough.

RUGBY

Peterborough has two representatives on the Ottawa College football team to-day, Dick Sheehy playing full back and Frank Heffernan right half. The number will likely be increased next week, as the Ottawa papers say that Vernie Hayes is sure of a place. He is not eligible this week but will be all right next Saturday. He is playing on the half line of Ottawa College Seconds this afternoon against Renfrew Collegiate.

Dr. McPherson is refereeing this afternoon's game between Toronto Central Y.M.C.A. and Peterborough West Ends at Riverside Park.

WILL DIE GAME

Murderer Beattie, If Necessary, Would Turn on the Current

RICHMOND, VA., OCT 14.—Henry Clay Beattie, Jr., the convicted slayer of his wife, is determined to die game and indignantly scouts the rport strad some time ago that he would cheat the electric chair by committing suicide. The papers appealing his case are all ready and early next month the Supreme Court will be asked to grant a new trial upon the strength of the exceptions made by his lawyers. Beattie is under sentence to die November 24.

Would Turn Switch Himself.

The other day Beattie was visited by his particular friend, William Sampson, who was one of the witnesses at the trial. Beattie felt hurt that anyone should have thought that he would not die game. "I'll show them," he said to Sampson "how a man should die if that is what they are waiting for. The electric chair. bah! Why, what's that? Nothing. I tell you. If the lever on the switchboard is near enough to me I'll turn on the current myself.

"When a man has got to die, let him die like a man, without a whimper; but there's the Supreme Court. It has still got to act on this case before everything is over."

FUNERAL NOTICE

The funeral of the late Richard Milburn, who met death in the Otonabee yesterday, will take place from the deceased's late residence, 265 Lake street, at 2 o'clock on Tuesday afternoon to the Little Lake cemetery.

WON BET OF $20

A bet of unusual interest was won by a local mill manager from a traveller in the bar of a local hotel this afternoon. The two men had been betting on the world's series games, and A bet $20 that B. could not go and get $20 in twenty minutes and be back in the barroom. A. bolted and in considerably less than ten minutes was back in the barroom with $50 and the cash was handed over to him.

TO WED HIS WARD

Brooklyn Millionaire, Twice Divorced, to Take a Third Wife

BROOKLYN, N.Y., NOV. 14.—One of the well known belles of Brooklyn is Miss Marie Winthrop, who is noted as a dog fancier and who has gained many prizes at exhibitions in the eastern states. She is the ward of Thomas Monroe Turner, a millionaire of the metropolis, and within a short time, it is announced, she will become his wife.

The venture will be the third for Turner. His first wife secured a divorce, and to show his satisfaction with the decree he eloped with his second spouse .The second marriage was as unsatisfactory as the first had been and wife No. 2 soon secured her freedom in the divorce mill. What will be the outcome of the third venture it is impossible to say, but it is hard to regard the auspices as favourable to marital bliss.

Expensive Tastes.

No jewel fair
With wondrous glow
To envy moves my heart.
The colors rare
Its prisms show
No vain ambitious start.
Though radiant gleams
Through it may stir,
'Tis but a scant device.
When August steams
I much prefer
A simple chunk of ice.

Ethics of Visiting.

The two children were playing in the yard at the home of Constance. She remembered the teaching of her parents, but she wished to play a certain game, and Taylor desired to play another game.

"You ought to play my game," said Taylor, "because I'm your visitor, and you ought to do what I want to do."

Constance realized the truth of this, yet she did not wish to give in to her little friend.

"Let's go over to your house, Taylor," she said.—Indianapolis News.

AN UNLUCKY DAY

Accidents Are Rife In Toronto on Friday the 13th.

Toronto, Oct. 14.—Yesterday was Friday, the 13th, and it preserved its reputation for calamity with a long list of deaths from misadventure and several serious accidents were tallied during the day.

Baby Dick, aged 21-2 years, was playing in the roadway on Manning avenue, near Barton street, and ran in front of a newspaper delivery motor car. He was struck down and instantly killed. His father is J. Dick, of 778 Manning avenue. His parents and other witnesses of the accident joined in saying that the driver was blameless in the matter, and could in no way have prevented the accident.

Despite the plucky efforts of her fourteen-year-old son to save her when her clothing caught fire from the explosion of a can of coil oil with which she was trying to liven a fire in her home at 166 Christie street early yesterday morning, Mrs. Esther Fish died at three o'clock in the afternoon at the Western Hospital, where she had been taken in the police ambulance. When the mother, who was clad only in her night robe, found that the garment was in flames, the lad rushed out and poured a quantity of water over her, but by this time it was almost consumed and the woman's body was so severely burned that she died.

Andrew Culverwell, who was struck by a Dupont street car in Yonge street, near Agnes street, Wednesday evening, sustaining a fracture of the skull, died at St. Michael's Hospital last night. An inquest will be opened this afternoon.

The body of a man believed to be that of J. G. Galbraith of Port Hope, Ont, was picked up on a pile of earth on the bay shore at the foot of John street early yesterday morning. He wore a masonic emblem in his coat.

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES.

Morris Irwin, a G. T. R. brakeman, was fatally crushed between cars at Guelph.

The Toronto Public Library Board has refused to open the buildings on Sundays.

The Ontario Government may appoint a commission to develop the clay belt in north Ontario.

Joseph B. Blackburn, an aged resident of Chatham, committed suicide by swallowing carbolic acid.

A large banquet was tendered the Ecumenical Conference delegates by the Methodist Social Union in Toronto.

The police are out with a big stick after street loafers in Kingston. Magistrate Farrell has promised that everyone found guilty will be fined $5.

Magistrate Bell of Woodstock sentenced John Falconer, a young Scotchman, to six months in the Central Prison with ten lashes for criminal assault.

A disastrous fire occurred on the farm of James Bell, four miles from Markdale, completely destroying his large barn and stables and several valuable animals.

First Petition In.

Toronto, Oct. 14.—At one o'clock yesterday afternoon the first protest arising from the elections of Sept. 21st was filed with the Senior Registrar at Osgoode Hall by E. .B Ryckman, K.C.

The petition is that of Alexander McCall, lumberman, of Simcoe, the defeated Conservative candidate in Norfolk, and it is lodged against William A. Charlton, lumberman, of Toronto, his successful opponent.

With the usual circumlocution of election petitions under the Controverted Elections Act, Mr. McCall insinuates that the return of Mr. Charlton was not the expression of the free and untrammelled voice of the independent electors. In fact he goes further, and charges Mr. Charlton and his agents with bribery; treating, personation, intimidation, undue influence, and corrupt practices. He insinuates that the result of the election was not won by the merits of reciprocity, but by the promise of money, office, and such inducements to the voters to vote or refrain from voting.

Suffragists Jubilant.

New York, Oct. 14.—The National headquarters of the Woman's Suffrage organizations are in gala dress over the news of the victory in California.

Unquestionably the strongest element in San Francisco and Oakland, which gave a majority of 16,000 against suffrage, in opposition to suffrage was the saloon. In the country, granges and other farmers' organisations endorsed suffrage, and much to the surprise of the politicians the farmers went to the polls. Instead of the light vote that was expected the vote in the country was heavier than in the city. . .

LOYALLY RECEIVED

Duke and Duchess of Connaught Are Given Enthusiastic Reception by People of Ottawa

ADDRESSES OF WELCOME

Ottawa, Oct. 16.—Ottawa Saturday afternoon gave a great welcome to the Duke of Connaught. Parliament Hill was resplendent in red, white and blue flags, bannerets and bunting. The weather was ideal and an immense crowd witnessed the reception.

His Royal Highness arrived by special train from Quebec at 2.15, the special having been held at Buckingham in order that the civic arrangements might not be upset. The journey was made by way of the north shore, the train crossing through Hull and pulling into the Broad street station.

A military band at the station played the National Anthem as the train came in, while a royal salute was fired from Primrose Hill. The vice-regal party were met by Hon. R. L. Borden and members of the Dominion Government.

The duke's own carriage, a gorgeous vehicle, in black and red and gold, drawn by four horses, was waiting for him, with a guard of the Princess Louise Dragoons. Two big motor cars from Rideau Hall took the duke's suite and the procession started for Parliament Hill.

The reception took place immediately in front of the main block of the Parliament Buildings, on a platform erected on the main walk.

At 2.30 the cheering of the crowd announced the approach of His Royal Highness. The band played the National Anthem and a guard of the 43rd Regiment presented arms. The duke, attended by his staff, inspected the guard and then proceeded to the platform, where addresses of welcome were presented by the City of Ottawa, St. George's Society, St. Andrew's Society, St. Jean Baptiste, St. Patrick, Overseas Club, and others.

On the platform with the Governor-General and staff were: The Prime Minister, Hon. R. L. Borden, and his colleagues; Sir Wilfrid Laurier and several members of the former Government; Chief Justice Sir Charles Fitzpatrick and judges of the Supreme Court, and a host of lesser officials.

In replying to the address of the City Council, His Royal Highness said:

"Gentlemen: In the name of the duchess, as well as my own, I thank you for your loyal address of welcome. In coming once more to make my home among you, I am inspired by a feeling of pleasure at renewing the associations of my youth, as well as with one of wonder at the great development which has been achieved since my last visit to Canada, twenty-one years ago. I take this opportunity of making reference to my predecessor, Earl Grey, and of saying how fully I realize the difficulty of succeeding one who had so completely identified himself with your joys and sorrows and by his long residence amongst you had become a most enthusiastic Canadian. I know with what regret he left you, and how his sympathy and affection will remain with Canada till the end of his days.

"You have referred to my having taken part in military operations within the Dominion some forty years ago. I congratulate you on the fact that ever since then a succession of wise and thoughtful Governments have as the result of their deliberations here in Ottawa kept this great Dominion clear of any similar menace to peace and progress.

"You have recently passed through the throes of a general election, in which both sides have been animated by a common desire for the benefit of their country and a momentous decision has been arrived at by the electorate. I pray that this decision and such others, as may from time to time be made by the nation, may all—under the blessing of Providence—be to the advantage of Canada and the British Empire. That your progress may continue throughout this your twentieth century, is my most heartfelt wish and hope."

In replying to the address of St. George's Society, the duke said:

"I thank you in the name of the Duchess of Connaught, as well as in my own, for your loyal address of welcome. It is a real pleasure to me to be welcomed here by so great and important a branch of your famous society. Such a society as yours has the very gratest value, not only to those permanently resident in the Dominion, for whom it presents a means of maintaining their connection with the old country, but also to the settler, the newcomer. Many of these are indebted to you for the valuable advice and discreet help which you dispense so wisely, and it is my earnest wish that you may continue to flourish in the future as you have in the past."

In replying to the address given by the officials of the St. Patrick's Literary and Scientific Association, His Royal Highness said:

"I thank you for your address of welcome, the graceful terms of which are characteristic of the Irish race, and I shall have the greatest pleasure in informing the King of your loyal expressions of devotion to his person and crown.

"I congratulate you on the progress of your association, and on your ideal of fostering the national spirit in a people, which has given so many noble sons to the Empire.

"As your association said ten years ago in an address presented His Majesty: 'Each visit from a member of the royal family finds our people more numerous and prosperous.'

"True as the statement then was, it is doubly true to-day and with this constant augmentation of the population, the self-imposed duties of societies such as yours are heavily increased. Your services, freely given, are deeply valued and appreciated by those who benefit thereby.

"I am glad, in replying to your address to renew here on Canadian soil my relations with Ireland and the Irish, with whom I have been so constantly, and so intimately associated, and for whom I retain such a warm corner in my heart."

SIX GAS VICTIMS

Inmates of West Toronto Hotel Are Asphyxiated—Woman Loses Her Life From Same Cause

WERE FOUND DEAD

Toronto, Oct. 16.—Six bodies are lying in the morgue, the life of each having been snuffed out through suffocation by gas. Five men were asphyxiated early Sunday morning in the Occidental Hotel, Dundas street, West Toronto. The other body is that of a woman who was found dead in her bed at 13 Walton street, on Saturday evening, she having been a victim of the deadly fumes.

George H. Knowles, aged 40, single, employed by Gurney Foundry Co.

Samuel Eadie, aged 30, single, employed by Heintzman Piano Co.

George Williams, aged 45, single, employed by Heintzman Piano Co.

William Downes, aged 36, single, employed by Canada Cycle & Motor Co.

William Allan, aged 60, married, harnessmaker.

Mrs. Mary Maddens, aged 50, 13 Walton street.

The bodies of Knowles, Eadie and Williams were found within a few feet of each other, the two first named being discovered lifeless on a bed, while Downs was lying in a heap near the door. They were fully dressed and apparently had dropped off to sleep while in a state of stuper. It is believed that Downes had come to his senses for a moment and tried to make exit, but was over come before he could reach the door.

Allan was in the next room and in bed. The two rooms were separated by a short hall, from which a door led into the main hall. Allan had left his door open when he went to bed at 10.30 p.m. The others came in after midnight, lit a lamp in Allan's room and the two jets in their own apartment, and, somehow, a third nipple, which was for the purpose of running a tube to a gas heater, was also turned on, but not lighted.

That the men had been drinking appears certain, as they had received their pay on Friday night and had not afterwards been seen around the hotel until their lifeless forms were discovered yesterday morning.

At midnight on Saturday Fred. McKewan, the proprietor, made his last round and found everything in proper order. When on the top flat he noticed Allan's door open, and looking in to see if all was right, noticed the elderly gentleman sleeping. He turned the gas in the hall out and retired.

Later the four other men returned and at three o'clock Bert Patterson, whose room is on the opposite side of the hall and directly opposite where the bodies were found, smelled gas and rose from his bed and went into the hall to see if by any chance the gas jet there had been turned on. He found the gas in the hall properly turned off and would have opened the door leading to the room occupied by the five men, but heard them talking in a tone, which, he said, betrayed their intoxicated condition and not wishing to thrust himself into their company, went back to bed, but first opened his dormitory window.

About seven o'clock Geo. Williams was washing in the main hall.

About seven o'clock William Vancey, a C.P.R. fireman, returned to the hotel from his work and on reaching the top flat at once perceived gas.

With that he started in search of the leak. In a moment he burst open the door leading to the hall connecting the two rooms. Bruce followed. Turning to their right they opened another door and Vancey took a step forward, but stumbled over the dead body of Downes, who was lying in a heap a foot from the entrance.

Had it not been that James Moon was picked up by a policeman and taken into No. 6 station for drunkenness, he, too, would probably have been added to the number of dead. He was also closely attached to the other men, and occupied the room next to Allan's. It was customary for him to spend his evenings with the others, and had it not been for his arrest would most likely have been with them on Sunday morning.

The sixth victim of asphyxiation was Mrs. Mary Madden, 13 Walton street, whose body was found on Saturday evening by Mrs. McGuire, 28 St. Patrick street.

There was a strong smell of gas in the room, but the jet had been nearly turned off and there was not apparently sufficient fumes in the room to kill the woman. Others in the house had not noticed the gas.

Emperor Bill's Motive.

Paranaqua, Brazil, Oct. 16.—The promptness of Emperor William in sending a donation of $2,500 to aid the flood sufferers in the State of Santa Catharina is regarded with such significance here. The gift was the subject of a discourse on the Germanization of South Brazil. The speaker was Deputy Correia Freitas, who said that Brazil had had disasters in other states without exciting Emperor William's generosity.

SHORT SESSION LIKELY

Commons Is Expected to Conclude by Christmas.

Ottawa, Oct. 16.—It is more than likely that there will be a short session commencing on or about November 15, and ending before Christmas, Parliament being prorogued then until next autumn.

It had been expected that there would be a session lasting only a month this fall and then another after the holidays. The Cabinet is considering at present crowding all the work into one term.

The new Ministers believe that even a session called after Christmas would hardly give them time to outline a comprehensive legislation program. Of course, with a session lasting only until Christmas, a number of important measures, such as the Banking Act, would have to stand over. The present act would likely be extended again for a year without amendment.

The date of the opening of Parliament and whether there will be one or two sessions will be decided upon next week.

Dr. Roche, the new Secretary of State, left Saturday night for Winnipeg.

Date of Bye-Elections.

Ottawa, Oct. 16.—Within half an hour of attending the reception in his honor on Parliament Hill on Saturday afternoon, the Duke of Connaught signed his first order-in-council at Rideau Hall, fixing the date of the Ministerial bye-elections. Nominations will be on Oct. 27, and polling, if any, on Nov. 3. The outlook is that all the Ministers will be returned without opposition.

At the council meeting held on Saturday, after the return of the Cabinet from Quebec, the change in dates was decided upon.

It's a Toss-Up.

Ottawa, Oct. 16.—Hon. Josiah Wood of Sackville, N.B., was here yesterday, and the question as to whether he or Dr. John Daniel of St. John is to be the new Lieutenant-Governor of New Brunswick is under consideration. If Senator Woods is to be Lieutenant-Governor, Dr. Daniel, who is giving up his seat to Hon. J. D. Hazen, will go to the Upper House.

French-Canadian Speaker.

Ottawa, Oct. 16.—According to custom, the retiring speakers of both houses, Hon. J. K. Kerr and Hon. Charles Marcil, have been gazetted Privy Councillors. It is expected that the new Speaker of the Senate will be Hon. John N. Kirchoffer of Brandon, which will necessitate the selection of a French-Canadian for the Speakership of the Commons.

BACK IN THE FIGHT.

Lloyd-George Prepared to Push Insurance Bill Through.

London, Oct. 16.—Chancellor of the Exchequer Lloyd-George has returned to town, and Saturday started what promises to be the hottest and most arduous fight of his political career. This is his campaign in favor of his national insurance bill, which he himself described as "a measure which would do more to lessen or dissuade human misery than any bill carried by the Legislature since the abolition of the corn laws."

His regular political opponents, who, at the outset, professed to regard the insurance bill as a non-partisan measure, the principle of which was admitted by both sides in Parliament, are utilizing the dissatisfaction, which is undoubtedly widespread, with the details of the bill, to serve their political ends.

The returns issued this week regarding the working of Mr. Lloyd-George's land taxes have provided his opponents with excellent material for attacks on the new bill. Fifteen hundred new officials were appointed to make valuations of landed property. Eleven million valuations were required, of which only 369,000 have been made in the first year. The Unionists ask when will Mr. Lloyd-George's "hen-roosting" at this rate of progress, pay for the cost of collection, and point with triumph to the fact that the undeveloped land tax has so far produced the impressive sum of £1,162. One criticism, which, is backed by the approval of both the Labor and Unionist M.P.'s, is that the benefits of the bill provides could be obtained for 5d. from any well-managed friendly society, whereas under the new bill they cost 9d.

Students Have Riot.

Montreal, Oct. 16.—The class of 1915 brought the annual McGill theatre night to an abrupt and premature but altogether welcome conclusion on Saturday night at His Majesty's Theatre. Half way through the last act of "The Fair Co.," George Ade's musical comedy, a dozen freshmen, tiring of the monotony of riot which had been incessant from the raising of the curtain, clambered upon the stage and started a snake dance in front of the footlights. A swarm of indignant sophomores followed them and the curtain was rung down and the lights snapped off, leaving the representatives of the rival classes fighting for the possession of the stage.

The orchestra struck up the National Anthem and the audience took the hint and left the theatre. A little furniture was broken.

Won't Sit at Trial.

Detroit, Mich., Oct. 16.—A Journal special from Ontonagon says Circuit Judge Cooper has refused to sit at the trial of Miss Laura Stannard, charged with poisoning her husband, Charles Stannard, a wealthy lumberman of Greenland, who died a few months ago.

Taft Breaks Ground.

San Francisco, Oct. 16.—Under conditions that were almost ideal ground was broken here on Saturday for the Panama-Pacific Exposition of 1915, that is to commemorate the opening of the Panama Canal. President Taft with a golden spade lifted the first shovelful of earth from the ground on which the Exposition buildings will be erected, and Mme. Lillian Nordica sang. More than 100,000 persons filled the great stadium in Golden Gate Park to witness the ceremony.

"The Gun Runner"

By ARTHUR STRINGER

"Distances at this time o' night?"

"You heard what I said, didn't you?" cried the defiant McKinnon.

The enraged officer let his glance wander to the woman, who had backed away a little, as near to the door as possible. McKinnon did not move, but he was thinking both hard and fast. He had already seen the look on the other man's face.

"What's this woman doing here?" demanded Captain Yandel.

The long-limbed operator shot up out of his chair angrily at the barb in that thunderous voice. He kept telling himself to keep cool. It was plainly to be seen that he was still untutored in accepting insolence without protest. Yet still again the challenge was flung at him.

"What's this woman doing in this station at this time o' night?"

McKinnon turned slowly about.

"Shall I tell him?" he asked. His voice was so quiet and seemingly self-contained that the woman's first blind panic of fear slipped away from her.

"Yes, tell him," she answered.

The captain strode into the cabin. He stood behind Alicia Boynton, a little to one side; McKinnon, from the operating table, faced the intruder. The tones of his voice as he spoke carried a tacit reproof to his superior, a reproof for the boisterous note that had been thrust upon their quiet and orderly talk.

"This woman is my wife!"

"Your what?" cried the captain.

"This woman is my wife!" repeated the operator, without so much as a glance at the panting girl's colourless face. "As you may have the discernment to discover, she is a civilized being, and brutality has no particular fascination for her!"

"And what's all that to do with it?" demanded the captain, warming up to a scene from which he could usually wring his sardonic delights. "It has this to do with it—that she is making this trip as a passenger. I mention the fact because you may see her in this cabin again, at many times and at hours quite as unusual as the present."

"I will, will I?" retorted the other.

"You will! And what's more, so long as I do my duty by this ship, and by my company, her presence here calls for no insolence, either official or unofficial!"

"You be damned!" roared the master of the ship, aghast at such effrontery.

"There again I'm afraid I must both disappoint you and disagree with you. And at the same time I'd like to call your attention to the fact that this is a wireless station, and that it stands under the protection of the Berlin International Concordat!"

"To hell with you and your Concordats! This is my ship——"

"Precisely; and I, unfortunately, have been put here to do my work, and I'm——"

"Yes, by Heaven!" broke in the irate captain, "you're here to do your work! You were stuck in here under my nose, for reasons I don't understand; but when you're here you're goin' to do your work as I say! And what's more, I want you to bear in mind that I intend to stay master o' this ship! And while I'm master o' this ship I want no insolence—from upstart wire-stretchers! So you do your despatchin' in regular hours, and when I say so, or I'll ship you back to your company in irons!"

CHAPTER X.

THE REVERSE OF THE SHIELD

The captain of the Laminian wheeled about and strode out of the cabin, swinging the door shut with a slam that loosened flakes of white lead paint from the ceiling boards.

"So he's against us, too!" murmured the operator.

There was a moment of unbroken silence before the woman looked up.

"Why did you say that to him?" she demanded, trembling with indignation. Even her voice shook a little as she spoke. "How dare you say a thing like that?"

McKinnon crossed the room until he stood almost at her side.

"I had to say that," he answered. "It was the only way out."

"A lie—a base lie like that—the only way out?"

"Yes, the only way, for now that man must not suspect."

"Suspect what?"

"What each of us knows!"

"But you have just challenged his power; you've disclaimed his authority! What can he do?"

"He can do anything! In the high seas he's king over this little floating kingdom of his."

"And you, too, are under him?"

"As much as one of his stokers, in a way."

"But what have you gained by a lie like this?"

He found it hard to understand her scruples, to fathom her indignation. He stopped her as she started to speak again.

"Wait! Don't say anything more until I try to explain what it means to you."

He peered out along the deck and then slipped the bolt in the cabin door before he turned to her again.

"Listen! What I have to say is only the other half of your own story, of what you yourself have said. If Duran and his army are shut up in Guariqui, it's because they're there without ammunition!"

"You know that?" she cried.

"Yes; and this man Ganley knows it. He knows it because he's been the cause of it. Six hundred thousand rounds of ammunition went out of Mobile for the Locombian troops, for Ulloa and his men. They were carried to Puerto Locombia on the Santa Anna, secretly, in barrels that were labelled and invoiced as cement, so they could be shipped on to Guariqui without suspicion. But Ganley or the Junta or their spies got to know of it. The Santa Anna was scuttled in the roadstead at Puerto Locombia. Those cartridges went to the bottom—forty-six barrels with double heads, the heads holding a sprinkling of cement and the main space full of cartridges packed in excelsior. Every pound of it went down."

"This can't be true!" almost groaned the girl at his side.

"Every word of it's true. But let me go on. De Brigard and his men have been in almost as bad a predicament. This advantage was useless unless he had ammunition for his own men. That's where Ganley came in. His agents found that ground iron slag, packed in cases, weighed up to just about what a case of cartridges would. So they bought eighty-eight cases of iron slag from a Hudson River factory town and ferried it down to New York. It was consigned to Locombia, properly enough, as basic iron silicate for fluxing purposes. The law compels all such exporters to file with the port collector a distinct declaration of the goods shipped, the country shipped to, and the name of the consignee. This has to be accompanied by oath. Besides the due inspection of the shipment, the shipper has to make his declaration before the consul of the country to which any such goods are sent. All this was done?"

"But how do you know this?"

"Let's say that I stumbled upon it in my work as a wireless operator. But here is the real point: in some way, which needn't now concern us, those innocent boxes of powdered slag were tampered with. They became cases neatly packed with ammunition, with just enough iron silicate thrown in to fill up the chinks and cover the real contents. In other words, Ganley and his men have sent out of New York five hundred and eighty thousand rounds of ammuniti , consigned to the revolutionary Junta at Puerto Locombia!"

"But how do you know this?" once more demanded the listening woman.

"Let me finish, please. Along with those cartridges were sent eight cases of 'structural iron.' These cases, in reality, contain eight hundred Remington rifles. And not only has this stuff been sent out of New York by Ganley and his men, but these guns and cartridges at this very moment are on this ship, and under this very deck!"

Alicia Boynton sank slowly dwon into the steamer-chair against which she had been leaning. McKinnon could see that her breath was coming fast and short.

"This can't be true!" she whispered, letting her hands fall weakly between her knees. "They may have said this, but it was only to deceive you, to point out some false trail!"

"One moment, until I explain. I am only the wireless operator on this boat. I am a newcomer, as well, for this is my first run. One hour before the Laminian sailed her old operator failed to report, and could not be found. The De Forest Company at once hurried a new man over to the ship. I am that man."

"Still I don't understand. Why are you here?"

"That's what the captain of this ship is so uncertain about. That's why he's so down on us! That's why he's sneaking about and spying on this cabin like a cat on a mouse-hole! I don't mean that he's a paid agent of the Junta—I don't believe he knows what this ship is carrying. He's only soured with alcohol, and jealous—bullheadedly jealous—of his little world of authority."

"But still you haven't told me who you are, or why you came here."

"I am a wireless operator," he said after a moment's glance into the girl's clear eyes, as though to fathom just how brightly the old-time fires of intelligence were burning there.

A Marvel Of Healing

Salt Rheum of Ten Year's Standing Healed as if by Magic

Hands Cracked so Could Not Work —Cures Effected by

Dr. Chase's Ointment

It does not take long for Dr. Chase's Ointment to prove its magic healing power. A single night is often sufficient to produce the most startling results.

Internal treatment for skin diseases is nearly always disappointing. By applying Dr. Chase's Ointment to the diseased parts relief is obtained almost immediately, and gradually the sores heal up and disappear. Here are two letters which will interest you:—

Mrs. Chas. Gilbert, Haystack, Placentia Bay, Nfld., writes:—"I was a sufferer from Salt Rheum for ten years, and had about despaired of ever being cured, so many treatments had failed. Reading of the wonderful cures effected by Dr. Chase's Ointment, I commenced using it, and was entirely cured by eight boxes. I want to express my gratitude for Dr. Chase's Ointment, and to recommend it to all sufferers."

Mr. Stanley Merrill, Delaware, Ont., writes:—"For years I was troubled with my hands cracking, often becoming so sore that I could hardly do any work. I got some of Dr. Chase's Ointment, and happily find that one or two applications of same to the affected parts make them well. I have had no trouble since using the ointment for sore hands."

TENNIS COSTUME.

Up to Date Girl Wears Trouserine Skirt.

There is no suggestion of beauty or grace certainly to be connected with the trouserine tennis skirt, but it is practical and makes for expert play, therefore the girl who goes in for a serious game often sacrifices appearances to comfort.

The material used is a lightweight black and white checked cloth, and the trousers effect is entirely hidden when away from the tennis court by straps that hold the concealing front panel in place.

The shirt waist is of striped flannel, with collar and cuffs of black moire silk.

An Oriental Negligee.

Oriental negligees are not new costumes in the fashion world, but the pretty boudoir dress pictured is both smart and the latest design modeled after the eastern woman's dress. It is of pale gold satin patterned in a floral design worked out in black and orange colorings.

Every woman's purse will not allow her to purchase such a sartorial luxury, but it is a stunning negligee for the fortunate possessor of a well filled purse.

Sleeve of the Moment.

There can be no question that simplicity will not be the distinguishing feature of the sleeve of the fall. A few weeks ago nearly all bodices and blouses were made with the Asiatic sleeve—i. e., cut in one piece with that garment and minus seams. In the new modes the sleeves are put in separately with just a little fullness, and nearly all sleeves have a bit of black velvet trimming applied in the bandings, pipings, panelings or buttons. Perhaps the smartest and newest sleeve is the Breton, which will be much exploited. It reaches below the elbow, is straight and wide and is often made of different material from the bodice. In evening gowns this feature is effectively carried out in beaded and jetted nets, embroidered tissues and in laces of all kinds.

With decollette bodices sleeves are worn small, so small that sometimes they seem quite absent.

Dr. Shaw's Influence on Norway.

Although the Rev. Dr. Anna Howard Shaw, American suffragist, could not get permission from the authorities in Christiania to give lectures in churches, it develops the Norwegians are planning to give greater opportunities to women who must earn their own livelihood. A bill has been introduced providing liberally for women. The measure says they shall have access on the same conditions as men to offices of the state with a few exceptions.

Fashion and Food

LET fashion dictate what you shall wear, but don't let it dictate what you shall eat.

Changing the style of your hat does not affect your health, but changing the style of your breakfast food is a different matter.

Some folks have taken a fancy to predigested foods. They are simply robbing their digestive apparatus of the exercise necessary to keep it in good working order.

Then there is the other great point—the purpose of eating.

Is it merely to please the palate or to furnish fuel for the body? Why not eat foods that do both?

The body requires two kinds of fuel: that which gives energy and that which gives tissue.

The perfect food, according to scientists, should give 5½ parts of energy to one part of tissue, because that is just the ratio in which the normal man or child uses up his energy and tissue.

Tillson's Rolled Oats are one of the few practically perfect foods. They furnish the body 5½ parts of energy to one part of tissue.

Tillson's Rolled Oats when cooked for only 15 minutes are in a perfect state for the normal digestion.

No amount of science and no amount of judgment can produce a more perfectly adapted breakfast food for father and son, and mother and daughter, than Tillson's Oats. We leave it to you to find out at your breakfast table tomorrow morning whether you can find a more tasty, delicious and appetizing dish.

A Hint: Try milk and a sprinkle of salt on your porridge. That's much better for your digestion than rich cream and a lot of sugar.

DO EGGS SHOW THEIR NATIONALITY?

Experts Say Places of Origin Can be Told by Appearance.

To the average man at the breakfast table one egg is much the same as another, and it would be difficult to tell where each egg came from after an obliging hen had laid it.

It is, however, possible to tell even the nationality of an egg, according to certain experts in an amusing case at Preston, Lancashire. Messrs. Howard Brothers, of that town, summoned by the Board of Agriculture, were alleged to have sold eggs falsely labelled as of Irish origin.

Egg experts let the court into some of the secret ways of telling the nationality to which eggs gave allegiance. For some unfortunate reason best eggs cannot be identified as to their country of origin. In other respects they are too easily "identified."

George Michael Hyams, of Liverpool, egg expert, said the eggs in question were Russian, and between four and five weeks old.

Mr. Riley (for the defence): Do you believe you can distinguish not only between Russian and Irish, but between Russian, Irish, Dutch and Danish eggs?—Yes.

Counsel handed a number of eggs to the witness, who described them as "foreign," "Irish," "bad altogether," etc.

John George Parkinson, produce merchant, of Liverpool, was of opinion that the eggs came from the south Russia. The shell of a Russian egg was harder than that of eggs from any other country, and the appearance was smooth and glossy.

Eighty-five per cent. of the Russian eggs imported were unfertile. About 90 per cent. of Irish eggs which arrived in England were unfertile, but though he kept the eggs in a temperature of 70 degrees for fourteen days, there were no signs of incubation. Neither did they burst or go rotten. The shell of a Russian egg was thicker and harder than that of an Irish egg, and that was why it would keep longer.

For the defence Bartholomew Condon, an Irish egg exporter, said that during last year he had supplied the defendants with a million eggs. In his opinion the nationality of an egg could not be told.

The defendants' shopman denied that there was any label, "New laid best Irish" displayed on the day in question, or that he had ever sold foreign eggs as Irish.

The Bench in the end dismissed the case.

$250,000,000 INDUSTRY

The Great Rubber Enterprises of Ceylon and Malaya

At the present time it is estimated that the vast rubber industries in Ceylon, Malaya, and other places in the East are responsible for the employment of $250,000,000 capital, and this vast industry owes its conception to the enterprise of one man—i. e., Mr. H. A. Wickham, who, on behalf of what is known as the Middle Eastern rubber industry, was recently presented with a cheque for a thousand pounds and a certificate for an annuity on account of the great services he has rendered in this particular field of commerce.

It was Mr. Wickham who, in 1876, brought from Brazil to Kew Gardens the seeds from which have sprung the vast rubber forests of the East. He was commissioned by the India Office to introduce rubber from Brazil into Ceylon; the difficulty was how to do it. He went to the Topagos Plateau on the Amazon, a remote locality, seized the opportunity of chartering a steamer which happened to be there, hastily collected, with the aid of the Indians, his baskets of seeds from the deep forests, and got them to the coast. As the Brazilian Government would have confiscated the seeds, Mr. Wickham was obliged to smuggle them aboard—70,000 seeds being packed in a few crates.

The seeds would not survive the journey direct to Ceylon, so they were taken first to London. They arrived at Kew Gardens during the night, and were planted out at once. They were too perishable to risk delay until the morning. Seven thousand rubber plants grew from the seeds, and 1,700 of these were sent in miniature hot-houses to Ceylon. There they grew into large trees—12 feet in girth—and gave seeds of their own.

Such was the remarkable beginning of an industry now responsible for the employment of $250,000,000 capital in the East.

THE FIRST CARPET-MAKING

Carpet-making, as a modern industry, was first developed in France. That country had large factories and a monopoly in Europe of the art of carpet weaving when a rush-strewn floor was the rule even in the Royal palaces of Britain. But the edict of Nantes, that great disperser of French artisans and artitry, caused many of the carpet craftsmen to cross the Channal. They settled at Bristol, Axminster, and other places in the south west of England. From there the secrets of the industry spread to Glasgow, Kidderminster, and the towns of Yorkshire. These places are still the great carpet-weaving centres of Great Britain.

Liverpool Skyscraper

Liverpool's skyscraper, the Royal Liver building, which has just been opened, is of seventeen storeys, 304 feet high, and weighs 80,000 tons. It has a clock bigger than Big Ben, London; each dial is 25 feet in diameter the minute-hand 14 feet long, and at one point 8 feet wide. The clock never needs winding, but is propelled by electricity, being connected with Greenwich by post office wire. Special mechanism prevents the hands being interfered with by wind, snow or rain

SAFE FROM TYPHOID

"FRUIT-A-TIVES" THE BEST PREVENTATIVE

There is practically no danger of Typhoid Fever as long as you keep the bowels regular with "Fruit-a-tives."

Typhoid is an inflammation of the bowels, due to a germ. This germ enters the body in milk, water or food. If the bowels are constipated, the germ remains in the body long enough to attack the delicate lining and thus Typhoid begins.

"Fruit-a-tives" acts directly on the liver, kidneys and skin, and cleans the system of all impurities. "Fruit-a-tives" will not [illegible]old — but it will cure Constipation, cause "[illegible]" and build up the system — thus preventing Typhoid.

TURPENTINE NOW A LUXURY

No Longer the Cheapest Thing a Householder Can Buy

The time was when turpentine was about the cheapest thing a housekeeper could buy. The biggest bottle in the house was sent for five cents' worth of turpentine. Now your sewing-machine oil bottle is big enough for that much. Indeed, turpentine has so grown in value that unless when you call at the paint dealer's and do not specify that you want the genuine article he will hand you out a substitute made largely of crude gasoline. Some years ago turpentine retailed for 20 cents a gallon, and now sells for 10 cents a half-pint.

Turpentine is a southern product, and, while the demand has largely increased, the output has largely fallen off. The value of the output in 1910, though much smaller than the previous year, was 40 per cent. greater than in 1909, all of which shows that the south has a very valuable industry and one that demands scientific and careful handling of the pine forests that produce the resin and the turpentine to prevent the destruction of the trees. The old forests are already giving out and new areas are being worked. The product is taken from the tree by chopping holes in the bark and sap, through which it oozes. The trees have been overworked, and many large areas that were valuable have been killed by the greed of the turpentine companies. The trees are natural growth and cannot be restored by replanting. Their value will steadily increase, and it would be the sheerest folly to keep up the old methods of destruction.

First British Woman to Fly

The distinction of being the first woman of purely British nationality to fly belongs to Miss Gertrude Bacon, daughter of the famous aeronaut who was really one of the pioneers of ballooning. Miss Bacon went up with Mr. Sommer in a Farman biplane during the Rheims aviation meeting of 1909, and in her book, "How Men Fly," which has recently been published, she provided a fascinating narrative of the sensations of flying. She quotes the unfortunate Mr. Rolls as saying that his "first impression of flying was like trying to drive a motor-car which was skidding in all directions at once."

SWIMMERS MADE SPEECHES

An Ingenious Method of Outwitting the Russian Police

One of the most remarkable political meetings on record is reported to have taken place at Riga, Russia. The Letts Socialists desired to hold a meeting, and the Riga police expressing an opposite view, the contest began, brains being pitted against determination. Wherever the Socialists made up their minds to pitch their camp the police checkmated them. At last one of the Socialists conceived a brilliant idea. He sent circulars to the members of his organization inviting them to take part in a swimming match. Of course the competitors were orators. They went into the water and the assemblage stood around. Then swimmer after swimmer delivered a speech and invited questions from those on land. The ingenious Socialists claim that the meeting was a great success.

The Fountain Head of Life Is The Stomach

A man who has a weak and impaired stomach and who does not properly digest his food will soon find that his blood has become weak and impoverished, and that his whole body is improperly and insufficiently nourished.

Dr. PIERCE'S GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY makes the stomach strong, promotes the flow of digestive juices, restores the lost appetite, makes assimilation perfect, invigorates the liver and purifies and enriches the blood. It is the great blood-maker, flesh-builder and restorative nerve tonic. It makes men strong in body, active in mind and cool in judgement.

This "Discovery" is a pure, glycerin extract of American medical roots, absolutely free from alcohol and all injurious, habit-forming drugs. All the ingredients are printed on its wrappers. It has no relationship with secret nostrums. Its every ingredient is endorsed by the leaders in all the schools of medicine. Don't accept a secret nostrum as a substitute for this time-proven remedy of KNOWN COMPOSITION. ASK YOUR NEIGHBORS. Notorious French Convict Comes to Grief Through Exhibition of Photograph

Leon Cibion, an escaped convict from the French penal settlement at Guiana, has paid for his vanity by being re-arrested.

Cibion early took up crime as a profession. After numerous imprisonments he was condemned in 1907 to seven years penal servitude. He managed to escape, however, and went to Hayti, where he stole another Frenchman's papers and returned to Paris two years ago.

Some months ago Cibion became engaged to a girl, and before his marriage suggested to a party of friends that they should all be photographed as bachelors for the last time.

The photograph was excellent; in fact it was so good that it was the undoing of Leon.

The group was exhibited in the photographer's window, where it was seen by a detective, who recognised the escaped convict. Cibion was traced to his house in Paris and promptly taken into custody.

A LONE ANARCHIST

One Man Determined to Revolt Against the Law

The church of Clermont, in the Oise, France, has been turned to a novel use. A temporary outlaw hoisted a red flag on its steeple, and then posted himself with a gun, ready to fire from the top at anyone who dared to approach. Someone had the presence of mind to ring the bell, which sounded like a tocsin, and of course the whole town turned out. The man at the top of the tower fired several shots to warn them that they had better not come nearer. The whole trouble arose between him and another man with whom he had a row. For this he was brought before a police court and was fined fifteen francs. The fine exasperated him, and rather than pay it, he took possession of the church and the steeple and hoisted a red flag to show his revolt against existing society and authority. Gendarmes were sent to parley with him, and after parleying all night they at last induced him to surrender. He did so on condition that he would have another hearing at the police court and that he should present whatever new arguments he had to show that he ought not to be fined.

LLOYD-GEORGE FLED

An Amusing Adventure of the Chancellor With an Old Woman

While staying at Criccieth, in Wales, Mr. Lloyd-George and a party, which included Mrs. George, Mr. and Mrs. Osterman, Sir Francis Edwards, M.P., and others, set out with the intention of having tea on the river bank, a mile from Llanystymdwy. They had just entered a field, and, having lighted a fire, were preparing to make tea, when there appeared on the scene the woman who leased the ground. At the sight of the little party of gipsy trippers on her domain, she became quite indignant, remonstrating volubly, and ending by putting out the little camp fire.

The old woman's ire put the Chancellor and his friends to flight, the members of the company retreating by wading knee-deep through the stream. Approached by the chauffeur who inquired whether she knew Mr. Lloyd-George, the angry dame retorted: "He might have been the King for all I care: I will have no trespassing on my field."

DO EGGS SHOW THEIR NATIONALITY?

Experts Say Place of Origin Can be Told by Appearance.

To the average man at the breakfast table one egg is much the same as another, and it would be difficult to tell where each egg came from after an obliging hen had laid it.

It is, however, possible to tell even the nationality of an egg according to certain experts in an amusing case at Preston, Lancashire. Messrs. Howard Brothers, of that town, summoned by the Board of Agriculture, were alleged to have sold eggs falsely labelled as of Irish origin.

Egg experts let the court into some of the secret ways of telling the nationality to which eggs give allegiance. For some unfortunate reason bad eggs cannot be identified as to their country of origin. In other respects they are too easily "identified."

George Michael Hyams, of Liverpool, egg expert, said the eggs in question were Russian, and between four and five weeks old.

Mr. Riley (for the defence): Do you believe you can distinguish not only between Russian and Irish, but between Russian, Irish, Dutch and Danish eggs?—Yes.

Counsel handed a number of eggs to the witness, who described them as "foreign," "Irish," "bad altogether," etc.

John George Parkinson, produce merchant, of Liverpool, was of opinion that the eggs came from the south Russia. The shell of a Russian egg was harder than that of eggs from any other country, and the appearance was smooth and glossy.

Eighty-five per cent. of the Russian eggs imported were unfertile. About 90 per cent. of Irish eggs which arrived in England were unfertile, but though he kept the eggs in a temperature of 70 degrees for fourteen days, there were no signs of incubation. Neither did they burst or go rotten. The shell of a Russian egg was thicker and harder than that of an Irish egg, and that was why it would keep longer.

For the defence Bartholomew Condon, an Irish egg exporter, said that during last year he had supplied the defendants with a million eggs. In his opinion the nationality of an egg could not be told.

The defendants' shopman denied that there was any label, "New laid best Irish" displayed on the day in question, or that he had ever sold foreign eggs as Irish.

The Bench in the end dismissed the case.

$250,000,000 INDUSTRY

The Great Rubber Enterprises of Ceylon and Malaya

At the present time it is estimated that the vast rubber industries in Ceylon, Malaya, and other places in the East are responsible for the employment of $250,000,000 capital, and this vast industry owes its conception to the enterprise of one man—i. e., Mr. H. A. Wickham, who, on behalf of what is known as the Middle Eastern rubber industry, was recently presented with a cheque for a thousand pounds and a certificate for an annuity on account of the great services he has rendered in this particular field of commerce.

It was Mr. Wickham who, in 1876, brought from Brazil to Kew Gardens the seeds from which have sprung the vast rubber forests of the East. He was commissioned by the India Office to introduce rubber from Brazil into Ceylon; the difficulty was how to do it. He went to the Topagos Plateau on the Amazon, a remote locality, seized the opportunity of chartering a steamer which happened to be there, hastily collected, with the aid of the Indians, his baskets of seeds from the deep forests, and got them to the coast. As the Brazilian Government would have confiscated the seeds, Mr. Wickham was obliged to smuggle them aboard—70,000 seeds being packed in a few crates.

The seeds would not survive the journey direct to Ceylon, so they were taken first to London. They arrived at Kew Gardens during the night, and were planted out at once. They were too perishable to risk delay until the morning. Seven thousand rubber plants grew from the seeds, and 1,704 of these were sent in miniature hothouses to Ceylon. There they grew into large trees—12 feet in girth—and gave seeds of their own.

Such was the remarkable beginning of an industry now responsible for the employment of $250,000,000 capital in the East.

THE FIRST CARPET-MAKING

Carpet-making, as a modern industry, was first developed in France. That country had large factories and a monopoly in Europe of the art of carpet weaving when a rush-strewn floor was the rule even in the Royal palaces of Britain. But the edict of Nantes, that great disperser of French artisans and artitry, caused many of the carpet craftsmen to cross the Channel. They settled at Bristol, Axminster, and other places in the south west of England. From there the secrets of the industry spread to Glasgow, Kidderminster, and the towns of Yorkshire. These places are still the great carpet-weaving centres of Great Britain.

Liverpool Skyscraper

Liverpool's skyscraper, the Royal Liver building, which has just been opened, is of seventeen storeys, 300 feet high, and weighs 50,000 tons. It has a clock bigger than Big Ben, London; each dial is 25 feet in diameter, the minute-hand 14 feet long, and at one point 3 feet wide. The clock never needs winding, but is propelled by electricity, being connected with Greenwich by post office wire. Special mechanism prevents the hands being interfered with by wind, snow or rain.

GEORGE W. PERKINS, SCHOOLMASTER OF TRUSTS

His Convictions That the Capital-Labor Question Is What Is Right and Fair Between Man and Man, His Criticisms of Lawmaker and Corporation Alike and His Campaign to Remedy the Ills of Millions of Men Involving Billions of Dollars

GEORGE W. PERKINS, formerly partner in J. P. Morgan & Co., announced a short time ago that he had retired from many of his business interests and was prepared to give up all of his activities in financial and industrial lines, if necessary, in order to devote himself exclusively to the work of solving the problem of the "trusts."

Federal regulation of all corporations and the creation of a great business court at Washington to insure honest co-operation between capital and labor; honest dealings between the corporation and the public; publicity and a cordial understanding between the company and the government—that is Mr. Perkins' solution of the greatest of modern economic puzzles.

Mr. Perkins stated his ideas on the need of a new constructive business policy in terms that are striking and convincing.

(Copyright, 1911, by the New York Herald Co. All rights reserved.)

THAT his retirement from the banking business last January did not mean that George W. Perkins retired from all business activity is evident to a caller at his office, a bright, spacious, simply furnished suite of large rooms on the nineteenth floor of the Empire Building, overlooking Trinity churchyard, in New York city. His time is divided between business meetings, a small army of callers and a country wide correspondence, bearing on the solving of great industrial and financial problems, all of which are embodied in the gigantic economic problem—the trusts.

"No, Mr. Perkins hasn't had time to take your matter up yet," said his secretary to one elderly visitor, one of a waiting dozen. "Perhaps if you come in next week"——

"I'm afraid there isn't much chance of your getting what you want to-day," she told another. "You see, Mr. Perkins has about two hundred and fifty letters that must be signed and a number of appointments, and"——

Looking out over Trinity churchyard one very naturally reflected that Mr. Perkins decidedly had not retired from business; that he had merely moved from in front of Trinity Church to behind it; out of Wall street up to where he could get a broader range of vision—a "better perspective," as the artists say. Just then the door opened and Mr. Perkins came in.

As he passed rapidly, nodding right and left, through the waiting room, I noted that he had changed but little since the last time I had seen him, nearly four years ago, at three o'clock in the morning, in front of Mr. J. Pierpont Morgan's library. It was after one of those famous all night conferences, when men of great affairs were trying to devise means of checking the financial panic that had followed the crash of the Knickerbocker Trust Company. Night after night the newspaper men had walked the pavement of Thirty-seventh street, watching bank presidents and Cabinet Ministers go in, waiting dreary, often rainy, hours for them to come out; questioning them as they emerged, one by one, and getting for answer the hurried yet final reply:—

"Ask Mr. Perkins."

And Mr. Perkins was always the last to come out. The morning newspaper reporter was lucky if he got the brief, succinct statement of the purpose and the result of the midnight conference in time for his city edition, but when he got it it was the leading item of news in the morning's paper, for Mr. Perkins was not only the mouthpiece of the house of Morgan, he was the spokesman for the whole world of finance.

A little heavier, perhaps; a few more gray hairs about the temple and in the jaunty, up-curled mustache; a few more and deeper lines about the clear, gray blue eyes—those were the only outward changes in four years. The smile that made him first the highest paid life insurance agent in the world and later the youngest of J. P. Morgan's partners; the brisk stride, the forceful, incisive, direct yet pleasant manner of speech—none of these had changed since the morning when I had last seen him in the moonlight in front of the Morgan library.

"Are you going to give up all of your business interests, as has been intimated, in order to devote yourself exclusively to the solution of the great business problems of the day?" I asked.

"Not all, perhaps," was the quick response. "I have already given up some. I shall give up more if necessary. If it seems essential I shall be willing to give up all. As I said to the daily press a few days ago, newspaper editorials and numerous letters I have received seem to show a widespread interest in the country's immediate need of a constructive business policy. Men in public life in Washington have expressed the thought that perhaps the time had arrived to look broadly into the business questions before the country. The time would seem to be ripe for some sort of a national co-operative movement to develop, at least to some degree, the views of our people on the problems which confront us and their bearing upon wage earners, investors and consumers, as well as on our domestic and foreign trade."

"How is this movement going to be launched? How will it be organized?" I inquired.

"That is the question to which I am now addressing myself," replied Mr. Perkins. "I am in correspondence with hundreds of business men—men in public life, professional men—on this very question. It is still unsettled. Perhaps the plan proposed by Representative Martin W. Littleton in the bill which he has introduced in Congress to create an 'industrial and corporate commission' may be the nucleus."

"What will be your personal part in framing this constructive national business policy?" I asked.

Question of Doing Something.

"That remains also to be seen," he answered. "It seemed to me that it was time some one took up the subject and agitated it, and as no one stepped forward to do so I did it myself. But I am not in any sense putting myself forward as a leader. If there is work for me to do I am prepared to do all that is asked of me. If some one else proves a more capable leader I am content to work in the ranks. It is not a question of personalities, but a question of getting something done."

"And that something is"——

"It is the solution of the problem, or rather the two problems, over which the business men of the United States have been deeply concerned for a number of years—and this concern has been growing rather than lessening — first, the relations between capital and labor, and, second, the relations between business and government."

"How do you propose to solve these problems which have thus far defied solution? What is your point of attack?" I asked.

"There is only one way to solve them, or it—for they are really one problem—and that is by recognizing that the problem is primarily one of morals."

Mr. Perkins spoke with emphasis and intense decisiveness.

"I want you to make that point perfectly clear," he went on. "It is the keynote of the whole business—the fact that the real question at base is not commercial, financial or governmental, but moral—a question of what is right and fair as between man and man—a very, very old question made new, acute and burning as never before, because we all have been drawn so closely together that the improper act of one man injures a larger number of men than ever before."

"Do you mean by that that illegal and corrupt business methods are at the bottom of the popular complaint against 'big business'?"

"I mean that there is a widespread and very general belief, founded on many facts that have been brought to light, that such corrupt methods do obtain generally in the management of the great corporations. I do not admit that corrupt practices are general. But I have a very large list of correspondents scattered all over the country—men of affairs, men who are in touch with the thought of the country—and the burden of hundreds of letters I have received is that it is impossible to think of reforming business conditions until the so-called 'trusts' reform their business methods. These letters undoubtedly reflect the sentiment of the country as a whole, and admittedly there is ground for such criticism.

"The people have witnessed abuses, glaring abuses, in corporation business methods. They have been told that these abuses came about largely because of the size to which certain business enterprises had grown. For want of a better reason and for lack of real, deep thought many have accepted the reason offered; but how un-American to be afraid of a thing because it is large! The true American big who thinks deeply, logically—has no such fear or belief. It is not the size that he fears—it is the methods followed. He fears the management of a giant enterprise that is secretive, that does not respect public opinion, that does not realize that when its shares are owned by the public its managers are substantially public servants. He fears the methods of the blind pool. He wants to know, and he has a right to know from disinterested third parties, what is being done by a great business enterprise in which his money is invested or which is handling a commodity that affects his daily life. The officers of great corporations should realize that such concerns are more nearly public institutions than private property.

"A large percentage of the mistakes of corporate management have occurred because managers have failed to realise that they were not in business as individuals, but were working for other people—their stockholders—whom they were in honor bound to honestly and faithfully serve. Further, that they owed a duty to the general public and could in the long run best serve themselves and their stockholders by recognizing that and duly respecting it.

"Then, too, many of our corporations, being of comparatively recent origin, have at the outset been managed by men who were previously in business, in some form or another, for themselves; and it has been very difficult for such men to change their point of view, to cease looking at questions from the sole standpoint of personal gain and personal advantage and to take the broader view of looking at them from the standpoint of the community of interest principle."

"But you contend that these evils are not general—that conditions in these respects are improving?"

Awakening of a Conscience.

"That is undeniable," replied Mr. Perkins. "While the agitation of recent years has been unfair and harmful in many instances it has set business men thinking, has awakened the business conscience and has brought a new realisation of the fact that it is as true of business as it is of the individual that there is no permanent success unless it be based upon integrity of character.

"The millennium has not yet arrived, but no thoughtful man will deny that there has been a great awakening of the business conscience in recent years. The old motto 'Honesty is the best policy,' in place of being more or less a beautiful sentiment, is coming to be more of a practical reality. The day has come when to be honest means not technically, legally honest, but broadly, humanely honest—honest in thought, in purpose, in act. Man is still selfish, and this must be seriously reckoned with in calculating what he will do in his relationship with his fellows. There is, however, such a thing as benighted selfishness and such a thing as enlightened selfishness. I believe that with the awakening of the business conscience is coming what might be called an enlightened selfishness—by which I mean a realization that for one's own best pecuniary interests the methods of the past cannot be the methods of the future; that as we are living in a 'get together' age we must do business on a 'live and let live' basis, and that one's own selfish interest makes the doing of business on a co-operative basis more profitable in the long run than on the basis of ruthless competition."

"You do not believe the solution is to be found, then, in a return to old fashioned competitive conditions?"

"Emphatically not. Many of us who are now in middle life were brought up to believe the old adage that 'competition is the life of trade.' Competition in the long ago doubtless did stimulate trade, but it was almost always to the serious misfortune of one or more individuals. A highly developed competitive system gave ruinously low prices at one time and unwarrantedly high prices at another time. When the low prices prevailed labor was sorely hurt; when the high prices prevailed the public paid the bills. Competition is much like the robbing of Peter to pay Paul; what one gains the other loses. Insofar as competition represents the survival of the fittest it very often means the survival of the strongest; in other words, that 'might makes right.'

"When business men in New York were competing with business men in Chicago in the days of the stage coach competition between the two cities did not do as much harm, but with the advent of the fast trains, the telegraph and the telephone the competition became deadly. This is what has been happening in business in the United States, all owing to the agencies of steam and electricity, which have annihilated distance and made the world so small.

"What has given us the sweat shop? Competition.

"What has given us child labor? Competition.

"What throws labor out of employment? Competition.

"What causes low wages? Competition.

"What brings panic and failure? Competition.

"And what is our Congress at this moment calling loudly on our Attorney General to enforce, even to the door of the jail? Competition.

"The Congressman who stands for a literal enforcement of the Sherman act stands for the sweat shop and child labor.

"Competition produces the two extremes—millionaires and paupers."

"Your remedy for the trust question, then, would be to have larger corporations instead of dividing them up, as the Supreme Court has directed in the Standard Oil and Tobacco cases?"

"With certain limitations and restrictions, yes. Experience has demonstrated, what any Congressional investigating committee could learn if it took the trouble to inquire, that the so-called trusts have, on the whole, decreased prices to the consumer while increasing wages to the workman and at the same time giving him steadier employment and better housing; that there have been fewer failures; that their operations have increased our foreign trade balances; that they have devised ways and means and provided the capital for saving and utilizing waste products, which could not have been done by smaller concerns; that instead of large profits by a few owners their tendency is toward the distribution of profits among the people generally.

"The form of co-operation we know as modern business — 'trusts' if you like the term—is the inevitable outgrowth of modern invention. It would have been impossible in the old ox team days. Better means of intercommunication have made it inevitable. The human mind has been emancipated from the body. Electricity has given wings to the human mind, and it is the mind, not the body, that does business.

"Intercommunication at the beginning of the nineteenth century, figuratively speaking, was on an 'ox team' basis. At the beginning of the twentieth century it is on a 'wireless' basis. At the beginning of the nineteenth century intercommunication amounted to little or nothing; at the beginning of the twentieth century it is complete, worldwide.

"Co-operation, then, under reasonable control, is your remedy?"

"It is not my remedy in any proprietary sense—it is the remedy that must be applied unless we are going to drift rapidly into socialism. Three alternatives confront business to-day. They are, first, the adoption by business men of a broad copartnership method of doing business; second, a rapid drifting toward government ownership of many branches of business, and, third, socialism.

"Does any business man doubt that the first is infinitely preferable?"

"I use the term copartnership in the broadest sense. Copartnership, corporations, reciprocity, profit sharing, co-operative methods—all are different names for the one central thought, which is 'humanizing modern industry.'

"But just as surely as you cannot have competition unless it competes, so just as surely you can only have co-operation that co-operates. I mean by this co-operation in any given line of business will fail unless it is co-operation between labor and capital, between capital and consumer, between company and government. Co-operation between labor and capital cannot be effected by the mere paying of wages and by the giving of gratuities or voluntary rewards at the end of the year. The great educational system of this country, fostered by the State and wealthy individuals, has made tremendous strides in the last quarter of a century in developing the independent thinker among the masses. You cannot spend a million dollars in educating one generation without having a million questions to answer from the next generation.

"The question between capital and labor to-day is not so much the amount of wage a man should be paid as it is whether that wage is a fair proportion of the earnings of the business.

"The closer the world is drawn together and the better people know each other the better they understand each other and the more impossible it is to adopt and pursue secretive methods—to obtain for any one branch of a business unfair and improper profits; and one of the things that intercommunication has done has been to sound the death knell of secretive methods. More and more is public opinion demanding full, open and honest accounting from business concerns, and the more far sighted business concerns that adopted such methods a few years ago are having less trouble with their labor and the public than other concerns, because both their labor and the public know what the profits of the business are and what percentage of it labor is receiving in wages."

"But what agency could undertake the supervision and control of corporations that would insure this broad co-operation?"

"The federal government," said Mr. Perkins. "If the United States—the people of the United States represented at Washington—would approach the problem of the corporations not in the spirit of destruction, but in a spirit of helpfulness, the whole problem would be solved.

"Our national government first undertook the supervision of our States; then it undertook the supervision of our banks; then it undertook the supervision of our railroads. Why not at least try to undertake the supervision of our big business concerns before we smash them to pieces? Why not try to regulate before we strangulate?

"There is scarcely a corporation manager of to-day who is alive to his responsibilities, to the future growth of this country and to the enormous opportunities before us for foreign trade who would not welcome this kind of supervision could he but feel that it would come from the national government, acting through an intelligent and fair minded official; but to be faced with the requirement to report to and be supervised and regulated by forty or fifty governments, with varying ideas and laws, of course suggests difficulties that are almost insurmountable obstacles. For business purposes, at least in the larger business affairs of this country and from a practical standpoint, State lines have been obliterated.

"Those who ask the public to invest money in an enterprise are in honor bound to give the public, at stated intervals, evidence that the business in question is ably and honestly conducted, and they should not only be willing but glad that some authority, properly constituted by our government, should say to stockholders and the public from time to time that the management's reports and methods of business are correct. They should be willing to do this for their own relief of mind, since the responsibility of the management of a giant corporation is so great that the men in control should be glad to have it shared by proper public officials representing the people in governmental capacity.

Bar of Public Opinion.

"Each day it becomes more and more apparent that all questions in this country must be settled at the bar of public opinion. I believe that publicity, full and frank, will go a very long way toward correcting any evils that exist and preventing any that may threaten. Honesty alone is not enough, but honesty with publicity would go far to remove causes of complaint. If our laws regulating large business concerns provided for proper and complete publicity, so that the labor of a concern would know what was being done, so that governmental authorities would know what was being done, so that stockholders would know what was being done, and the public which was being served would know what was being done, many of our present difficulties would disappear; and in place of this being an element of weakness to any given business concern it would be an element of strength, for under such conditions a set of men operating a given business, if they were able enough mentally to be successful managers, would soon come to realise that they could succeed only by being fair to one and all."

"To carry out effectively such a comprehensive scheme of governmental regulation would involve the creation of a special bureau not now existing, would it not?"

"It would mean that the government would have to give business men—men who are familiar with the big business of modern big concerns—a place in its councils. Regulation must be done by those who understand what they are regulating.

"In the city of Washington, on the side of a brick building, in large letters, is a sign:—'Horses Shod by a Horseshoer.' Many times, as I have noticed this sign, I have said to myself:—'That's what America needs to-day—horses shod by horseshoers—not by opticians or milliners.'

"One important reason why business men have feared regulation of business by the government has been that such regulation would be performed by inexperienced men—those without business training, and who would have no practical knowledge of the great problems involved. I have long believed that we should have at Washington a business court, to which our great business problems could go for final adjustment when they could not be settled otherwise. We now have at Washington a Supreme Court, to which is referred the final settlement of our legal questions. This court is composed, of course, of lawyers only, and it is the dream of every young man who enters the law that he may some day be called to the Supreme Court bench. If such a call comes, it matters not how lucrative his practice he always drops it for the honor conferred.

"Why not have a similar goal for our business men? Why not have a court for business questions, on which no man could sit who had not had a business training with an honorable record? This would surely come to be regarded by business men in the same way that the Supreme Court is regarded by lawyers. The supervision of business by such a body of men, who had reached such a court in such a way, would unquestionably be fair and equitable to business, fair and equitable to the public. Furthermore, it would not take out of business that invaluable asset, individual initiative. It would leave the everyday management of business untrammelled and allow men free swing to devise ways and means to improve, enlarge and develop our domestic and foreign commerce. It would give us a practical working arrangement by which more humane, co-operative methods could be substituted for ruthless competition."

"And your work, this new life work you have taken up, is"——

"It is to do what I can as an American and a business man to bring about these new conditions I have outlined. It is a work that is intensely fascinating to me, and, if I may say it without boasting, a labor of patriotism. It is a labor in which I seek the co-operation of every patriotic American. We are at a critical and formative period of our national career. We must work together if we are to accomplish anything.

Sermon by CHARLES T. RUSSELL Pastor Brooklyn Tabernacle.

FALSE THEORIES OF DIVINE PLAN

The Bible Misunderstood—All Creeds in Error as to the World's Ending.

October 15.—"London Tabernacle," Lancaster Gate, W., was crowded to-day to hear Pastor Russell. He spoke of mistaken notions re the end of the world. He assured his audience that "the earth abideth forever," and claimed errors were built upon misrepresentations of Scriptures.

We report him on Revelation x, 6, 7, as follows:

Our text, with other Scriptural statements respecting the end of the world (for instance, St. Paul's statement, "The heavens being on fire shall be dissolved"), have led Christians in general to accept the theory that God has decreed that shortly, or at some time, our earth is to be burned. The early Church expected and prayed for the second coming of Messiah, to establish the Kingdom of righteousness, to overthrow sin and to release mankind from its bondage and weakness and from the power of death, and thus to bless the whole earth, restoring all things to the glorious condition represented in miniature in Eden: man in perfection, with a Paradise home (Acts iii, 19-21).

But as centuries passed without the manifestation of Messiah's Kingdom, those expectations yielded to another suggestion, namely, that Jesus had not meant what had been understood, but meant that the Church should convert the world, under His supervision, during a period of a thousand years, and that then He would come and give their work His stamp of approval and wind things up by taking all the saintly to heaven, setting fire to the earth to entirely consume it.

Both Catholics and Protestants have been operating in harmony with this erroneous thought. Catholics claim that the Kingdom of Messiah was set up long ago and that the popes and cardinals are representatives of Jesus and the Church. They claim that the Pope is Christ's Vicegerent—that is to say, He reigns instead of Christ, as His representative. They claim that "the thousand years" is already in the past, since 1799, and that we are now in the "little season" mentioned in Revelation xx, 3, in which Satan was to be loosed, at the close of the thousand years.

Many of them understand that Protestantism in general, and, particularly, Socialism and Free Masonry, are organizations of Satan, which will soon be destroyed in the burning up of the world.

Protestants are also much confused on the subject. They claim that we are in the reign of Messiah, but they are not sure when it began or when it will end. Before Luther's day the Catholic view prevailed, but according to Luther's preaching the Papal claims were false, and later the Papal system was branded as Antichrist. Since then Protestants are in confusion. Some recognize the Church of England and its kingly head as God's Kingdom in the earth, but they admit that it has not yet conquered the earth, nor is God's will done as in heaven, even in the British Isles. The Church of Russia makes a similar claim to being the Kingdom of God, and honors the Pope as the reigning representative of Messiah. Emperor William of Germany also has on his coins the legend that he is reigning "by the grace of God"—that his kingdom is a part of Messiah's Kingdom.

But all these theories Catholics and Protestants are now ignoring. In the light of our day none dare preach such theories. With present-day enlightenment it seems foolish to declare that the various kingdoms of Europe are Messiah's Kingdom, and hat they are establishing a reign of righteousness. The costly preparations for war made by these very nations discredit entirely the claim that they are parts of Messiah's great Kingdom of righteousness and peace.

All denominations engaged in missionary work are professing the thought that soon the world will be converted; that the second coming of Christ will then take place, and then will come the consummation, and the burning of the world. How strange, how illogical! The heathen, according to remain government statistics, are twice as numerous today as they were a century ago. Six hundred millions there were then; there are twelve hundred millions now. How long would it require, at this rate, to convert the world? And if the heathen were converted to the same condition of civilization enjoyed in Europe and America, could we claim then that God's will was done on earth as it is done in heaven? Assuredly not.

Thank God, the second coming of Messiah will not delay until the world is converted and God's will fully done and the plan of salvation ended. Quite to the contrary. His coming is for the very purpose of bringing all things into subjection to the Father's will. He comes that He may reign as King of kings and Lord of lords, in association with His Church. He will not reign through a representative or vicegerent, but personally, and "unto Him every knee shall bow and every tongue confess" to the glory of God. In His day the righteous shall flourish, and the evil-doers shall be cut off. The faithful Church, sharing in her Lord's resurrection, the First Resurrection, to glory, honor and immortality, will be His associate kings and priests, to reign for a thousand years (Revelation xx, 6).

Let us examine some texts which seem to teach that our earth will be destroyed by fire, and note that they are symbolical. "Fire" is frequently used in the Scriptures as a symbol of destruction. Thus the Church is exhorted to mortify or kill the fleshly nature, and is told that the fiery trials of life will assist them in this work. The opposition of enemies is to be destroyed by works of mercy and kindness, which, figuratively, will be "coals of fire upon their heads." St. Peter mentions special trials and tribulations coming upon the Church, designed to purify her—purge out and destroy the dross. He says: "Think it not strange concerning the fiery trial which is to try you, as though some strange thing happened unto you."—I. Peter iv, 12.

St. Paul refers to special trials upon the Church in the end of the Gospel Age, which will consume false doctrines, human traditions, etc., and all false faith, but which will leave unscathed the true Faith and true characters. He says: "If any man build upon this foundation gold, silver, precious stones, wood, hay, stubble, every man's work shall be made manifest, for the day shall declare it, because it shall be revealed by fire; and the fire shall try every man's work of what sort it is. If any man's work abide which he hath built thereupon, he shall receive a reward. If any man's work shall be burned, he shall suffer loss; but he himself shall be saved, yet so as by fire."—I. Corinthians iii, 12-15.

These various Scriptures do not prove that the world could not be destroyed by fire in a literal way, but they do prove that "fire" is very frequently mentioned in the Bible in a figurative or symbolical manner. We might multiply the instances: "Our God is a consuming fire"—as regards everything contrary to righteousness; the symbolical "lake of fire," in the book of Revelation, is explained to signify the Second Death, utter destruction, without hope of recovery.

The supposition that the earth will be destroyed by fire, either soon or ever, would be contrary to the statement that "the earth abideth forever," and the declaration that God formed it not in vain, but formed it to be inhabited (Isaiah xlv 18). One of the very strong passages which seems to teach that the earth will be devoured by fire is found in Zephaniah iii, 8: "Wait ye upon Me, saith the Lord, until that Day that I rise up to the prey, for My determination is to gather the nations, that I may assemble the kingdoms, to pour upon them Mine indignation, even all My fierce anger; for the whole earth shall be devoured with the fire of My jealousy"—anger.

That the fire of God's anger which will come upon the world will not destroyed the physical earth, with all its inhabitants, but will destroy the evil of present institutions, is shown by the succeeding sentence, which declares: "Then will I turn to the people a pure Message, that they may all call upon the name of the Lord to serve Him with one consent." If the fire of this text were literal, the earth and its people would be no more, but as symbolical fire it is perceived that it is a burning against unrighteousness, iniquity, sin, the overthrow of all institutions of evil, and the awakening of mankind and preparing them to hear the Voice of God, the language of the Truth, the Divine Message.

What we have seen prepares us for the somewhat more difficult statement of St. Peter: "The Day of the Lord will come as a thief in the night, in the which the heavens shall pass away with a great noise, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat; the earth also, and the works that are therein, shall be burned up. • • • The heavens, being on fire, shall be dissolved, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat. Nevertheless we, according to His promise, look for a New Heavens and a New Earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness" (II. Peter iii, 10-13). To harmonize these words of St. Peter with other Bible statements, we must consider the "fire" here mentioned to be symbolical. Not only the earth is to be consumed, but the heavens also. The "heavens" will take fire first and be dissolved.

What heavens shall we suppose are here referred to?—not the literal, starry heavens, nor even our atmospheric heavens, nor yet the heaven of Divine Presence and glory. The church systems, the ecclesiastical powers, are symbolically referred to as the "heavens," at the present time, supervising and over-ruling the temporal and social arrangements which are represented by the "earth." The "earth" represents organized society, as in contrast with the "sea," which symbolically represents disorganized society, the uncivilised and all who are rebellious against governments. When the "heavens" (ecclesiastical powers) of the present time shall be "dissolved," it will be with a great noise, with great confusion, commotion. Ecclesiastical institutions of the present time are in a very troubled condition, though they are in no danger of immediate collapse. The principal outcry is that few attend church services, and that the collections are small.

St. Peter's words indicate a crisis in ecclesiastical affairs still future. The Scriptures show us that a great Federation is seemingly bringing Ecclesiasticism into greater power than it has exercised in years. Other intimations of Scripture lead us to expect that that federative organization will attempt a rigid control of the world through affiliation with political and civil power, and that a considerable measure of success will lead to intoxication on the subject and an attempt to take away the liberties of the people entirely, the result of which will be a great explosion, or a great "earthquake," in the symbolical language of Scripture. It will be then that the heavens will take fire and be consumed with a great noise, commotion, disaster, etc. And the commotion will include the social order. The elements will melt with the intensity of the heat, the strife, which will then be engendered. The elements of society are those mutual advantages and assistances of good people, upon which the stability of government rests.

The Bible clearly intimates that the condition of affairs symbolized by the melting of society and the disintegrating of its elements in the great heat of strife at that time will be the result of superstition and fear. The end will be anarchy, or as the Bible declares, "Every man's hand will be against his neighbor." Selfishness will be the predominating ruling principle.

The question arises, Why should God permit the fall of our Christian systems, which certainly have done much that is morally assistful to the world? And why should He permit the overthrow of the present order of things, which certainly is much more advantageous than anarchy and disorder? The Bible answer is that God is not forcing this issue, but is merely allowing mankind to work out these results. The trouble and disaster will come as the natural result of ignoring the principles of Divine Law. Ecclesiasticism is unauthorized to claim that it is God's Kingdom, invested with Divine power and authority to rule the world. This fallacious claim and the attempt to enforce it will bring upon it the "fire" which will consume.

The world, neglectful of the Golden Rule, and obeying the fake standard that "might makes right," will overthrow society by precipitating a conflict between the two great parties—the capitalists, trusts, kings and princes one the one hand, and labor unions and the masses on the other hand. Each will feel that a death struggle has arrived and that the battle must be fought. Each will feel unwarrantedly self-confident of victory. According to the Bible, the result will be the complete wreck of our present society, symbolically pictured as "fire."

But the Lord through the Prophet Zephaniah points out that, following this time of "fire" and trouble, will come a blessing to the earth. So also He declares through St. Peter, that following the symbolic fire, will come "a New Heaven" and a new earthly condition, the basic principle of which will be righteousness; and the Prophet Zephaniah says that then God's Message, in its purity, shall reach the people. Both statements are true. On the ruins of our present civilization, when mankind will be sick at heart with the failure of what they had considered to be the Brain Age, they will look to the Lord, to whom they should have looked sooner. They will perceive the coming reign of righteousness and will say "Lo this is our God, we have waited for Him and He will deliver us." (Isaiah xxv. 9.) Then the Prophet declares, "The desire of all nations shall come." (Haggai ii, 7.)

All nations are desiring blessing, prosperity, and God desires that all shall have these very favors, and they will be obtainable through Messiah's Kingdom. Then the blessing of mankind will begin. The Messianic Kingdom, invisible but All-Powerful, will be thoroughly manifest in its dealings, and its righteous judgments will have control. The blessing will come through Israel, extending to men including "all the families of the earth."

How grand the thought that the New Heavens will be the new ecclesiastical powers—the glorified Church—Christ and His Bride in glory and power. The New Earth mentioned by the Apostle will be the new organization of human society, along the lines of righteousness—the Golden Rule.

We have not forgotten our text. What we have said is in line with it. It requires the addition of one word to make its meaning clear. The Mystery of God, which has been kept secret from the foundation of the world, shall be finished, completed, no longer a mystery. "And the angel swore • • • that the time should be no longer (delayed)." Revelation x, 6, 7.) This has no reference to the end of time. Time can never end. Other Scriptures show that we are living very near the finish, the completion of the Church, which is the "Mystery." (Ephesians iii, 3-6; v, 32.) With the completion of the Church (the "Mystery") will begin the fulfilment of all the glorious promises of the Bible respecting the lifting of the curse from the earth, and the Divine blessing upon all earthly things.

PETITCODIAC, N. B., May 10, 1911.

"I had been troubled for quite a number of years with a very annoying case of Catarrh of the head. It kept me sneezing, coughing and spitting nearly all the time, and my work—running to and fro in the trains—aggravated the trouble more or less on account being exposed to all kinds of weather. The car dust also added to the irritation. Your No. 26 Catarrh Cure for internal and external use was recommended to me, and I decided to give it a trial. I used 3 boxes and am entirely relieved, and I feel so much better that I wanted you to know it was your medicine that fixed me up. You have a fine remedy indeed in your No. 26 Catarrh Cure. Everyone who has Catarrh ought to know about it and should use it."

IN ROTORUA, NEW ZEALAND.

Some Things Which Interested a Visitor Staying There.

"Rotorua, New Zealand, is a curious part of the world," says a woman who recently returned from an interesting stay in that place. "You may be leaning on your umbrella and will suddenly notice steam coming from the ground where you made the hole. The ground is just like chalk and you feel the heat coming up. I saw places where hot and cold springs existed side by side, the native using one spring for cooking their food and the other for preserving raw materials.

"The hotels in New Zealand are rather primitive. In one, for instance, there was only one bath tub, and in the mornings men and women would stand in line before the door, clad in their bathrobes, waiting for their turn at the tub. That was rather embarrassing, but the natives did not seem to mind it.

"They have a way of rapping on your door at 5 o'clock in the morning and asking if you would not like a cup of tea. Tea seems to be drunk to a larger extent than it is even in England, for New Zealand is a temperance country and on the corners where you would expect to see a barroom there is a tea parlor, and I was told that the men drink the beverage as they would whisky in England.

"One of the most desirable souvenirs you can get down there is a little kit basket made of fine hemp, covered with peewee feathers, which are made by the Maori women. Having seen one I was anxious to carry one home, but was unable to find one at any shop until the day before I was to leave I saw one in a general store. I asked the price.

"'That is not for sale,' replied the merchant, a white man. He added that it had been made especially for the South Kensington Museum in London. 'My wife has been making several to order,' he said. Well, I pleaded and pleaded, and finally he saw I was in earnest. But he said it was impossible to have one made. I kept on insisting and then he asked me when I was going away. I told him the next day at 11 o'clock.

"'My wife makes the baskets, but she is very lazy. I don't like to ask her to make one now, but I'll see what I can do.' He retired into a back room and there I saw him talking with a Maori woman. He made an emphatic gesture and then he shut the door and locked it with a bronze key a foot long.

"'I'll promise you shall have your kit to-morrow before you sail, madam,' he said. I got it, for the merchant had locked his wife in the room and told her she should have nothing to eat or drink until she had finished a basket for me."

The Kudos of Kingship.

Some elementary school children, about ten years of age, were recently asked to write an essay on "George V., King of England." The observations on His Majesty's daily life were rather sensational. One little boy tells us that His Majesty spends the intervals between his meals walking up and down his garden path; that he makes his laws up out of his head, and that he has liver and bacon for breakfast.

"I think he has veal and ham and thick gravie, which is trimed with parsly, and is on a silver dish," says another youthful essayist. "After that he has apple-pie, strawberrys and cream, and then forty winks before he gose to the theater." But perhaps the best piece of humor is furnished by the laddie who tells us that the King rides about in a golden carriage, sleeps in a golden bed, wears a crown on his head on Sundays, and gets wages every day which come to $30,000 every week.

It will be news to the Court that "sumtimes the King passes his time away sitting on his throne reading"; and it is edifying to learn from another juvenile historian that "he has some children who do not go to Sunday school, so he spends his time singing hymns with them in the afternoon."

Too Much For Thackeray.

A lady, an intimate friend and a frequent visitor at the Thackeray home, called late one afternoon. She was shown into the study, and on entering perceived the novelist himself seated at his desk, his head bowed upon his arms. Fearing she was intruding in the presence of some great and unknown grief, she paused, hesitating. Then, thinking she might be of some help, or at least express her sympathy, she stepped forward. Just then Thackeray looked up. His shoulders were shaking; the tears streaming from his eyes.

"Little Nell is dead," he said brokenly.

"Little Nell?" his visitor interrogated.

"Yes, Little Nell," was the answer; "she is dead—I've just been reading it." Before him, on his desk, lay an open copy of Old Curiosity Shop.

THE TURK'S COMPLAINT

Italy Accused of Taking a Mean Advantage of War

PARLIAMENT ASSEMBLES

Constantinople, Oct. 16.—The Turkish Parliament was opened yesterday afternoon. The Sultan's speech from the throne was read, according to custom, by the Grand Vizier in the presence of the sultan, the eldest Turkish princes, the foreign diplomats and the heads of the foreign banks.

Profound silence marked the reading by Said Pasha of the throne speech, at the conclusion of which applause broke out. Sultan Mahommed V. appeared to be deeply affected.

The speech from the throne dealt mostly with the action of Italy in declaring war over Tripoli, and with the steps taken by the powers looking to mediation.

"In the meanwhile," the Grand Vizier read, "the Turkish Government continues to have recourse to measures to defend its rights and legitimate interests."

The speech declared that Italy's ultimatum was presented while the Turkish Government was engrossed in developing the country industrially and repairing the errors of the past regime. It accused Italy of opening hostilities before the expiration of twenty-four hours after the ultimatum was given, and with firing upon torpedo boats in the Adriatic when they were saluting, ignorant that hostilities had broken out.

Italy's Difficulties.

Rome, (via frontier), Oct. 16.—The landing of the Italian expeditionary force in Tripoli was more eventful than was at first known. Owing to the difficulties caused by a rough sea and a hard shore, the Italian commanders found themselves confronted by a serious problem. The great fleet of coral boats from the Islands of Lampeduse, Lampidone, Linosa and others in the Mediterranean, came to the rescue of the transports and helped in the speedy landing of the troops. The gravity of the situation is indicated by fact that the torpedo boat Freccia was wrecked on the rocks, although the crew was saved.

Cholera was reported likely to prove a worse enemy than the Turks. Already 20 or 30 cases have occurred, with a 75 per cent. mortality.

Another cause of apprehension to the Government is the position of Italian residents in Ottoman territory, which is considered extremely dangerous. An exchange of communications on this subject has taken place between Rome and Berlin. Germany is using all her influence to prevent excesses and is endeavoring to convince Turkey that reprisals against Italians now in that country would only serve to make her position still more difficult.

Abused the Italians.

Rome, Oct. 16.—Reports from distant regions of the Turkish Empire are causing considerable excitement here. These reports describe the authorities as abusing members of the Italian colonies and sequestering their private correspondence. It is asserted that the telegrams of Italian consuls despatched before war was declared, were seised and that Italians who later wished to leave the country were held as hostages and released only recently through the intervention of Germany and after they had been subjected to gross indignities.

Cholera Outbreak at Tripoli.

Malta, Oct. 16.—It is reported that several cases of cholera have developed among the soldiers taking part in the Italian expedition to Tripoli. The stricken men have been isolated and other energetic measures adopted to prevent a spread of the disease.

Was Is a Farce.

Sydney, N.S., Oct. 16.—Sydney has a distinguished visitor in His Highness Prince Ghika of Roumania, who, with his friend and aide, Capt. Radcliffe, is en route to Newfoundland. Prince Ghiaki and Capt Radcliffe are keen sportsmen, and have visited a number of the principal hunting centres in America. This is their first trip to Newfoundland.

In regard to the Turko-Italian war, the prince stated that in his opinion it was simply a pre-arranged matter between the great powers of Europe that Italy eventually would get Tripoli.

"It is only a sham fight, and there will be no more bloodshed. The Turkish Government is too clever to continue a war of this sort when she knows that having so much seaboard and practically no navy, she cannot possibly prevail."

Well-Known Printer Dead.

Hamilton, Oct. 16.—The body of William A. Winfield, one of the best-known printers in this city, was found in a area at the rear of The Spectator building yesterday morning about eight, by the caretaker of the building. When found, the body was cold and stiff, and it is thought the man had been dead since early Saturday night. It is supposed that death was caused by a broken neck, or fractured skull, resulting from Winfield's fall into the areaway. Coroner McNichol was immediately notified of the fatality, and ordered the body taken to the city morgue, whence it was subsequently removed to Blachford's undertaking parlors. After investigating the cause, the coroner decided an inquest was not necessary.

Justice Champagne Dead.

Ottawa, Oct. 16.—The death occurred here yesterday, after a brief illness, of Justice L. N. Champagne of the Superior Court, Hull. The deceased, who was born in 1860, leaves a widow and family. The widow is a sister of the late Senator Chevrier of St. Boniface.

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES.

Walter Grey of Queenboro, who was injured when his horses ran away, is dead.

Frank Darby was burned to death in his summer house in Grantham Township.

The 1911 Glidden auto tour started Saturday morning from the headquarters of the American Automobile Association, New York, on Saturday. There were 65 cars.

At the next session of the Alberta Legislature the Canadian Northern will seek the right to build and operate no less than fourteen new railroad lines in that province.

St. Catharines factories depending upon hydraulic raceway for their power were forced to shut down Saturday, owing to the bank of the raceway being washed away.

Charged With Firing Barns.

Berlin, Ont., Oct. 16.—Herman Affeldt, living at Centreville, three miles from here, was taken into custody at midnight Saturday by Detectives Huber and Chief of Police O'Neill, charged with arson. It is alleged that he fired the barns of his son, who lives on the homestead, and caused a loss of $3,000.

The fire was discovered between eight and nine o'clock, and by great effort some of the stock was saved, but otherwise the barns and contents are a total loss. They were partly insured.

Affeldt had been to town during the day and had come home the worse of liquor. He called at the house, where the family lived, and made threats concerning the home and that they would not have it long to live in. This was after six o'clock, the same evening as the fire, and he neglected to go to his house. This is what leads the family to suspect the father, as they, thinking he was at home, tried to rouse him, but got no response. They then telephoned for the police, who after interviewing the members of the family, decided to arrest Affeldt. They found him at his home, but he declared he knew nothing of the fire.

Affeldt has a police court record, the latest was that he was bound over to keep the peace for a year, which expired the other day.

Awarded $6,000 for Arm.

Barrie, Oct. 16.—The closing case before Sir John Boyd in the assize court here Saturday was an action for $10,000 damages by Roy Stone of Barrie against the C.P.R. for the loss of his right arm on March 8 of this year, while in the company's service. Plaintiff, while trying to open the knuckles of a car in motion at Bolton, Ont., fell between the cars, one going over his right arm. The company at the time of the accident offered to have plaintiff removed to a hospital in Toronto and pay for amputation of the limb, but the family thought the limb might be saved and sent their own physician to the city to bring the injured man to his home town, where amputation finally took place.

The jury rendered a verdict of $6,000 damages for the plaintiff, each party paying their own costs. It is understood that the C.P.R. had previously made an offer of settlement, in which they agreed to give the plaintiff $1,250 and a position as station agent at Baxter at a salary of $50 per month with free light and fuel, but he was to pay $5 per month rent for the house. This the plaintiff refused to consider on the ground that it was not a permanent guarantee of his position for life.

Republic Declared.

Washington, Oct. 16.—The rapid spread of the revolution in China has led to an informal exchange of views on the situation among the Powers. Representatives at the embassies and legations here have talked the matter over in a preliminary fashion, and while no action is expected, the European and American nations interested in Chinese developments, and having citizens in the danger zone, will keep in touch with each other.

The request of the revolutionary leaders for recognition at the hands of foreign consuls is of course regarded as premature, though it is usual in such cases for consuls to be instructed to deal unofficially with the insurrectionists for the protection of lives and property and the facilitation of trade. It is considered that in the near future consuls will be so instructed, unless their general orders cover contingencies of this nature.

Shanghai, Oct. 16.—It is understood that Yuan Shih Kai has refused to become viceroy of the central provinces unless he is guaranteed full power by the Imperial Government.

The rebels have declared a republic.

Want Stagni Sent Back.

Montreal, Oct. 16.—There is a report coming from Quebec that a move is now on foot with a view to having Monsignor Stagni, the papal delegate at Ottawa to return to Rome.

After the return of Sir Wilfrid Laurier to power in 1896 all the Liberal Catholic members, as well as the Senators, petitioned Rome for a delegate, claiming that the Quebec bishops had supported the Conservative party and the statement has been made that the prelates have been ever against such a nomination as a delegate to this country.

Be this as it may, the report has it that now that Laurier is out of the way the Quebec bishops at least will be favorable to treating directly with Rome, instead of with a delegate Hence the move in question.

THE MARKETS.

Liverpool and Chicago Wheat Futures Close Lower—Live Stock—Latest Quotations.

LIVERPOOL, Oct. 16.—There was a steady undertone at opening, and values were barely ½d higher, and, following the opening, there was a decline of 1-4d to ½d, with selling to realize. The firmness in Winnipeg at the close yesterday, and the firmness of Australian and Plate offerings, together with expected lighter American shipments this week, as shown by Bradstreet's, were offset here by a forecast of liberal shipments to the United Kingdom and a quiet demand for spot, and less demand for both seagoes and parcels. Advices from Argentine are favorable, with the weather warmer, and this was reflected in the comparative heaviness in the distant months here. At the close the market was dull, ½d higher to ¼d lower than yesterday.

CHICAGO, Oct. 16.—Prospects of another big increase of the visible supply made the wheat market to-day turn weak. The close was 1-8c to 1-4c and 3-8c under last night. Corn declined 3-8c to 1-2c and 1-2c net, and oats 1-8c to 1-4c. The end of the day left provisions varying from unchanged figures to 5c advance.

SPORTING EXTRA APPRECIATED

The Examiner's sporting extra on Saturday afternoon, giving the particulars of the world's series baseball game, the football scores, etc. was much appreciated, and were heard in regard to the edition. The pink sheet extra gave many complimentary expressions a complete account of the New York-Philadelphia game, including the play by innings and the official box score, a report of the Toronto Central-Peterborough rugby game, an account of the local soccer game and the scores in the different rugby games throughout the Dominion. A large number were disposed of and the newsboys made some easy money in a short time, one youngster cleaning up $1.50 in a few minutes after the extra was on the street.

WATER MAIN ON GEORGE ST. BURST

Water Tore a Hole in Street Early This Morning and Shot a Geyer-Like Stream Into the Air

REPAIRS ARE MADE

As the result of high pressure put on for a fire this morning, the George street water main burst at the junction of Hunter and George streets. The pipe split at about 5 o'clock and blew a hole in the street. A gang of men were quickly on the scene, and have now got the break repaired, after much hard work. There was no damage done to surrounding buildings by the water, as it was shut off almost immediately. As a result of the accident, buildings on George St. for two blocks, were without water supply for the greater part of the day. Fortunately there was not a fire alarm sent in from that section while repairs were being made, or there might have been a serious conflagration. The street car service was interfered with as the track had to be undermined to effect the repair work, which was completed this afternoon.

CAT SAVED LIVES OF TWO CITIZENS

Actions of the Feline Awakened Mr. and Mrs. James Irwin, Parnell St.—Found Home on Fire

A NARROW ESCAPE

Mr. and Mrs. James Irwin, an elderly couple, residing on Parnell street, narrowly escaped being burned to death in their home this morning. They attribute their miraculous escape to the instinct of the family cat, which, on perceiving the impending danger, rushed into the room where Mr. and Mrs. Irwin were sleeping. With much tugging at the bed clothes and loud mewing the cat finally succeeded in arousing the slumbering occupants of the burning house. It was not until they proceeded to eject the cat from the room that they became aware of their dangerous predicament Their escape from the house, which by this time, was filled with smoke, was accomplished with much difficulty. The cries of the couple, after they reached the street awakened the nearby neighbours, who, in turn, gave a general alarm to other residents in the locality. Mr. Lilley, son-in-law of Mrs. Irwin, who resides about a block away, was notified, and when he arrived on the scene he found the house enveloped in flames and also that notification had not been sent to the Fire Department. Instead of pulling Box 17, which was quite close to the scene of the conflagration, he proceeded on to Box 14, at the corner of Aylmer and Wescott streets. The firemen made a quick run to the box, and were guided to the fire by the illumination, which lit up the sky for miles around. A line of hose was laid to the nearest hydrant, but had to be abandoned, as the hydrant was found to be out of commission. Considerable delay was caused while a second line was laid to another hydrant. This delay served to augment the fear that the fire might spread to the adjacent houses, and a serious conflagration result. After an hour's strenuous work on the part of the firemen the flames were subdued, but not before the house had been gutted.

The fire, which is supposed to have been of incendiary origin, started in the rear of the building, or in an out-house.

The house was an old, frame structure, and is almost a complete wreck. The damage is estimated to be in the neighbourhood of $500.

PRELIMINARY MEETING OF LIBERALS RE NOMINATION OF PROVINCIAL CANDIDATE

At Largely Attended and Enthusiastic Gathering Held on Saturday Afternoon it Was Decided to Convene a Nomination Mass Meeting Saturday Afternoon Over Central Canada Offices.

A meeting of the Liberals of Peterborough and those in opposition to the Whitney government, was held in the Central Canada Board Room, George street, on Saturday evening, to consider arrangements for nominating a candidate to contest the riding in the approaching provincial general elections.

The meeting was largely attended and enthusiastic, showing that the Liberals of West Peterborough are not daunted, by the results of the recent elections or by the task of overturning the large adverse majority in West Peterborough.

Mr. J. J. Hartley occupied the chair, and in stating the object of the meeting said that it was made necessary by the action of the Whitney government in forcing an election upon the country a year in advance; but no candidate should be deterred by such confession of weakness by a government which had so greatly increased the debt of the province in the past few years and was enormously increasing the annual expenditure. He referred also to the fact that the whole credit of the Province of Ontario was used to the detriment of the Eastern part of the province, and especially of Peterborough, in connection with the distribution of Niagara Falls power. He condemned the abolition of the Model schools, which had resulted in a dearth of teachers and a distinct detriment to the educational interests of, especially the rural districts. He said that if there were any sensible thinking public opinion, it could not help regarding Sir James Whitney's statement that he brought on the election to save $15,000 in bye-elections as the limit of absurdity and bluff. There were many things that the Whitney government had left undone. Mr. Hartley said that he, for one, would like to see something done in the interests of the working men, and some attention, on the part of the government and the representative of West Peterborough substituted for the utter representative neglect of the riding for the past three years, especially. Referring to the matter of a candidate, Mr. Hartley said that there were several Liberals in West Peterborough who, with proper organization and united effort, could carry the constituency. The candidate should be selected as early as possible, and his supporters should get promptly to work. The candidate would do his part, but his supporters should put their shoulders to the wheel and help him, instead of allowing him to do the larger share of the work without proper assistance, as had been the case in the Dominion election. If Mr. Stratton had had the properly organized assistance of the party behind him in the recent elections, he would have swept the riding. The idea had been too prevalent that Mr. Stratton would be elected anyway, as he had been so often during the past quarter of a century. They were not to forget the large element of new comers, that were not so well acquainted with past conditions, but who were carried away by appeals which subsequent abuse abuse of the power gained by their help showed to be misleading and insincere. Whoever was nominated, would, he hoped, have not only the sympathy, but the solid work and effort of the party behind him. He concluded by calling upon Hon. Mr. Stratton to address the meeting.

Mr. Stratton's Remarks.

Mr. Stratton said that he was glad to see so large and earnest and enthusiastic a meeting. The Whitney government had unnecessarily precipitated a general election, a session before the regular time, under the flimsy pretense of saving a paltry $15,000, the estimated expense of the bye-elections. As a matter of fact, as Mr. Hartley put it, the Ontario cabinet's idea of public intelligence must be very low, as no one could be induced to believe that this was more than an excuse, for taking the Liberal party in the province at a disadvantage. With a majority of about 70 at his back, Sir James Whitney seemed to be afraid to appeal to the people except by the help of the influence of the victory of the Conservative party at the polls in September.

To clear the air in regard to the Liberal candidature, Mr. Stratton said, that the Morning Times had been good enough to suggest that he (Mr. Stratton) should again contest the constituency, and again take a seat in the Legislature. He observed that the Evening Review rather feared that he would undertake this proposal, and had already commenced to resume its old tactics of personal criticism that had been practised for the past twenty-five years. But he had no such intention, as was suggested by his friends of the press. There was plenty of Liberal material for good candidates, in West Peterborough, and Mr. Stratton said that he felt now, as he had felt before the last elections, that some of these gentlemen should be selected for nomination. He said that no one had anything particular to fear from Mr. Peck's candidature. While he, himself, was an estimable gentleman in private life, that was no certificate of qualification as a representative of an important riding like West Peterborough, which had not been favoured by especially energetic representation the past few years. This riding needed someone who would take an earnest and capable interest in seeing that it received the advantages it was entitled to receive ,and which it had not received of late years. He did not believe that this riding would, in its own best interests, send a supporter of the Whitney government to the Legislature. He concluded by moving that a mass meeting of the Liberals be called for Saturday in the Liberal committee rooms, over the Central Canada offices for the purpose of nominating a candidate.

This motion was unanimously agreed to, the meeting to be called for 2 o'clock p.m., Saturday, Oct. 21.

Addresses were also made by Messrs. D. O'Connell, R. R. Hall, R. McGregor, G. N. Gordon, Mayor Morrow, and others, all suggesting names of suitable candidates and all agreeing, that with proper organization and earnest, concerted effort, the west riding would be redeemed.

The names that are suggested in connection with the nomination, are Mayor Morrow, Mr. R. R. Hall, Mr. D. O'Connell, Mr. J. J. Hartley, Mr. G. N. Gordon, Mr. Goodwill, Mr. G. A. Gillespie, Mr. J. H. Garbutt, and Mr. Thos. Graham, Smith, and Mr. T. M. Hunter, North Monaghan.

The meeting then adjourned.

BAD SCALPS

What Parisian Sage Will Do

A bad scalp is no credit to anyone, especially when it can be remedied by consistent use of Parisian Sage, the great scalp and hair tonic.

The cause of dandruff is a germ. Parisian Sage will kill these pests in a few days and thereby remove the cause of baldness.

Falling hair is caused by the dandruff germ. By killing these Parisian Sage at once restores vitality to the hair roots and commences a vigorous growth.

If the roots are not gone, Parisian Sage will grow hair. It strengthens thin, scraggy hair and makes it healthy and luxuriant. Stops itching scalp after one or two applications. In fact is guaranteed by Wm. Madill to do this or your money back. Fifty cents a large bottle.

SOUTH END RESIDENTS ALARMED BY RECEIPT OF BLACK HAND LETTER

Were Instructed to Leave $400 at Front Door or Their Brains Would be Blown Out---Police Watched the House but no One Turned up--Boys Charged With Theft Admit Sending Letter.

Four sleepless nights and as many nervous days, was the very unpleasant experience of Mr. and Mrs. Philox Kearney, 63 Olive avenue, when on the morning of Wednesday, the 11th, a letter demanding that $400 be left in front of the door that evening was discovered by a member of the family, stuck in the screen door. The letter was singned "J. G. Barrie, Montreal," and contained in a good business hand, on ordinary letter paper, the following:

"Dear Sir,—

"If you do not leave $400.00 in front of your door to-night, we will blow out your brains in a short while.

"(Signed) J. G. Barrie.
Montreal."

In addition to this there was some insulting literature written on the back of the sheet.

In conversation with an Examiner representative this morning Mrs. Kearney stated that the letter had been left at the house on Tuesday night and the following night they were afraid to stay in the house, and spent the night at a neighbor's. Next night, and they spent the night at a night, they having notified the police department, they slept at the house, which was guarded by a police officer. They remained at the house, but according to Mrs. Kearney's story, they got very little sleep.

Although the police watched the place, nobody came to do any damage, but a revelation took place at the police station, when the six boys, charged with committing petty robberies in the south ward, admitted doing the trick. Mrs. Kearney told the reporter this morning that at first they took it seriously ,and later thought it might be the work of some person who had a spite against them.

The reporter interviewed several citizens at the south end of the city and nearly every one informed him that at different times their cellars had been entered and fruit and other such articles taken. One citizen stated that he heard a noise at his cellar door one night, and slipped out and saw a boy of about 15 or 16 years running away from the place.

The boy will face this charge along with the other charges laid.

DELAYING THE TRIAL

Examiner Special.

LOS ANGELES, CAL., OCT. 16.—That the counsel for James B. McNamara, accused of murder, in connection with the death of twenty-one people in the explosion of the Times office, intend to delay the choosing of the jury, with all the legal quibbling they can possibly muster, was evidenced this morning, when it was stated they would object to every man who admitted he had been interested in many magazines and newspaper articles bearing on the tragedy. This means if the presiding Judge Bartwell sustains their contention, no twelve men can ever be found to try the case in Los Angeles.

PERCENTAGES FOR CHURCH

Special to The Examiner:

ST. CATHARINES, OCT. 16.—Thos. Fishburn, a millionaire layman delegate of the Ecumenical Conference, from Roanoke, Virginia, said that every corporation he was connected with paid a percent. of its earnings to the cause of Christ.

NARROW ESCAPE FROM DROWNING

Four-Year-Old Daughter of Mr. S. Bouregard, Crawford's Grove, Falls in Cistern---Is Rescued in Semi-conscious Condition.

While playing around his father's home ,Crawford's Grove, about four o'clock Saturday afternoon, little Willie Bouregard had occasion to look into a large cistern, which stood close to the house. He was horrified to see therein the apparently lifeless body of his four-year old sister, Barbara. His loud cries for help quickly brought his father to the scene, who jumped into the tank and rescued the child, while there yet remained a spark of life.

Artificial respiration was resorted to and the child quickly recovered from the semi-conscious condition in which she was rescued.

It appears that while playing in the vicinity of the cistern, she was walking backwards and fell in. The tank, which is a large, barrel shaped affair ,holds about 17 barrels, but it was not quite full at the time of the accident.

Little Barbara feels no ill effects after her unenviable ducking, and is congratulating herself upon her narrow escape. Had it not been for the presence of her brother in the vicinity of the tank, there would have been one more name added to the list of this season's drowning fatalities.

Dropped Dead In The Store

Mr. Victor Tully, who left ten days ago to take a position in North Bay, stated in a letter to a friend, that his employer, Mr. Gerald C. Thompson, had dropped dead in that place, on his return from a hunting trip on Thursday last. This will, no doubt, interfere with Mr. Tully's plans, so far as his residence in North Bay is concerned.

THE BURDENS OF AGE

The kidneys seem to be about the first organs to wear out and fail to properly perform their work. The result is weak, lame, aching back, rheumatic pains and failing strength. Many people of advanced years have recovered health and comfort by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. They restore the healthful action of liver, kidneys, and bowels.

Used in Canada for over half a century—used in every corner of the world where people suffer from Constipation and its resulting troubles—stand higher in public estimation than any others, and their ever-increasing sales prove their merit. Physicians prescribe them.

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills,

LIBERAL NOMINATION MASS MEETING.

A mass meeting of the Liberals of West Peterborough and opponents of the Whitney Government will be held in the Liberal committee rooms, over the offices of the Central Canada Loan and Savings Company, George street, on Saturday, Oct. 21st, at 2 o'clock, p.m. The object of the meeting will be the selection of a candidate to contest, in the liberal interests the West Riding at the forthcoming provincial general elections.

There will, no doubt, be a large attendance as there is a very general feeling that the representation of the riding has not been such that an improvement cannot easily be made and as the fighting spirit of the Liberals, instead of being subdued, by recent lack of success, is only roused to greater action.

THE SUPPLY RAN OUT.

With all of Mr. Borden's big majority of, 73 out of 86 seats in Ontario, he could not find material for his cabinet among the elected members of his party. He had to go, or did go, outside his elected following, for two of his most important ministers, and one of them a Grit at that. The most stinging, practical rebuke of Mr. Borden's slight to his own elect, comes from Tory Toronto, where, we are led to believe, a highwayman, carrying Conservative colours could be elected. Mr. Borden dares not send his new Finance Minister back the Nationalists had to have their share, and they got paid in full, and for re-election to Toronto, where the Conservative majority for each of its five seats, averages between four and five thousand. Toronto Conservatives are quite consistent in threatening to oppose and defeat Hon. Mr. Borden's Finance Minister, because he is a Grit; that is easily understood; but they are quite as inconsistent in opposing him because he is a representative of the trusts and monopolistic elements. It was in these interests and by the help of these same trusts, and these same special "interests" that Mr. Borden was elected, and in common gratitude, he was bound to recognize their help. But so many special "cries" contributed to his success, that he hadn't enough cabinet places to "go round." Of course, paid, by getting three members, and the trusts had their recognition, but when the flag-wavers and defenders of the faith, and the true-blue Tories of Toronto, "got there, the cupboard was bare," and like Mother Hubbard's dog, they "got none."

PARTY AND THE HYDRO-ELECTRIC.

The Conservative Press is paving the way for a claim that the Hydro-electric project was a party one, that Conservatives are pro-Hydro-electric, and that Liberals as a party are anti-Hydro-electric. The World says Mr. MacKay "takes the side of the corporations as usual against the Hydro-electric project." The truth is that the Hydro-electric project is in no sense a political one, and that the dearest opponents of Hon. Adam Beck's proposals were found in the Conservative party.

The public memory is not so short that it cannot recall how the News—which now ranks The World as the most self-assertive exponent of Conservatism—hammered the Whitney Government on the power issue and charged it with gross breach of faith in authorizing competition against the Mackenzie power monopoly.

When the power question was under discussion in December, 1907, The News said that "no Government has the right to use the power of legislation and of taxation to assist private enterprises. The contracts of one Government are binding upon its successors. We are a borrowing country, and if we plunder British investors it will be at our own cost."

And, again, dealing with the action of the Government in the case of the Electrical Development Company, it declared that it "is neither British, honourable, nor decent. The transaction would be condemned in a South American Republic. If the United States Government undertook to deal in this fashion with invested capital, Great Britain would ring with condemnation, and Canada would swell the denunciatory chorus. Moreover, capital would shun such communities, and they would sink to the level of outlaw States. Is it possible that we have a Government in Ontario which does not understand that faith must be kept with private investors, and that the public honour must not be tarnished? Is a Conservative Government, the hereditary guardian of the rights of property, to persist in a course of action which is admitted to be unjust even by British Socialists?"

These wild words sound strange today. The "hereditary guardians of the rights of property," to wit, Sir James and his Cabinet, did persist, and instead of banning these un-British, dishonourable, and indecent financial faith-breakers, The News solemnly blesses them in season and out of season.

Mr. MacKay has been an unsparing critic of the way in which the Hydro-electric policy has been carried out, but he has never said anything half so harsh as the words quoted from the chief Whitney organ. The attempt to make party capital of the Hydro-electric policy at this late day is absurd. Too many people know that it had no more determined foes than some of the members of the Whitney Government and of its Press.—The Globe.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The Government has altogether too large a majority in the Ontario Legislature.

The result of the last elections is that the Borden Cabinet is minus Presbyterians, newspapermen, Scotch men, bachelors, and farmers.

The Toronto Star of Saturday says that by the defeat of reciprocity Harton Walker, broker, Toronto, has received many inquiries for locations from American manufacturers desirous of locating in Canada. How many applications have been received by the Council of Peterborough?

The Examiner believes that Ontario should send its best and most representative men to the Legislature. A parliament in which there are five Conservatives to one Liberal, does not fairly represent a Province in which the parties are almost equally divided. The Legislature should be made to represent the people.

In view of the bickerings among the victors and the fierce fighting over the spoils, and the general difficulty of delivering the goods promised by the Conservative party to its divers wings and factions, the Liberals can view their temporary reverse with good-natured equanimity. Mr. Borden can well say, with Pyrrhus, of old—"Such another victory and I am undone."

SCOTCH DINNER LARGELY ATTENDED

Saturday evening last saw Scotsmen and lady friends foregather in Coleman's tea rooms, there to spend a pleasant time. To the number of about 50, the company, after joining in the 2nd paraphrase, sat down to a substantial repast, under the chairmanship of Mr. A. McLeish. At 9.15 the programme was commenced by a neat speech from the chairman, who dwelt lovingly on ties and memories binding "chiels" here to the Land O' Cakes, and showing how they

"Ma into man, the warld over Shall brithers be for a' that."

The first item was then called, "Love's Old Sweet Song," Miss Mary Wilson; trio, Messrs. Dickson, Anderson and Lorimer), "Willie Brewed a Peck o' Maut"; solo, "The Thistle," Mr. John McKenzie; "Allan Water," Mrs. Munro; Mrs. McArthur, "The Auld House"; duet, "Crookit Bawbee," Miss M. Wilson and Mrs. Jno. Anderson; reading, "Jessie of Lucknow," Mr. S. Steadman (with accompaniments by Mrs. Munro); solo, "Laird o' Cockpen," Mr. R. D. Dickson.; Mr. Wm. Lorimer, "Inveraray"; Mrs. G. Dickson, "Scotland Yet"; Mr. R. Hendry, "Auld Scotch Songs"; Mrs. Munro, "Will Ye No Come Back Again"; Mrs. McArthur, "Cam' ye by Athol; Mr. Hendry, "My Ain Folk"; Miss M. Wilson, 'Comin' Through the Rye"; Mr. G. Dickson, "Afton Water"; Mr. J. Anderson, "Were a' Scotch Here"; Mrs. R. D. Dickson (reading), "Andra Wilson's Weddin'"; Mr. R. Dickson, "Annie Laurie."

After this lengthy programme had been gone through — all the items were well rendered—a suggestion from the chair to form a Caledonian Friendly Society was mooted, but was left over to a future occasion. It is hoped to form a society in Peterborough soon.

Votes of thanks to the committee—who had charge of the recent successful gathering in Knox church—to the artists, and to the Coleman Bros. for their attention, were then accorded, and were followed by the company joining in lastily in "Auld Lang Syne" and the ringing cheers, thus bringing to a close a most enjoyable evening.

CASCARETS WORK WHILE YOU SLEEP

Salts, Calomel and Cathartic Pills Are Violent—They Act on Bowels as Pepper Acts in Nostrils

Take a Cascaret to-night and thoroughly cleanse your Liver, Stomach and Bowels, and you will surely feel great by morning. You men and women who have headache, coated tongue, can't sleep, are bilious with a sick, gassy, disordered stomach, or have headache and feel all worn out.

Are you keeping clean inside with Cascarets—or merely forcing a passageway every few days with salts, cathartic pills or castor oil? This is important.

Cascarets immediately cleanse and regulate the stomach, remove the sour, undigested and fermenting food and foul gases; take the excess bile from the liver and carry off the decomposed waste matter and poison from the intestines and bowels.

Remember, a Cascaret to-night will straighten you out by morning. A 10-cent box from your druggist means a clear head and cheerfulness for months. Don't forget the children.

REV. MR. KNOWLES NOT COMING

It will be with much regret that the people of Peterborough will learn that the Rev. R. E. Knowles, of Galt, who was to have given a lecture in Knox church on the evening of Oct. 24th., has been obliged to cancel his engagement here on account of ill-health. Rev. Mr. Keith has received a telegram from the distinguished clergyman-author, stating that he has been advised by a specialist to give up his work for a while and take a trip to the sea coast. Local people have been looking forward to Rev. Mr. Knowles' appearance here, and will be correspondingly sorry to learn that he will be unable to come for the present. It is possible that he may be heard here in January, as he has promised that his first engagement on his return, will be in Peterborough.

A SPLENDID PICTURE

The many people who have admired the beautiful oil painting in the window of the Cubitt Bookstore during the past few days are perhaps not aware of the fact that this most meritorious painting is the work of a local artist. The picture, representing a jar of roses, has been very cleverly executed and has been the subject of many complimentary remarks. The artist modestly refuses to allow his identity to become known. The picture is well worth seeing.

Mr. Stratton States His Position In Relation To Provincial Politics

In an Interview He Contradicts the Rumour That He Will be a Candidate for Election to Provincial Legislature.

In view of the current rumours that Mr. Stratton would be a candidate in the Provincial General Elections, a representative of the Examiner asked him to make a statement in respect thereto.

"It is reported, Mr. Stratton, in the Peterborough Times, and referred to by the Review, that you are likely to be a candidate for the Local Legislature. Have you anything to say as to that?"

"Yes; at a meeting of the Liberals on Saturday evening, I made it quite clear that I had no intention whatever, of being a candidate for the local Legislature. Therefore, the statement that I am looking for, or aspiring to, the leadership of the Ontario Opposition, needs no contradiction. Although urged to continue, I have no intention of doing so. It was only at the urgent request of those who had stood by me for the past twenty-five years, that I consented to accept the nomination at the late election."

"Have you anything to say in regard to that?"

"No, I have nothing to say—at least in the way of complaint—I was met by a combination that no candidate, could expect to overcome on his merits. I would ten times rather be defeated on what I stood for, than to be elected by a slender majority on the other fellow's platform. If the P. P. A.—if those who were talking Protestantism, in season and out of season, are satisfied with the victory they won, as represented by the new cabinet, I must say they are very easily satisfied now, or were not very much in earnest in the beginning.

Those good Orangement of Peterborough who were opposing me on the ground that Laurier was a Frenchman and a Catholic, see now where they have landed themselves — with more Catholics and Frenchmen, and bad ones at that, in the Borden cabinet, than in any other preceding cabinet framed in Canada. It might be asked in this connection, what does the Ontario and Peterborough P. P. A. get for all his loyalty and devotion to Protestant interests? He gets the "Nationalists"—French, Roman Catholic and anti-British. They are composed of Monk, who thinks he can kill the navy and Canadian participation in the defence of the Empire, by means of a referendum; Pelletier, who doesn't want a navy or anything that answers for a navy at all, and Nantel, a tri-colour enthusiast, who spits on British connection, every time he opens his mouth; and Doherty, who, however, is not a Frenchman, but a Roman Catholic, is Minister of Justice. Thus we have four of a kind, replacing one of a kind, that the defenders of the faith wanted to destroy. And these do not hold merely honourary portfolios, but among the most important departments of the government. For instance, Mr. Monk is Minister of Public Works, the greatest spending department of the government. Pelletier is head of another great department, that of Postmaster General, with thousands of officials all over Canada. Nantel, Minister of Inland Revenue, having control of all the inland revenue offices of all Canada; and Doherty, Minister of Justice, has control of all the Dominion Penitentaries and all the other matters connected with his department.

"While the P. P. A. of Peterborough may think that by the last election result, they have sat on and squelched their Roman Catholic fellow citizens, the latter can afford to feel that the P. P. A. victory was a little left-handed, and the spoils have been diverted to a rather unexpected and decidedly disagreeable quarter for them. And all those clergymen and others who humiliated themselves by taking part in and in speaking at the secret meetings of actual hatred to Laurier, and pretended solicitude for Protestantism, haven't very much to crow over. If they are satisfied with Bourassa, and his power to nominate the cabinet that Borden had to accept, or at least did accept, they are very easily satisfied, both as to their reputation and their conscience; and those Liberals who fell into line with them and were deceived to the hilt, have had a lesson that should last them a life time.

"Well, what about the farmer—how does he stand?"

"That needs only a word of answer. The Ontario farmer had the chance of his life to vote for himself; but he chose to vote for the party that has never considered him in the past, present or future. For instance, he will find that he has delivered himself, body and soul, into the hands of a high tariff enemy and the high priest of the Trusts—Mr. White ,the nominee of the monopolist and money interests of Toronto, has been made Finance Minister and tariff engineer-in-chief. And the farmers need not complain of a little extra tariff pinch hereafter—they did it themselves. If export steers, calves, sheep, lambs, hogs, go down, as they have gone down, and bacon and beef and lamb stay up as they have done, and are doing, the farmers are still suffering and are to suffer from the operations of the combines they thought they were voting against, but which they actually strengthened; and they will have to grin and bear it. There is not a farmer in the whole government. Mr. Martin Burrell, who is Minister of Agriculture, is merely a nice, fancy fruit farmer in far away British Columbia, where the climatic conditions are altogether different from the other provinces, especially Ontario. So that if the farmer has got a "raw deal," as he has, he has only himself to blame; and if the workingman has placed himself in the hands of the capitalist, and gets his "raw deal," he can't blame the Liberal candidate or the Liberal party — he can only blame himself, and his too-ready belief in fairy stories.

To sum up the whole thing in a nut-shell, it seems to me that as the result of the late election, the honours are pretty even after all. The Liberals were disappointed at the polls, and the people that won the victory are ten times more disappointed over the way they have been "thrown down," in the utter disregard, in the forming of Mr. Borden's cabinet, of what they fought for, and voted for, or thought they were voting for.

WEST ENDS DEFEATED BY THE CENTRAL Y. M. C. A., TORONTO

The Local Rugby Game in the O. R. F. U. Series Resulted in Win For Visitors 22-0

There is an old expression, familiar to everyone who reads the sporting page of his daily newspaper "the score does not indicate the play and Saturday's junior O.R.F.U. game between Toronto Central Y.M.C.A., and the local West End team admirably adapts itself to the use of the old stand-by.

The score, when it was all over, was 22 to nothing in favour of the visitors and as one spectator was heard to say, after the game, "Peterborough seemed to have as much of the play as Toronto, but the Centrals did all the scoring." The game indeed, was a much harder fought and better contested battle than one would imagine from the score. West Ends fought the visitors all the way and three-fourths of the struggle was waged in mid-field with honours even. Certainly Manager Barber's organization did not deserve to win by such a top-heavy score. Their three touch-downs were all the result of fumbles on the part of the Peterborough back division. Corkery and Minorgan let a bounding ball get away from them for the first Copping presented the visitors with their second by muffing a point of his own line, and then Denison handed them a third by trying to return a kick with Central wings on top of him and missing the ball altogether. The Central backs did their share of the muffing but luck was with them and the fumbles never came in a dangerous place. Again, they were aided by the fact that the Peterborough wings were slow in dropping on a loose ball, a number of good opportunities being thrown away because of hesitancy in falling on the rolling pig skin.

The West End team was not in the best of shape for a hard battle. Corkery was unable to start the game on account of his injured ankle and Copping, who took his place was not familiar with the signals and the same was true of Minorgan. The enforced retirement before half time of Gilbert, who was playing a splendid game, tackling in fine form and proving by far the best ball getter on the Peterborough line was a disaster that was felt, as was the injury of Johnston necessitating his retirement and another shifting around of the West End back division. Peterborough was thus early forced to fall back on a kicking game and Centrals rendered this method ineffective by proving superior in returning punts, while the Central wings followed up in fine style and nailed the Peterborough backs before they had a chance to return.

It was not a first-class exhibition of rugby by any means, although it was hard fought. Both teams played loosely, and the tackling was uncertain and unskilful with a few exceptions on both sides. There was very little spectacular running, Duke of Centrals having the only long run of the game to his credit, a pretty dodging dash of twenty-five yards for a touch-down. Neither team seemed to be in physical shape for a hard struggle and the game was frequently delayed, while players were being patched up. Some one took the count after nearly every down and the battle was so long drawn out, that that the visitors missed their train and had to remain over.

George Minorgan was worked overtime at centre half for the locals and played a fine game considering that he has had little or no practice. His kicking was good and he ran back punts nicely although he fired badly on end. Capt. Denison worked heroically on the half line and later at quarter, after Johnston was hurt, and did good work at both positions.

Corkery, who hobbled out at half time, especially in view of the handicap he was under, showed good form.

The wing line gave the visiting advance guard a battle all the way, giving their backs good protection and nailing the Centrals' line plays in splendid fashion. The chief fault was in their slowness in dropping on a loose ball Gilbert put up a fine article of football until he was hurt, while Langley, the other outside wing, followed up in fine fashion. Hill, the little centre scrimmager, was conspicuous by some fine tackling Johnston did good work at quarter, especially in intercepting the onside kick play attempted by the visitors on several occasions.

Duke, at centre, and Reid at right half, were the stars of the Toronto back division. The former kicked splendidly, while Reid was especially prominent by his following up and good tackling. Although he had his knee badly hurt in a scrimmage, he never let up and on the first down after his injury he secured a touch-down by fast following up. He was also responsible for the third try secured by the visitors. English did some good bucking for the visitors.

Centrals have a well-balanced team with lots of weight and speed, but they have the same difficulty as the Peterborough team to overcome—lack of facilities for daylight practice.

Dr. McPherson of Peterborough, and Dr. Manning of Centrals, were most satisfactory officials.

The teams lined up as follows:

Central Y. M .C. A.

Full back—Ramsay.
Halves—Reid, Duke, King.
Quarter—Bannerman.
Scrimmage—Reid, Carter, Warner.
Insides—Coakwell, Commodord.

Peterborough got the ball on offside. Minorgan punted to King, at Centrals' 15 yard line, but lost it on second down on a fumble. After an exchage of kicks, Craig lost a bounding ball at Peterborough's 20 yard line. Turner secured it on an attempted drop. Minorgan punted to Reid, who ran 15 yards.

Duke punted over the line to Minorgan, who ran it out nicely ten yards. On first down Minorgan was forced over his own line for a safety touch.—Centrals 4, Peterborough 0.

Centrals lost ground on a long pass out, but recovered the ball. Duke punted to Johnston at centre. Minorgan punted to King, who returned to Minorgan, who ran back 15 yards. Peterborough lost possession on an offside. King punted to Denison at Peterborough's 25-yard line. On onside kick dribbled to Centrals' 50-yard line, Centrals getting the ball. Centrals gained some yards on a run by King. On second down Duke kicked to the dead line. Centrals 5, Peterborough 0.

Reid ran the kick out back ten yards. King went 8 yards on a fake kick, but lost the ball on third down. Minorgan punted to King who returned. Gilbert was hurt in the tackle. Duke kicked to Minorgan, on the 5-yard line. Peterborough lost the ball on offside, but recovered on Centrals' attempted onside kick, just as the whistle blew for half-time.—Centrals 5, Peterborough 0.

Third Quarter.

Peterborough kicked off to Reid and got the ball on Centrals' offside. Corkery gained on the run, but lost the ball on Craig's forward past. King ran to Peterborough's 20-yard line, and Centrals gained ten more on a criss-cross. Duke's punt was blocked and Thompson dribbled to Peterborough's 30 yard line, where Centrals secured. King went five yards. Hill making a beautiful tackle. Duke kicked over to Denison, who was forced to rouge.—Centrals 6, Peterborough 0.

Peterborough secured an offside. Minorgan kicked out at centre. Davidson blocked Centrals' kick, and Peterborough secured. Minorgan kicked to Centrals' 25 yd. line. On Centrals' first down Johnson secured on an attempted onside kick, but was injured in the tackle, retiring in favour of Stewart. Peterborough lost the ball on a blocked kick. Duke punted and the bounding ball got away from the Peterborough backs. Centrals securing for a try, which was not converted.—Centrals 11, Peterborough 0.

Peterborough secured on an offside. Denison made a good gain. Minorgan kicked to King, who fumbled, but recovered on his 5 yard-line. On exchange of kicks Peterborough secured the ball on an attempted onside kick. Minorgan kicked over to Duke, who returned out at the 30-yard line. Denison went 10 yards on a fake buck. Minorgan kicked to Reid, who returned to Bearss, securing at Peterborough's 35 yard line.

Three-quarter time — Centrals 11, Peterborough 0.

Fourth Quarter.

Duke punted to Copping, who fumbled, Centrals secured on Peterborough's 10 yard line. Centrals went over on combination run, but failed to convert the try. Centrals 16, Peterborough 0.

Minorgan's kick was blocked. Craig dribbled out at 40 yard line. Centrals gained 10 yards on buck and end run. Reid went to Peterborough's 15 yard line on long pass, being tackled by Davidson. Peterborough secured on downs. Peterborough lost an offside and Duke kicked over to Denison, who lost the ball on an attempted kick, Centrals falling on ball for an easy try which was not converted. Centrals 21, Peterborough 0.

Centrals returned kick off to Peterborough's 35 yard line. Minorgan kicked to King at Centrals 35 yard line. Duke and Minorgan exchanged punts, Reid running back the latter's kick to Peterborough's 25 yard line. Reid went 20 yards to Peterborough's 15 yard line. On third down, Duke kicked over to Denison, who was forced to rouge for the last score of the game.

Final score—Centrals 22, Peterborough 0

The work of constructing the second of the Grand Trunk's System of palatial hotels has begun at Winnipeg. It has been definitely and finally decided that the Winnipeg hotel, which will be of the same style of architecture as the magnificent "Chateau Laurier" at Ottawa, shall be called "The Fort Garry."

WEST ENDS FOR TORONTO

The West End Rugby team will journey to Toronto on Saturday to play the return game in the junior O.R.F.U. series with the Toronto Central Y.M.C.A. team. The game will be played at Scarboro Beach and the Peterborough team is confident of making a better showing than they did here on Saturday. Naturally a little disappointed, the players are not disheartened and will endeavour to pull out a victory on Saturday. With that end in view, they will practise faithfully every night this week, to-night's practice being called at 7.15 at Central Park. A full attendance of players is expected.

Field Crop Report Of Canada For The Year

OTTAWA, OCT. 16.—A bulletin of the Census and Statistics Office issued to-day deals with the field crops of the present year compared with the figures of the year 1900.

The Census areas of field crops enumerated in the month of June have been compiled for all the province excepting Quebec and British Columbia, and the statistics of principal crops are given in this report, together with estimates of production computed from the reports of a large staff of correspondents at the end of September. The area figures for Saskatchewan are lacking for two districts and those of Nova Scotia for one district, but the totals of the Dominion will be ready for the November monthly and a comparison of areas for the Census years 1901 and 1911 will then be made.

For the years 1909, 1910 and 1911 the comparative quality of crops at the end of September was fairly uniform for wheat, oats, barley and rye; but peas, beans, buckwheat, mixed grains and flax were lower this year by eight to 12 per cent. Fodder crops, including roots and corn, are unchanged for the three years. The condition of potatoes, which is 76.78, is the same as last year, but 13.60 less than two years ago.

The comparative condition of fodder and root crops for the Dominion at the end of September ranges from 82 to 87 per cent., of alfalfa 79.55 per cent., and of potatoes 76.78 per cent., and is generally lower in Ontario than elsewhere. The Maritime provinces and the Northwest provinces give 90 per cent and over for potatoes and nearly as good for other field roots.

The Census enumeration of field crops taken in June shows for the Northwest provinces, together with Ontario and the Maritime provinces, an area of 9,920,021 acres wheat, 7,661,862 acres oats, 1,291,287 acres barley, 133,053 acres rye, and 1,890,615 acres flax—to which will be added the areas for two districts in Saskatchewan. For the harvest year of 1900 the corresponding figures of the census of 1901 were 4,069,738 acres wheat, 3,981,370 acres oats, 765,273 acres barley, 156,352 acres rye, and 21,203 acres flax.

The increase in the production of the principal grains in the decade, computed for the present year on the estimates of correspondents, is shown to be in round numbers, 148,033,000 bushels wheat, 187,049,000 bushels oats, 21,711,000 bushels barley, 664,000 bushels rye, and 12,366,000 bushels flax. These figures are exclusive of returns for two districts in Saskatchewan.

ALGONQUIN NATIONAL PARK

The high altitude of the Algonquin National Park of Ontario is one of the attractions and has much to do with the benefit derived from a visit to it. The elevation above sea level at Algonquin Park station, the objective point on the railway, is 1700 feet. There is tonic quality to the air which must be experienced to be understood. With prevailing winds from the north and the west, the air is purified by its journey over millions of square miles of forest land, much of which is pine and balsam. The "Highland Inn" offers exceptionally good accommodation to visitors and any season of the year is a good time to visit this territory. The Inn is open all the year round. Handsome publication and all information free on application to A. E. Duff, District Passenger Agent, G. T. R'y. Toronto, Ont.

RICHARD HALL & SON. LIMITED

THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron

"Was it Tuesday of Thursday that you met Mr. Someone?

"Tuesday.'

"Are you sure?"

"Why, let me see. I don't know. Ithink it was Tuesday, but I'm not SURE."

Surely that conversation must have a familiar ring to you. I made it up right out of my head, but I tried to have it typical of the thousand and one similar conversations that you and I have heard.

How few people in this world are SURE!

It is customary to inveigh against the cocksure people who make positive statements on insufficient grounds, but I am inclined to think that they are much rarer and much less of a pest than the people who never are SURE.

You ask them about the simplest thing—did they leave the house before or after two o'clock, was such-and-such a window shut, was there a light in Mr. So-and-So's house when they passed, and they cannot be sure.

Probably they will answer you postively and promptly at first, but if you press them with the question, "Are you SURE?" they back down.

They THINK so. As far as they can remember, it was so-and-so. They are PRETTY sure. But SURE—unmodified sure—no, they can't be that.

Do you know, I think that the unwillingness to be sure is a kind of cowardice.

We are afraid to stand by our own knowledge, we are afraid to rely on our own minds, we don't care to know what we know.

Of course, to be foolish and unjustifiably positive about things, is a fault. But it is at least the fault of the doer, and I can't but believe that his faults will be more easily forgiven than those of the eternal hanger-back.

You remember how often Peter made mistakes. You remember his greatest mistake—that positive ascertion that he failed to live up to. And yet, I think most people have a peculiarly kindly feeling toward Peter, and somehow, I've always fancied that the Lord especially loved Peter. You see, his mistakes were always those of the doer.

Never to dare to be sure is a lukewarm, unlovable weakness, the weakness of the "wet rag that goes safely by the fire."

The successful business men are always sure.

The great reformers are always sure.

Big people of any kind are always sure. That's part of their bigness.

Trust thyself is second only in importance to know thyself.

Train your child to be sure. Teach him when he knows a thing to know it, and not to be backed down by any challenge and you will have given him a habit of mind that will undoubtedly lead to courage and self-reliance.

New Registration In The Provincial Elections

TORONTO, OCT. 16.—It is practically certain that there will have to be a new registration of voters for the coming Provincial election. A. H. Birmingham, Conservative Organizer, was at the parliament buildings this morning to consult the authorities. The concensus of opinion is that a new registration will have to be held. A study is being made of the statute, and if any road out of the necessity is left open advantage will be taken of it.

Neither side wants the registration. It will only add materially to the expense of the candidates, as it means that committee rooms will hav to be opened and a staff of clerks secured to see that every one is notified and has his name put on the list. The lists made for the Dominion election was in many cases made by the Provincial officers and would quite fill the bill for the Provincial elections. The Dominion Act permits the use of a Provincial list in Dominion elections, but the Provincial statute does not allow for any reciprocity in the matter. It says that where an election is being held and a new list has not been made within a year, a new list must be prepared. A new list has been made within a year, but, being a Dominion list, it does not come within the terms of the statute.

PARALYZED LIMBS

To-day it is sleeplessness, headaches, digestive trouble, and irritability. Next thing you know some form of paralysis has developed. Mr. Alex. Homburger, 10 Moore Street, St. Catharines, Ont., writes: "Nervous trouble developed into paralysis of the limbs so that I became helpless. Doctors failed me, but after using ten boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I resumed work, and now feel better than I did for 20 years."

WANTS VEGETABLES

The Examiner has received a letter from Mr .E. Latimer of North Cobalt, Ont., inquiring as to the lowest price at which potatoes and other vegetables may be procured here. Evidently vegetables are at a premium in the north country.

MEN'S MISSIONARY CONVENTION TO BE HELD IN HAMILTON

One of the Most Far-Reaching Gatherings of Recent Years—Delegates Will Number From 1,000 to 2,000.

PROMINENT SPEAKERS

The coming convention of Men's Missionary forces in Hamilton, Nov. 8,9 and 10, promises to be one of the most far-reaching gatherings of recent years. Well organized Committees are at work representing Transportation, Reception, Registration, Publicity, Finance and Programme. Mr. George C. Coppley is the Executive Chairman, and with him are associated some of Hamilton's ablest business men. From 1,000 to 2,000 delegates are being planned for, and they are being secured in an energetic manner. The Centenary church will be the Convention auditorium, and adjacent churches used for overflow and sectional meetings.

Among many prominent speakers, Sir Andrew Fraser, of Scotland, late Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, India, and Robert E. Speer, of New York, are the leading lights. Mr. Speer is an expert on world-wide missionary matters. He has made a deep, personal study of the entire field, and by voice and pen has eloquently and effectively championed and popularized the foreign missionary cause. He has a statesman-like way of putting the whole case and has a compelling world vision that appeals to keen business men, and his spirit of enthusiastic optimism is contagious. Mr. Speer is deeply devotional and has a firm grip on Scripture, prayer and eternal realities. He has a wonderful knack of making them exceedingly practical. He has a well-trained mind, and marshals his arguments with clear logic and convincing appeal. He is mild in manner, simple in gesture, always under perfect control, never is unduly emotional, but makes a sane, strong presentation of his case.

These characteristics have endeared him to the student world. He is a student's man. Only his colleague in the work, John R. Mott, can attract and hold such vast audiences of college students the world over. They are a masterly pair of Christian statesmen. Mott has the stragetic political grasp of world affairs. Speer is the close student of world movements and analyzing them, spiritually interprets them sympathetically and effectively to the student mind.

He appears regularly upon all the student volunteer and missionary platforms and is always fresh and virile. His strength of character and spiritual poise mark him out as a born leader of men. Hamilton is indeed fortunate in securing the services of this rare character. It is safe to say that the capacity of the Convention Church will be taxed to its utmost, and already plans are under way for overflow meetings.

A signed-up delegation is being secured on the membership plan for the convention, out-of-town delegates paying a dollar membership. The membership secures special seat reservation, the souvenir programme and convention badge, and pays convention expenses. All ministers are expected to attend, and are accorded complimentary membership.

The Great Commission.

The following are extracts from an address by Robert E. Speer, New York, who comes to the Laymen's convention here next month:

"The last command of Christ which we call the Great Commission," said Dr. Speer, in the course of his address, "is not the foundation of the missionary obligation. If these words had never been uttered by our Lord, or if the record of those words had or if the record of those words had not been preserved, the missionary obligation of the church would be in no wise affected thereby. The missionary obligation rests on the character of God, on the universality of the Gospel, on the unity and the need of all humanity. The Great Commission does not create; it states an obligation. These words of Christ do not constitute our duty; they merely define it for us. Nevertheless it is a great thing to have it defined in this clear and authoritative way.

The Great Commission reveals to us our Lord's view of the finality and the authoritativeness of the Christian religion, makes plain to us what was our Lord's view of the finality and the authoritativeness of His faith, not on reflection or on defensive apologetics.

The way by which the Gospel was to be safeguarded, in our Lord's view was by the wholesome hygienic reflex influence of conquest and action and power. The Great Commission gives the church what her life requires, namely, a great and living cause; also makes that cause, what every great cause must be, a personal cause. It not only proposes a great personal end, but a consuming and overwhelming personal motive, and not only demands of us that we should feel the fire, it demands of us also that we should in our day sit down quietly before our project and adapt our means to the effecting of the great end for which our Saviour waits. It demands, for one thing, that we should rediscover what the great objective of the Christian church is; that we should cease laying our emphasis where we do lay it now—on personal spiritual cultivation, on the better nourishment of the already fed, on the defensive apologetics of the Christian faith—that we should lay our emphasis where our Lord laid it, on the great and dominating purposes of the conquest of all life for Christ. It demands, in the second place, that we should re-enthrone that objective in its original place, and should readjust all the activities of the church so as to recognize that objective as the great and supreme business of the church. In the third place, it calls for coordination and solidification for a real war. And the fourth thing for which the Great Commission calls is the acceptance by each individual man of the fiduciary principle of life. He must realize that what he is and all things he has are not his own, but Christ's; that they were given him by Christ, not for his enjoyment and his selfish use, but for Christ's use, that they might be fitted into Christ's great project of a world's conquest.

And in closing, one thing the Great Commission makes to us. It lets us into the secret the secret of all joy and power. "All authority hath been given unto Me. Go ye, therefore, and make disciples of all the nations, and lo! I am with you all the days." It shows us the one way by which we can bring the Lord in His power back into the midst of His people again.

Robert E. Speer is the general secretary of the board of foreign missions of the Presbyterian Church in the United States. He is a Princeton man, and expected to go to the foreign field, but his executive capacity led the leaders in the Presbyterian Church to insist upon his remaining in the office in New York. He enjoys the distinction of being one of the very few men who is not a clergyman, and yet has received the degree of Doctor of Divinity, which has been conferred upon him by the University of Edinburgh conference on missions.

Difficulty In Securing Jurors

LOS ANGELES, OCT. 14.—The third day of court session in the trial of James B. McNamara for the murder of Chas. J. Haggerty, a victim of the Los Angeles Times explosion and fire on Oct. 1, 1910, finds still no juror accepted even tentatively. To-day further argument was heard as to the eligibility of Z. T. Nelson, the first talesman under discussion. From behind a battery of law books, Attorneys for the prosecution and defence wrangled as to Nelsons' eligibility, delving deep into the realms of precedent cases on the bias of talesmen.

On Monday Judge Walter Bordwell will render a decision as to whether or not bias or prejudice is contained in Nelsons' admissions on the stand that he had formed certain opinions concerning the blowing up of the Times building.

Attorney G. Ray Horton concluded the argument of the State that Nelson, though admitting he held opinions about the case, had shown his impartiality by announcing that he would waive these opinions in lieu of the evidence introduced.

Other Opinions Quoted.

Attorney Cyrus McNutt of Indiana, finished the discussion for the defence, citing numerous cases where privious impressions admitted by a talesman had been regarded by the courts as sufficient to disqualify him.

"Anyone can see that Nelson is prejudiced against McNamara," remarked Mr. Darrow, chief counsel for the defence, "and he has his own theories, too, by personal investigation that the Times building was blown up by dynamite."

The defence considers the question of cause of the explosion a moot point, and will argue that it was due to gas.

"Nelson has said he would set aside his own opinions and receive the evidence impartially," was the expressed attitude of District Attorney Fredericks. "I don't see how we ever will get an intelligent jury if we bar everyone who has settled opinions on the case."

It was intimated by Mr. Darrow before court opened to-day that should the court disallow the challenge for cause against Nelson, a peremptory challenge at any rate would be exercised against him by the defence.

What Nelson Thinks.

The point at issue about Nelson is that he is on the record as having said that he had an opinion concerning McNamara's guilt or innocence; that he had held such opinions for about four months, and that it would take strong evidence to dislodge it. Judge Bordwell announced that he would go over the record on this point.

"Never before have I seen an officer of the State asking the defence to take a juror, who has sworn that he has held an opinion for months as to the defendant's guilt or innocence, and that it would take strong evidence to remove that opinion."

While Attorney Horton was making his argument, Darrow walked up and down the scanty one-third of the court room allowed to judge, defendant, jury and counsel, his hands behind his back, seemingly to pay close attention.

McNamara throughout the day sat against the rail, clasping his knees with his hands and looking steadily at his counsel.

At the close of court Sheriff Wm. Rammil and a deputy escorted the prisoner, unmanacled from the Hall of Records through the adjoining court house corridor and across the narrow street, where his brother, John J. McNamara, is confined, awaiting his urn for trial.

Othe Unconscious Humour.

The sombre court room scene where opposing counsel argued for every point of advantage in the struggle over a man's life, was relieved once or twice by touches of unconscious humour, which seemed to appeal to the court. Once when G. Ray Horton, the bald-looking Attorney who, single-handed, made the long arguments for the State, assured the court he was not intending to "swing an effigy of fear to terrify your honour" Judge Bordwell smiled broadly.

The Food Route Is the Safest Way To Steady Health

Many people are kept ill because they do not know how to select food that their own particular bodies will take up and build upon.

What will answer for one will not do for another.

If one is ailing it is safe to change food entirely and go on a plain, simple diet, say:

Cooked fruit
Dish of Grape-Nuts and Cream
2 Soft eggs
1 Cup Postum
Slice of Crisp Toast,
no more.

Man! But a diet like that makes one feel good after a few days use.

The most perfectly made food for human use is

Grape-Nuts

SUPPORTED HIM

Food that Saved when Everything Else Failed

The food route is a safe and very sure road back to health.

"For six years I was a serious sufferer from indigestion and general stomach troubles, from the improperly cooked food in boarding houses and restaurants of which I was a victim.

"During three of the six years, I was so bad off nervous prostration set in and I sought relief of a specialist without success. I had gotten so that I could eat almost nothing and was steadily losing flesh.

"Many different foods and preparations were recommended for a trial, without success, and I had become indifferent to all food.

"Some months after seeing your ad. in the daily papers about the scientifically prepared food, Grape-Nuts, and its good qualities, and being driven almost to despair over my plight, I skeptically resolved to give Grape-Nuts a trial as a last resort. And I thank God that I did.

"From my first meal of Grape-Nuts, I felt a great change for the better; the knot that arose in the chest after meals disappeared; the stomach ceased its uneasiness, and gradually the nervousness disappeared.

"For about a year I ate Grape-Nuts and cream three times a day, and have gained 54 pounds of lost weight, and weigh five pounds more than I ever did, and now do not feel any trouble in using my old-time relishes with my Grape-Nuts.

"I expect to be married soon, and I do not expect Grape-Nuts to be eliminated from my bill of fare as long as I live. If my testimony will help some poor mortal, place my letter conspicuously where it can be read. I will gladly answer letters." Name given by Canadian Postum Co., Windsor, Ont.

"Grape-Nuts contain all the constituents of a complete food and in a highly assimilable state," says the "London Lancet."

BOYS CHARGED WITH SERIOUS OFFENCES

Band of Six Fifteen-Year-Old Youngsters Charged With Having Committed Number of Petty Robberies---Alleged to Have Broken Into Schools and Into St. James' Church.

Six fifteen-year-old boys are said to be the culprits, who within the last month, have committed several petty robberies, in the south end of the city. On Sept. 9th St. James' church was entered and a gold watch and $5.00 were stolen from coats which had been left in the basement, by some of the boys playing ball. On Oct. 4th the King Edward school was entered by one of the basement windows, the screen having been broken and desks broken and other minor damage done Friday night, a week later, the King Edward was again broken into, and more damage of a similar nature done. On Sept. 24th, the Lake street school was entered and desks were turned over, and small articles were stolen. Again, about Sept. 27th the school was entered and some more things taken. The boys who are charged with committing this series of robberies, will appear before Magistrate Dumble in the police court within a week's time.

MR. T. CURZON GIVES IMPRESSIONS OF CANADA

Member of Famous London Tailoring Firm in Peterboro' To-day—Curzon Bros. Score Another Triumph.

WIN GOLD MEDALS

Mr. T. Curzon, of Curzon Bros., London, England, is in the city, at the Oriental Hotel, to-day and to-morrow having come through from the Pacific Coast, on a most successful business trip. He is much impressed by the prosperity of Canada on all sides, and sees for the Dominion a very great future.

Mr. Curzon's trip has been undertaken with a view o getting into closer touch with the firm's patrons and friends in Canada, and he is extremely gratified at the result of his tour.

On arrival here from the West he learned of a further victory of the firm at home, where the House of Curzon was successful in securing a Gold Medal, awarded for the excellency of their tailoring products at the Festival of the Empire Exhibition in the Crystal Palace, which makes the fifth similar honour of merit awarded the firm.

It is doubtless already the knowledge of our readers that Curzon's specialize in the production of tailoring styles, both in London and New York fashions. The business is the largest of its kind in the world.

24,000 TROOPS DISPATCHED AGAINST THE REPUBLICAN REVOLUTIONISTS

Special to The Examiner:

PEKIN, OCT. 16. — Twenty-four thousand troops have been sent from here and other loyal cities to attack Republican revolutionary cities in the inte rior. Despatches received here are to the effect that the missionaries and other foreigners are safe, the revolutionists giving them better treatment than some government officials. The government officers say they will soon extinguish the revolution and have leaders beheaded in a month. In the meantime, foreign financiers are objecting to further finance, the government suggesting that Ruling Regent and his family disgorge for his own protection, some of the millions in gold known to be herded in his private vaults.

Congregation Of Charlotte St. Church Favoured With A Splendid Address

Rev. W. S. Griffin, D.D., of Toronto, greatly impressed the congregation of Charlotte Street church, yesterday morning, by a most splendid and eloquent sermon. Rev. Dr. Griffin is a "grand old man" of the Methodist Church, being in his eighty-sixth year, sixty-three of which have been spent in the sacred calling, of which he has made such a brilliant success. He has the power of speech and expression to an extent, which few ministers possess, appearing to speak from the very depths of his heart, and holding the attention of his congregation in a remarkable manner. The Reverend speaker said that people had wondered, of later years, why he was not superannuated, but if they could only know how he loved preaching, he explained, they would not wonder any longer. There was a large congregation assembled, and the service was brightened by beautiful and appropriate music by the choir. Rev. G. W. Henderson, pastor the church, assisted in the service.

Rev. Dr. Griffin chose his text from the 5th and 6th verses of the 137th Psalm:

"If I forget thee, O Jerusalem, let my right hand forget her cunning. If I do not remember thee, let my tongue cleave to the roof of my mouth: if I prefer not Jerusalem before my chief joy."

"For there they carried us (the Israelites) away captive required of us a song; and they that wasted us required of us mirth, saying, sing us one of the songs of Zion."

The reverend speaker drew a picture of British captives singing their national song, and the army of their country coming to their aid, and showed the comparison with the present instance. "Why did they not sing?" he asked. Nothing can prevent us from singing the songs that prove our loyalty. Then, how would a song, which is of loyalty in one case, be of disloyalty in another? "They that wasted us, required of us mirth." They dealt with God's providential care like children. If they had sung the song at that time, they would have exposed themselves to their enemies. Just at that time, it was well to be silent. There are times when it is well to keep our song to ourselves. There is a time when it must be regulated, and so it was now. The fires of that patriotism are not extinguished, for the Jews, even to-day, burn sacrifices.

"Jerusalem my happy home; when shall I go back to Jerusalem?" They are all longing for Jerusalem, and at the present time, they are going in there in enormous crowds. Real estate is going up; in the last few months, it has gone up from 100 to 150 per cent; speculation is great, and the Jews want to go back. Let them go. It is their privilege to go, and it is a symbol of the love that you and I should have for our Jerusalem, for Zion, the church of the living God. You must not look upon the church as one of the many organizations, such as the Masons or any such societies. It is not one of these at all. It is one above all these—the one upon which all these rest—the grand old mother of all the good organizations. We should have something more than common respect for our church. Love her—love her as a man loves a joyful home. Fondly linger about her altar and her aisels—listen to her songs, and so love it ever and ever.

The text contains strong words: "If I prefer not Jerusalem, before my chief joy." Love where there is preference. You are willing to make sacrifice for unspeakable pleasure. It is true of thousands that their hearts are broken because they are unable to do for those they love, what they would like to do. Doing something more than we would do for somebody else. Then we prefer Jerusalem—and our chief joy. If we love Zion, we do not simply love the walls and the pews, etc., but we love what Zion contains. We have got to love, and if our love is pure love, the ingenuity of our minds will show us a thousand ways in which our love may be expressed.

Lay your head on the bosom of the Lord, and rejoice to speak of Him who gave His life for you. What ar I able to do. He found me in my low state and fallen and he lifted me up. Love your church and all in the church. Christ loved you when you were unlovely. He loves you now, when you are not nearly so lovely, perhaps, as you think you are. Love and be loved, and enter into the everlasting joy.

Rev. Dr. Griffin preached to a large congregation at George Street Methodist church in the evening.

Dear Sir,—To-night you mention "the sixty-fifth report of the British Commissioners on Lunacy." Let me tell you for the sixtieth time that there is no such British Government department. It might be better if there were. Also, let me say again, there is no such thing as insanity, and I am willing to give $100 to the local hospital if the local medical men would give a reasonable definition. The silly Review might make such errors, but not a Liberal paper, such as the Examiner.

OBITUARY

ELLEN ROGERS.

One of Peterborough's oldest and most respected citizens passed away yesterday, in the person of Mrs. Ellen Rogers, of Murray street.

The deceased, who had reached the ripe age of eighty years, was born in Ireland, and came to Canada when about fourteen years of age. She settled in Peterborough, which city has been her home ever since Mrs. Rogers was the last of her family.

She is survived by three daughters, Mrs. Derocher, of Peterborough, Mrs. Keneally of Ashland, Wis., Sister Agnes of Villemarie, Montreal, and one son, Edward of Rochester, N.Y.

The funeral arrangements have yet to be decided upon.

RICHARD HOWELL

In the death at Millbrook of Mr Richard Howell, which occurred yesterday, Millbrook has lost one of her oldest and most highly respected citizens.

The late Mr. Howell, who was 75 years of age, had been a resident of Millbrook all his life ,with the exception of ten years which he spent in Toronto. He was prominently identified with the early growth of the village, and always took a deep and active interest in any venture that was for the best interests of the town. He early established himself in the grocery business until the weight of advancing years demanded that a less strenuous occupation be sought. In all his business and personal relations with his fellow men Mr. Howell was scrupulously conscientious, a characteristic which entered into his whole life, and went to forming a high character which won for him the universal respect of the community, in which he passed the long years of a successful life.

In 1877 Mr. Howell was united in marriage to Miss Elizabeth Gardiner, daughter of the late Mr. Matthew Gardiner. After a short fourteen months of married life she passed away to the great beyond. One child was left to bless their union, namely, Elizabeth, now Mrs. Wilson Montgomery of Embro. His second wife, Mrs. Peterson, whom he married four years later, predeceased him about five years ago.

In politics he was a Liberal of strong, but undemonstrative convictions, and in religion he was a Methodist, being one of the fast vanishing type, who by action rather than word-sought to advance the faith and convictions of the church which he represented.

Mr. Howell leaves behind him the memory of a life of usefulness, marked by the characteristics that distinguish the highest type of Christian gentleman, and a name held in respect and esteem by all who were fortunate enough to know him.

GETS SEVEN YEARS.

Richard P. Canning Goes to Penitentiary For Forgery.

Chatham, Oct. 17.—Richard P. Canning, convicted of uttering about $2,000 worth of forged checks on the local branch of the Dominion Bank, was yesterday afternoon sentenced to seven years in Kingston Penitentiary by Magistrate Houston.

Canning's career is one of pathetic interest. An accountant and mathematician, with an international reputation, he twice previously served long terms in Sing Sing Prison for forgery. On both occasions he had his terms shortened for good behaviour, and he established a system of bookkeeping in Sing Sing that is in existence in that institution to-day. It was while in Sing Sing that he conceived the idea of coming to Canada and making a clean start in life.

Walking the streets of Hamilton, Ont., without a dollar in his pockets the ex-convict got a menial job in one of the largest factories in the Ambitious City, where his ability was at once recognized, and he was promoted to one of the highest positions of trust in the factory office. Later he came to Chatham, where he acted as accountant for the Bent Goods Co.

It was here he met his third Waterloo. On the eve of accepting a high position with the biggest manufacturing institution in the western peninsula, he ran short of funds and forged the names of friends.

Canning blames the cards, fascinating women and the racetracks for his downfall.

Turkey Breaks With Powers.

New York, Oct. 17.—A cable from Constantinople says:—

It is stated officially that negotiations between the Powers and Turkey with a view to the restoration of peace, have been broken off.

Turkey declares that the propositions made by the Powers looking to peace cannot be accepted with honor, and due regard for Turkish national feeling.

Constantinople, Oct. 17.—The Government yesterday issued a decree of expulsion against all Italian professors and school masters now in Turkey.

Rome (via frontier), Oct. 17.—The last contingent of the Italian army expedition arrived off Tripoli during Sunday night. The troops are destined to provide garrisons along the coast, particularly at Benghazi and Derna.

The aviation corps is occupied in constructing sheds for the aeroplanes.

The Scheme Didn't Work.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Oct. 17.—Basil Eliopolis, a Greek merchant from Woodstock, was fined $50 by Magistrate Fraser for assisting George Capatosh to enter Canada illegally, by giving him the return portion of his ticket from Buffalo to Woodstock. Eliopolis bought a one-way ticket for himself. Capatosh was fined $5 and deported.

Town Swept By Fire.

Fort Smith, Ark., Oct. 17.—An excited telephone message early yesterday from Bonanza, a town of 800 inhabitants, fifteen miles from here, says that the town was doomed by fire, which started late Sunday night.

RIOT IN ITALY OVER CHOLERA PRECAUTIONS

Ignorant Townsmen Destroy City in Segni, Italy---Rumours Spread That the Government Intended to Poison the Patients in Quarantine and Thousands Are Up in Arms

Rome, (via frontier) Oct. 17.—Very grave disorders occurred yesterday at Segni, a town of 7,000 population, one-half hour by railway from Rome, and the centre of a district in which is Carpineto, the birthplace of Pope Leo XIII., still surrounded with the ruins of towers erected in the middle ages for protection against the Saracens.

The rioting was caused, as was the case in Calabria recently, by the action of the municipality in adopting measures to stamp out the cholera. There are five patients at the hospitals, and four suspects are quarantined in a house. The inhabitants believed that the Government intended to poison the cholera patients and a great crowd marching to the City Hall demanded their release.

There were only four carabineers in the place, and when they attempted to defend the building, they were cloned, wounded and put to flight. Later they returned only to be again routed. They did not use their weapons, as they would have been of little avail against the mob, which by that time had been swollen until it numbered several thousand, practically the entire population.

The mob broke in the doors of the municipal buildings seeking the mayor, whom they held primarily responsible. However, the mayor and his clerks had made good their escape, and found refuge with friends in a house where they could not be found.

Failing to lay hold of the mayor, the mob sacked the building and then burned it.

The sight of the flames appeared to add to the frenzy of the rioters, and when a woman, seizing the municipal flag from the burning structure, cried: "To the hospital, to the hospital; death to the doctors," the suggestion caught the fancy of the crowd, and in another moment the thousands of shrieking and gesticulating men, women and children were bearing down on the hospital. The doors were forced, the attendants swept aside, and the cholera patients lifted from their cots and carried to the street.

Meantime others broke into the house where the suspects were quarantined, and took them from the place. Something like a procession was then formed, and the sick were borne in triumph to their homes. Of the nine stricken persons two were on the point of death, and it was a ghastly exhibition as they were passed from hand to hand, embraced, kissed and fondled by their half-mad friends.

While this was going on some of the local authorities managed to send a message to Rome, and troops were hurriedly sent from the capital.

The soldiers restored order after many of the mob had been placed under arrest.

OPENING OF SESSION IS ANNOUNCED FOR NOV. 13

Date Fixed by the Cabinet-in-Council Yesterday---Session is Expected to End Early in February---Length Depends Upon the Activity of the Opposition.

Ottawa, Oct. 17.—The new Parliament will be called for the despatch of business on Nov. 15. This date was fixed by the Cabinet-in-Council yesterday afternoon and announced later by Premier Borden.

The session will not be unduly prolonged. After a brief adjournment at Christmas prorogation will be sought by the end of January or first week in February. These, it is learned, are the plans of the Government. The Ministers will set about the work of preparing their estimates for the fiscal year, which commences on April 1 next.

The length of the session naturally depends largely upon the activity of the Opposition, but it is not expected that any stumbling block will be laid by Sir Wilfrid Laurier and his supporters to the speedy transaction of the first term of the new Parliament.

There is something coming to the far-famed headquarters' staff of the Canadian militia under the Hughes administration. The new Minister proposes to bridge the gap dividing the Department from the militia itself. For this purpose he has in preparation a plan for holding a gathering of senior officers of the militia at Ottawa in a very short time.

According to the present shape in which the project is, the meeting will be convened on Thursday, Nov. 16, the day of the formal reading of the speech from the throne to the new Parliament, the discussion can thus run over Thursday and Friday, and if necessary on Saturday, while in addition there will be a specially large and representative gathering of militia officers for the first drawing-room of the soldier duke.

An agenda paper, is being drawn up; it will include organization matters, questions as to training, interior economy, recruiting, the bringing of military training into more sympathetic touch with the country, etc.

The roster of the new Government was completed when Hon. Martin Burrell, the new Minister of Agriculture, arrived in Ottawa yesterday morning, and was sworn in by His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught, at 11 o'clock. The ceremony took place in the office of the Governor-General in the east block of the Parliament Buildings, over which is hoisted the duke's standard. Premier Borden was present.

The duke congratulated Mr. Burrell and expressed a warm feeling for the province of British Columbia, from which he had received more messages of welcome than from any of the other provinces of Canada. The Governor-General spent most of the morning in his office.

The first deputation to wait on the Duke of Connaught at Government House was one of several members of the Veterans' Association of 1885 Edward Kidd, M.P.-elect for Carleton was among the number. The duke himself is a veteran, and was pleased to receive their greetings and congratulations.

Hon. Mr. Burrell will return to British Columbia almost immediately, in case there is to be a bye-election. The chances for the contest are, however, remote, for the new Minister's majority on Sept. 21st was something like two thousand.

Warrants for the payment of the inside and outside civil service were put through at a Cabinet Council held yesterday afternoon.

The amount raised will be sufficient to carry the service on from Sept. 1st to the meeting of Parliament, when further supplies will be voted.

Eugene Dahne, of Rio Janeiro, has been appointed to be commissioner for Brazil to Canada.

Monk Calls a Halt.

Ottawa, Oct. 17.—Mayor Hopewell, and City Treasurer Ellis yesterday morning had an interview with Hon. Mr. Monk, Minister of Public Works, regarding the Chatts Falls water power question. After the conference the mayor said:

"I called upon the honorable the Minister of Public Works this morning, and in an interview we showed the Minister a plan of the Chatts Falls, and extracts of a grant of part of Victoria Island and a number of other islands, made some years ago by the Ontario (Liberal) Government for a few hundred dollars. The hon. Minister agreed that it was simply an outrage, and that when the matter had come to his attention he had promptly ordered that no further action be taken until he had had an opportunity to look into the matter."

"Trial Engagement" Now.

Newport, R.I., Oct. 17.—Harold Vanderbilt and Miss Eleanora Sears have entered into a "trial engagement" to last for the period of one year.

This is the confidential announcement made by Mrs. Frederick H. Sears, of Boston, mother of the young woman whom society looks on with interest as having won the heart of the younger son of William K. Vanderbilt.

TREASURY IS BROKE

China Needs More Money to Crush the Revolution

REBELS WELL ARMED

Pekin, Oct. 17—Simultaneously with the acceptance yesterday by Yuan Shi Kai of the post of viceroy of Hu-Peh and Hunan Provinces, to which he is directed to proceed and immediately re-establish the imperial authority, the Government is showing remarkable activity, even in the face of a depleted treasury. The Government seems to realize at last the necessity of crushing the rebellion promptly, and is now despatching the army to the scene of the revolt as hastily as preparations can be made.

A few messages are beginning to arrive from the south, where several days previously was entirely cut off from telegraph communication. But the telegraph lines are open, few details of the situation in the affected provinces are filtering in. It is believed, however, that a certain measure of order is being maintained at Wu-Chang and Hankow. Outside of the foreign concessions in Hankow, these two cities are in the hands of the revolutionists, and the fact that all the women and children have left or are leaving Hankow indicates that the forces under the insurgent leaders, well armed and well ammunitioned from the arsenal store, are preparing to resist the Chinese army, several divisions of which are either on the road to Hankow or are being rapidly fitted out for the expedition.

The re-inforcement of the American legation guard by a hundred men, who are proceeding from Manila, while not significant of danger, is nevertheless indicative of the seriousness of the situation even in Pekin. Chinese respect for foreigners, which is often cringing, still continues up to the customary standard. This is due largely to the lesson of 1900, and it is not believed that the legation quarter will be subjected to more than inconveniences, owing to the rise in the prices of foodstuffs and possible disorders in the native city.

An indication of the activity being displayed by the Government is given in the despatch from Pao-Ting-Fu of twenty-four army trains in the last four days. Twelve trains will be despatched from Pekin, and the sixth division, which is now quartered at Pao-Ting-Fu, will leave as soon as conditions quiet down there. After the departure of a single passenger train to-day, the railway between Pekin and Tien Tsin was closed to all but troop traffic.

Gen. Yin Tchang, the Minister of War, who will have chief command of the Government troops, is a small, thin, queue-less Manchu. The German and Austrian officers who hold the general's greatest confidence, report that he has not entire faith in the Chinese troops. According to the Chinese people generally, the Manchus were tolerable when they protected the country, but are now worthless. The vast body of Chinese sympathize with the revolutionists and a significant saying of the soldiers, who are proceeding to the south, is: "An ordinary rebellion would be all right, but we must now fight against our trained brothers."

The situation depends on money, and it is admitted that the ready funds of the Chinese Government are low. Further loans by foreign bankers have been refused. If the pay of the troops is increased and is regularly forthcoming, and if the men are well fed, they may not desert or rebel. The feeling in Pekin is, not which army is the stronger, but which is the less feeble, the less disorganized.

Yuan Shi Kai yesterday accepted the vice-royalty of Huan and Hu-Peh Provinces to the great joy of the Foreign Board, and in other official circles, among whom the belief is strong that the name of Yuan will be sufficient to strike terror in the hearts of the revolutionists and cause them to surrender.

Pessimism, however, dominates among the general public and Chinese officials as well as others are sending their families away from the capital. Yesterday morning's train to Tien Tsin was crowded.

An edict issued yesterday orders the distribution of rice among the poor; and the opening of the Pekin granaries for the sale of grain at low prices.

Disabled Government Gunboats.

San Francisco, Oct. 17.—News of the first engagement between the Chinese revolutionists and the imperial forces was received here yesterday. A cablegram to The Chinese Free Press, published here, gives an account of the disabling of three Government gunboats by the revolutionists near Hankow Sunday.

Two other boats of the flotilla, one of which carried Sai Ching, viceroy of the Hu-Peh Province, escaped. It is reported at the local headquarters of the Revolutionary Government, that the 1,500 men under Gen. Ching Piao revolted and joined the revolutionists. From Hong Kong, it was reported that 10,000 troops came over to join Li Yuen Hung, commander of the revolutionary army.

China Wants Money.

Pekin, Oct. 17.—The Government appears to have sufficient ready money for a campaign of six weeks or two months, but, anxious for a reserve fund in view of the possibility of a more extended conflict with the revolutionists, yesterday applied formally for a loan of $3,000,000, to the international bankers, who arranged the $50,000,000 currency reform loan. The group of financiers to represent four nations, the United States, Great Britain, Germany and France, were unable to agree to do this, and the loan was refused.

Italy Denies the Report.

Rome, Oct. 17.—The Italian Government emphatically denies the report which has been given some currency that Italy is mobilising on the Austrian frontier.

Reports from Cyrenaica estimate the total number of Turks in that territory as five hundred.

A proclamation issued by the Governor of Tripoli prohibits the importation of arms and grain.

Autumn is the Time — FOR — GLASSES WHY?

The increasingly long evenings of Autumn give greater opportunity for Sewing, Writing, Reading, Study, and as this is necessarily by artificial light the strain upon the eyes is such as to make Glasses quite a boom at this season of the year. This no doubt accounts for much of the present increased demand for Glasses.

Appointment for examining the eyes for Glasses is usually necessary.

She has been searching for 19 years to try and locate her father, and has just succeeded through a letter she placed in a newspaper at Liverpool. She and her husband will leave in a few days on a visit to her father.

Open Season For Pheasants.

St. Catharines, Oct. 17.—The shooting season for English pheasants opened yesterday, and there is a great gathering of gunners from Toronto, Hamilton and Buffalo. This is about the only place in the country where there are pheasants. Owners of farms have put up "No trespass" signs, and under the Ontario game laws there is a fine of $20 for shooting on private property.

Baby Kills Younger Brother.

Rochester, N.Y., Oct. 17.—Mrs. Robert Agnew placed her two babies in a crib Sunday and gave Elmer, 10 months old, the older, a nursing bottle.

The child, after satisfying his hunger, began to play with the bottle. Holding it at arms length, he let it fall. The bottle struck his baby brother on the head, killing him instantly.

WHAT I WENT THROUGH

Before taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Natick, Mass.—"I cannot express what I went through during the change of life before I tried Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I was in such a nervous condition I could not keep still. My limbs were cold, I had creepy sensations, and I could not sleep nights. I was finally told by two physicians that I also had a tumor. I read one day of the wonderful cures made by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and decided to try it, and it has made me a well woman. My neighbors and friends declare it had worked a miracle for me. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is worth its weight in gold for women during this period of life. If it will help others you may publish my letter."—Mrs. NATHAN B. GREATON, 81 N. Main Street, Natick, Mass.

The Change of Life is the most critical period of a woman's existence. Women everywhere should remember that there is no other remedy known to medicine that will so successfully carry women through this trying period as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If you would like special advice about your case write a confidential letter to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. Her advice is free, and always helpful.

"The Gun Runner"

By ARTHUR STRINGER

"What were you?" she was asking him, her note of frustration seeming to merge into one of distrust.

"I'll have to go back, away back, to make even that clear to you."

"Please do."

"Well, it was over five years ago that I first went to Peru, to look after the electrical equipment of the Pachita Water Power Corporation. They had to protect the forests on their power watersheds, so I wired their whole countryside and equipped their fire-rangers with portable telephones. That meant they could cut in anywhere and send for help in case of emergency. But a peon or a gaucho wouldn't stand for witchcraft like that, and the mandador sorrowfully intimated that I was too modern.

"So I next found myself in Nicaragua, with the task of superintending certain telegraph-construction work for Zelaya. When that was finished, for two years I was in the intelligence department of the Brasilian government, but the climate wasn't the sort that a white man could thrive on, and I had to give it up. Then, when the Masso Parra trouble first broke out Magoon invited me over to Pinar del Rio and consigned me to a wireless station there. My real duty at Pinar del Rio was to forward cipher reports to Havana and keep the authorities there in proper touch with any filibuster movements in the affected diarict. Then came a lean year, when I tallied coffee-bags and banana-bunches from a roof-car at Port Limon, until I elbowed my way into a position as night operator on the Costo Rican Northern. It's all very tame to tell about, yet it had its compensating touches of adventure now and then. But I wanted to get North and work out some electrical apparatus that had been preying on my mind."

He came to a stop.

"And you went North?" she prompted him.

He looked up with his quick smile.

"You know there's a certain group of rocks on the Olancho River, near Jutigalpa, where the water is beautifully clear. They say that if you once dive from that cliff, no matter where you go, you will return to Olancho, in the end, that you will die somewhere along the fringe of the Caribbean. I took that dive."

She gave vent to her habitual little head-shake.

"They say the same thing if you drink from the Fontana di Trevi in Rome. It's very pretty, but, of course, it's also very foolish."

"In one way it is, but still it's hard to explain how the unattached man from the North is held by the tropics. That's what made me catch at the old bait when I had a chance to go to the Cantonese District to look into the Chinese boycott affair. And it's the same thing, I suppose, that's taking me south to Locombia."

The girl gave vent to a gesture of impatience.

"That doesn't explain."

"What more can I say?" he demanded. He struggled to conceal the fact that he was afraid of her, that life had always taught him to be wary before the unknown factor in the equation of adventure, that her very softness was something against which he had to steel himself, grimly and resolutely.

"You can say everything you have so carefully left unsaid," was her unexpectedly spirited answer.

"There's nothing more," he protested, feeling the silence grow heavy about him.

"I trusted you!" said the girl at last.

"And I would trust you!" he said quite openly and honestly.

"You mean you are not free to speak?" she persisted, evading the personal issue which his declaration had thrust before her.

"I mean you are not free to speak?" she persisted, evading the personal issue which his declaration had thrust before her.

"I mean that it's worse than foolish for us to quibble over side issues when we're confronted by things of so much more importance. I mean, for instance, that this steamer is carrying ammunition to De Brigard and his men. If that ammunition is delivered into the hands of the Locombian government instead of to their enemies, Ulloa and his army can at once re-enter the field."

"But why re-enter the field? They are free."

"In a way, yes; but they are now shut up in Guariqui, practically, with only a few thousand reserve cartridges and a half ton of useless cordite. But the moment they have made sure that the Laminian is safely tied up at the pier in Puerto Locombia they plan to run a banana-train, armoured with boiler-plate, down through De Brigard's lines to the coast. They will fight their way down, probably under cover of night, run their cars out on the pier next to the Laminian's berth, seize their slag-boxes as contraband of war, and fight their way back to Guariqui."

"You know this?"

"It is the knowledge of this," he guardedly replied, "which makes me say that you and I are compelled, or will be compelled, to act together."

Alicia Boynton did not speak for several seconds, but her studious eyes were fixed on McKinnon's face.

"You mean that you might be able to warn them?" she asked at last.

"I mean that it might be possible, under certain conditions, for Duran's palace operator to get a message from me. It might also be possible for your brother's men to be aboard this boat five or six hours after that message was received. So why not explain the whole situation by saying that both of us chance to be acting for the same cause? We're fighting for the same end, so no matter how it hurts, or whatever may happen, we must stick together!"

"But why leave any mystery between us, if we are already that close?" asked the girl. "Why can't you still tell me everything?"

"I'm beginning to learn that you can't tell things, in my calling, until you're sure of your ground. That's why I had to fling that lie to the captain. It's warfare—and I've got to be true to my people before everything else."

"But who are your people?" she persisted.

He laughed, a little wearily, a little ambiguously. "I have no people," he said. "But we've got to fight for Guariqui, whatever it costs!"

CHAPTER XI

THE MOVEMENT IN RETREAT

It was the next morning that McKinnon came unexpectedly face to face with Alicia Boynton in one of the Laminian's narrow companionways. He was hurrying up to his operating-room after a brief mockery of a breakfast in the ship's musty-odoured dining-saloon, and would have passed on with nothing more than an unbetraying nod. But the anxious-eyed young woman, with a barely perceptible gesture, signalled for him to turn back.

He followed her at a discreet distance as she stepped into a damp-carpeted side corridor flanked by white-headed cabin doors. She quietly opened one of these, with a half-obliterated "7" on its lintel, and motioned him inside.

He surmised at a glance that it was her state-room. He next noticed that she had closed the door and locked it. Something in the quick decisiveness and directness of her movements touched him to a fleeting moment of admiration. He was conscious of the fact, as he turned to her, that his earlier sense of uneasiness had departed from him.

"Listen," said the quiet-moving and clear-eyed girl, peering impersonally up at him as she spoke, and yet standing so close that her sleeve brushed his hand. "I've been thinking a great deal about that foolish receipt. It's the only thing, now, that stands between us and our freedom of action. We have cleared away so much; but this is still one of the things that stand between us. I mean it's still a danger to you—much more a danger than I can make you understand, unless you know how treacherous and vindictive this man Ganley can be."

"But why should I be afraid of Ganley?" McKinnon maintained. "I can fight him in his own way. I am fighting him in his own way."

"You might do it at home, in your own country," she warned him, "but not in Locombia — not anywhere in Latin America. He knows his ground too well, his tricks and his chances, his burrows of escape when he needs them. He would never give you a fighting chance. That's why we must do what we can, at once, without delay."

Still again he marvelled at her directness of purpose and movement, at her unequivocating frankness of outlook. It implied, he felt, a courage seldom demanded or met with in the immured and upholstered walls of a modern woman's world.

"I thought it could be done this morning," she went on hurriedly, yet in a tone so low that he had to stoop a little to catch her words. "Ganley left his cabin early. I was ready and waiting. The moment he was away I let myself into his room."

She stopped to smile at his start of astonishment.

"I had won over my stewardess," she went on. "A few dollars completed the conquest and made everything so much easier. She even found a pass-key that fitted. I could see it was dangerous, and I had very little time. But I failed. The receipt was not there."

"But you can't do this sort of thing," McKinnon expostulated. He remembered an earlier speech of hers: "It's one of the small things that count in war—and this is war."

Fearful Headaches

Stomach Bad, No Appetite, Was Losing Weight and Strength

Wonderful Change When Health Was Restored by

DR. CHASE'S NERVE FOOD

Headache is a symptom and not a disease in itself. It acts as a danger signal to warn you of serious trouble.

By reading Mr. Donneral's letter you will be satisfied that there is no treatment to be compared to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food as a means of building up the system and removing the cause of headaches, sleeplessness and indigestion.

Mr. Charles Donneral, Kleinburg, Ont., writes: "I wish to communicate to you the great cure which I received from Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. For over two years I suffered from fearful headaches, my appetite was always poor, and the stomach bad. I took medicines from physicians, but the headaches persisted, and I was rarely free from them.

"Reading about Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, I began using it, with little idea that I would be benefitted. I had become thin and weak, but the very first box helped me, and with continued treatment I have been cured and feel like a new man. The headaches have disappeared, y appetite is good and digestion excellent. I write this letter in hope that other sufferers from headache may use Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and be cured."

It's as simple and easy to use as shoe polish, and a big stove can be shined with it almost as easily.

"Isn't it rather late for going back over that ground?" she was saying.

"But this sort of thing involves too much risk! It's too unfair to you!"

"I looked through everything, as far as I could," the girl at his side went on, not heeding his protest. "I could find no trace of the receipt."

"Of course not! He shows the value he puts on it by carrying it about on his person, in his wallet."

"But there was something else I did find out," she said, lowering her voice; and again he was struck by the aura of sheer vigour that seemed always to float and cling about her. "It's the fact that eight mountain-guns are to be shipped out of Mobile this week, invoiced and crated as steam-laundry equipment. They are Hotchkiss rapid-fire guns, breech-loading, and with fixed ammunition. Those are the guns that are to be landed somewhere in northern Locombia. They can be taken apart, piece by piece, and carried up through the hills to Guariqui on burros."

"And he had the coolness to send out a wireless about that equipment!" commented McKinnon. The woman, with a warning look, motioned for him to speak more quietly.

"My second discovery was even more important. It began with what seems to be a note from one of De Brigard's generals. They are still afraid of some counter-movement to seize their cartridge shipment. I mean they are worrying about the very ammunition on this ship, the cartridges in the slag-boxes you spoke about. As far as I can make out, they intend to commandeer a certain track-motor from the Consolidated Fruit Concern. They are to seize it and take it from the roundhouse just north of Puerto Locombia."

"What kind of track-motor?" broke in the thoughtful-eyed operator.

"It's a specially built sixty-horse-power Birminghame motor, belonging to the railway department of the Fruit Concern. I can remember when it was first imported, a year ago. The new railway construction engineers have been using it instead of a coach and locomotive for inspecting the ore-road extensions and the narrow-gauge banana lines that have been run out into the Parroto plantations. You see, it's so light in weight that six or eight peons can lift it about on the track; they can reverse it without a turntable. De Brigard's men intend to run this motor out on the railway along the pier, at night, and keep it hidden in the Fruit Concern's weigh-scales shed, not forty feet from where the Laminian will be sure to dock. Then, as far as I can make out, the slag-boxes are to be quietly dropped over the side and piled up in the motor's tonneau. Then it is to be hurried out along the railway track to Cocoanut Hill, where everything is to be stored in the power-house until the Junta distributes the supplies to De Brigard's men."

"But what power-house is this?"

"I mean the electric-light power-house just outside the town."

"This is worth knowing!" said McKinnon, his leaping thought already struggling to bridge the vicissitudes of the future.

"But this isn't the problem that's blocking our way," his companion warned him. "The first thing we must do is to recover our lost ground. We have to get back this receipt that ties you down to Ganley."

"But even for that we have to wait our chance."

"Why not make the chance?"

"How make it?"

"Ganley is in hourly dread of every message that comes into your wireless-room. He insists on censoring anything that might betray him. Then, after he has gone to bed, to-night, why not send for him—hurriedly call him up to your operating-room? Why not insist that he should come, before he has time to dress? The mere fact that he carries this receipt about with him on his person, as you said, shows how precious he holds it to be. But if he's caught off his guard in that way he might forget. You might easily enough keep him there with you for ten or fifteen minutes!"

"You mean the chances are that he'll simply throw on anything that's nearest him—a blanket or a bathrobe, if it's late enough?"

"Yes."

"But there's the captain!" objected McKinnon. "There's the scene we went through last night."

"Then wait until the captain has gone to his cabin for the night. The later it is when you call Ganley the better. I can be waiting. The moment he has left his cabin, locked or unlocked, I can be there making my search."

McKinnon looked down at her, puzzled, not by her proposal, but by the sheer fact that she could make it. He began to feel that some kindred and companionable love for the casually adventurous linked them together; he began to realize that, for all her sex, she was not without her youthful and full-blooded relish for the hazard of any true game that was worth its candle.

"Suppose Ganley suspects something?"

"He can suspect nothing if we only do our part of it in the right way," admonished the youthful intriguante before him. "He lives in daily dread that you may receive messages about the Locombian uprising, or his own connection with it. Then why not assume that a despatch has come in one, for instance, stating that De Brigard and Ulloa have met, that this revolution about which you understand so little has actually begun? You have no suspicion as to who these men really are. It will only be natural for you to make inquiries. You might even be sending for further particulars. That would keep him in suspense: that would hold him there and give me the time I need!"

"But if he insisted on not waiting?"

She stood for a moment or two in deep thought.

"Then you would have to warn me."

"But how?"

Again she stood gazing at him with meditative eyes.

"Why not by the sound of your spark? You could start to send quickly. I could hear it quite plainly through the open port-hole."

"But even in that, again, is a risk. I might be sending to hold Ganley, and not to warn you."

They stood in thought for still another moment or two. McKinnon was not altogether unconscious of her presence, so companionably close to him. Until that day he had faced the isolation of the man who plans and fights alone. There was something vaguely consoling in the thought of comradeship so unlooked for and yet so sustaining.

"Wait," he said, as a sudden thought came to him. "I might send one word, a simple word like 'Go.' You could easily recognize it, then, as a warning. That would be simple enough, if you could only remember the Morse."

"Would it be hard?"

He tapped out the dots and dashes with his finger-tip on the rod of brass from which the berth-curtains hung. She listened closely as he repeated them. Then she stooped and reproduced the signal with her own finger-tip on the wooden edge of her narrow berth. The light and alertness of her inquiring eyes as she looked up into his sent a quick and inapposite thrill of appreciation through McKinnon.

"That will be the danger-signal," she agreed. "When I hear it I'll understand."

But McKinnon was held back by a sudden disturbing thought.

"Suppose Ganley himself is able to read the Morse?"

"But don't you see that is impossible! He's shown that already. He never would have come to you as he did when the Laminian was leaving New York if he had been able to stand on the deck and read your spark at the masthead, or if he had caught the sound from your cabin as you sent. All that talk of his was only to blind you to his real end; it was only to find out if he himself had been found out."

"But even if we have the good luck to get back this paper he's holding," began McKinnon, once more marvelling at the quick coherence of her reasoning, "that is only the beginning of things."

"Yes," she agreed, dropping her intent and troubled eyes before his steady gaze. "But why should we cross our bridges before we come to them?"

He still had to confess to himself that there was something almost enigmatic in that persistent yet febrile energy of hers. It was so vastly different from what life had taught him to expect from women whom the hardening years had not touched with bitterness and left old and wise. It seemed a contradiction of everything about her—her youth, her Aprilian softness, her obvious honesty of outlook, her childlike candour of face and character.

ANNUAL MEETING OF WOMEN'S ART ASSOCIATION

The annual meeting of the Peterborough branch of the Women's Art Association was held on Friday evening, Oct. 13th, at 8 o'clock, in the Y. W. C. A. parlour. The President, Mrs. Morris, was in the chair, and Miss Helen Denison acted as Secretary pro tem, in the absence of Miss Aylmer.

The President read the minutes of the last meeting, and the Secretary's report was read by Mrs. Frederick. The Treasurer's report showed: Receipts, $269.96; expenditure, $209.60; balance in bank, $80.36.

The President s Address.

The President, in her address, spoke of the increased interest in the work of the Association, and the necessity of trying to secure new members. It is proposed to open the season by an exhibition to be held in November, consisting mainly of the work of Mr. Waring, an English artist, and of Miss Jack, whose work has recently been exhibited in Halifax, under the auspices of the National Council of Women.

The use of the Public Library Auditorium has been promised to the Association for the future, for any exhibitions they may wish to hold. It is hoped that the Library Board may make arrangements by which they will be able to set apart one room in the Library Building for a permanent home for the Association. This will obviate one serious difficulty with which we have had to contend, namely the securing of a suitable room for various work. It was owing to this obstacle that it was found impossible to carry out the course of lectures planned for members, as was intended last year.

The matter of the prize given by the Association at the Industrial Exhibition, to any resident in the County of Peterborough, was also mentioned, and the question was raised as to whether the prize may be given to the same person two years in succession. This competition should be made more generally known so that more work may be submitted.

The prizes this year in the Public Schools are to be in the form of medals, the making of the die being an extra expense, which will not have to be incurred again. These prizes have not yet been awarded owing to the fact that the exhibition in the schools have not been held up to the present.

The President also brought up the question of sending notices of the Association's work with application form attached to newcomers in the city. This was afterwards put to the vote and carried. It was decided that it would be considered advisable to procure stationery with proper headings for the Branch.

A scheme was outlined by which the Association might work for the formation of a Town Improvement Society, as is done in other places.

The Election of officers then took place and resulted as follows:

Hon.-Pres.—Mrs. Dignum, Toronto.
Pres.—Miss Bennet.
1st Vice Pres.—Mrs. W. R. Morris.
2nd Vice Pres.—Mrs. R. R. Hall.
3rd Vice Pres.—Mrs. Rush.
Cor.-Sec.—Mrs. A. E. Sherwood.
Rec.-Sec.-Miss Flora Collins.
Treas.—Miss Maude Rush.
Archivist—Mrs. McDermid.

Convenors of Committees.

Social—Mrs. Bennett.
Twilight musicale—Mrs. Glidden.
Arts and crafts—Mrs. Boyd. Boy.
Lecture—Miss Belle Morrow.
Exhibition—Miss Bennett.
Public School prize—Mrs. Arthur Stevenson.

Reading Club—The appointment is left to the Executive.

Honorary Members' representatives—Mrs. J. R. Stratton, Mrs. McDermid, Mrs. W. W. Coulthard, Mrs. Goodwill, Miss Helen Denison, Miss Lilden Hall, Mrs. W. H. Hill.

A vote of thanks was moved by Mrs. Rush, seconded by Mrs. Glidden, to the retiring President, Mrs. W. R. Morris, who has done most effective work through the past year.

A vote of thanks to all retiring officers was moved by Miss Helen Denison, seconded by Mrs. Palmer.

The meeting then adjourned.

The Secretary's Report.

Following is the annual report of the Peterborough Branch of the Women's Art Association of Canada:

In looking back at the work of the past year we find that the Peterborough Branch of the W. A. A. has been indeed prosperous.

Four executive meetings have been held, at which there was a very good attendance. The financial statement is good; the membership has increased greatly; and, although we have had no foreign exhibition, as in former years, yet there were many new and interating entertainments given.

Perhaps the Twilight Musicales were the chief features of the year. Mrs. Glidden very kindly gave us the use of the Conservatory Music Hall and saw to the arrangement and carrying out of the programme. These Twilight Musicales were of a new form of entertainment for Peterborough, and they proved very successful.

On the evening of the 24th of January, Mrs. Sidney Dunn gave readings from "David Copperfild," and she had a large and appreciative audience.

Our exhibition was held in February, consisting of local work, and the "Members' Exhibit," from Toronto. It was a great disappointment to the members that they were unable to obtain pictures from the leading artists of Canada, as it would have added greatly to the interest of the exhibition. The exhibit lasted for four days, the opening evening, Judge Huycke very kindly gave an address.

In March, Mr. Dobbin delivered a very interesting lecture on "Furniture," but unfortunately, to a very small audience.

It was decided this year that the prizes awarded to the schools should be in the form of medals instead of pins, as formerly; the prizes have not been awarded owing to the postponement of Miss McCrea's exhibit.

Dorothy Aylmer,
Secretary W. A. A.

NEW YORK THE WORLD'S GREATEST TOY MARKET

New York is by far and away the world's largest toy market. The annual volume of trade at wholesale prices is $75,000,000, and of this a large part is shipped out of the country, mainly to the great fairs of Europe and Asia, says the New York Sun.

In mechanical toys and in toys made of iron, tin, lead and brass, New York has ranged first as the world's largest market for twenty years. More recently the toy interest has branched out in building wooden toy factories in the lumbering regions where much of the refuse from sawmills makes fine stock for toymakers and can be obtained at such low prices that European makers of wooden toys cannot compete against the larger producers of American wooden toys, who push trade throughout Europe and Asia.

There are 9,583 live patents issued by foreign nations to New York makers of mechanical and other toys. This assures a good market for those toys in countries which possess 250,000,000 children.

Exports in toys from New York begin to be large in July and the trade holds out until late in October, when all large consignemnts for the great marts of Europe must be forwarded to meet requirements for Christmas and New Year trade. A remarkable development of the toy trade for export has been going on since early summer in the shipment of all kinds of toys to India for sale during the celebration of the durbar, otherwise the crowning of King George V. as the Emperor of India. It is 600 years since the coronation of an Emperor of India, and for that reason the 600 native princes of India have arranged to give great public entertainments with special gifts to children, throughout India and the great bazaars of Calcutta, Bombay, Delhi and other large centres of population are to supply special attractions throughout November to bring in millions of people from the rural districts.

WANTED CANADIAN TOYS

A number of Parsee merchants came several months ago to buy mechanical and other kinds of toys for the account of the durbar festivals in all parts of India. They were desirous of buying toys made by Canadian Indians, but they found on going to Canada that all the productions of the Indians in those lines are sold early in the spring to peddlers who work the summer tourist trade in Canada and New England. The Parsees then induced local toy makers to produce Indian pattern toys and dolls with North American Indian features, and dressed in Indian dress, and also cowboy and cowgirl dolls, Indian bows and arrows, toy canoes of birch bark, moccasins, basketry and beadwork, all from Canadian Indian patterns. There are now residing in New York about 125 Indians who do fine work in basketry and beadwork, and in toys to the order of the local toy trade factories.

Rag dolls, all made by women and girls in New York, are sold in all countries. A Brooklyn woman who a few years ago began making rag dolls for one retail toyship, now employs 300 girls in her factory and farms out work to 500 women in and around the city. A Harlem woman who originated negro dolls handsomely dressed for sale to well-to-do coloured families, has built up a national business and has found a good market through local toy exporters to North Africa where many kinds of American toys are distributed by caravans over enormous trading zones.

Most of the distribution of American toys for account of the great fairs of Germany, Austria-Hungary, German and Russian Poland, and parts of Asia within the zone of Russian trade influence, is by local salesmen of the Jewish type, who were born in Russia, Poland or Austria-Hungary. These agents speak the several languages and dialects that are in general use by the trades at the great fairs of Europe and Asia, and they know all about the making of and the markets for all kinds of American toys vended abroad.

All these Jews who trade for American account in Russian dominions are unaffected by the anti-Jewish edicts, as they enter from Germany, and are well protected under the travelling salesmen clause of the treaty between the German Emperor and the Czar of Russia. It is as special trade representatives of great German importers of American products that they go to and fro in the Dominions of the Czar.

INDIAN MODELS IN DEMAND

There is in Europe a craze for American toys such as birch bark canoes, bows and arrows, Indian war chiefs' bonnets and feathers and red flannel, dolls in Indian and cowboy costumes, electrical and mechanical toys and all kinds of Yankee notions such as are sold by street fakirs in American cities. A considerable number of American cowboys and Indians are employed at good pay by toy makers and exporters to be seen in full fig and feather at the principal stands for the sale of American toys and notions at the great fairs in Europe.

A factor in making American toys popular in Europe in recent years is the large number of gifts of toys, sent from here by fathers, brothers or sisters of little Germans, Russians, Poles, Austrians or Italians. There are American imitations of domestic toys in Europe, but the majority of buyers prefer the genuine American-made toys, which while they cost a little more than the imitation products are far better in quality and last longer. New York has become the world's great toy market mainly because it is also a great manufacturing centre for many kinds of wares which furnish the material that enters into millions of toys.

New York makes six times as many toys of sheet iron, and iron and steel and pewter as London and Paris and this is mainly because the manufacturing zone of this city makes in oil and varnish cans and other products of sheet iron and iron and steel and spelter more than is made by all the plants in Great Britain, and the trimmings from the tin and other sheet metal works supply material for toys at prices with which no foreign nation can compete.

Toy banks in metal, an American invention, are now shipped to all countries. There are upwards of 200 patterns, ranging from a tin bank that retails at 9 cents, to an elaborate and artistic design in polished steel and bronze, with plate glass panels, that retails at $5. In toy wagons, barrows, guns, tool chests, tools, garden implements and boats, the home and export toy trade is growing by leaps and bounds.

WHERE "FOREIGN" TOYS ARE MADE

Many supposed German, Swiss and French-made toys on sale in this country are made in New York and its vicinity. In many instances the makers are German, Swiss or French workers who emigrated in order to be near the world's greatest mraket and where the low prices for wood and other materials as compared with costs in Europe give marked advantage near the world's geratest market and distributors.

One great toy distributing house in New York, with branches in many domestic and foreign cities, catalogues 17,000 varieties of toys of recent domestic design that are sold the world over. Inventors and designers of toys and Yankee notions are liberally paid by the manufacturers centred in this city. A local lawyer who invented several toys for the amusement of one of his children confined in an hospital, found that the house surgeon had brought a friend in the toy making trade to see the toys. The manufacturer offered the lawyer a royalty that last year gave him $16,000.

The present chief owner of one of the largest metal working factories in New York, landed here from Russia a few years ago with just the equivalent of $5.00. He bought a few tin toys and peddled them. To attract attention to himself on the street he made a whistle that imitated the lark. A toymaker offered him a royalty, and from that the inventor made enough money in five years to found a business that now employs 3,500 men and women here and in Germany.

JEW MAKES A FORTUNE

A German Jew who landed here a few years ago as a model maker and became a worker with Thomas Alva Edison, invented several electrical toys, for the amusement of his children. He sold royalty rights to a toy house that in two years paid him $75,000, and gave him an upward lift in manufacturing that now enables him to employ 12,000 factory hands in Germany, Russia and Italy.

To the Zam-Buk Co.

Dear Sirs,—I have found Zam-Buk more suitable for healing cuts and abrasions; while for the relief of skin irritation it is invaluable.

(Signed) SYDNEY R. LLOYD,
Admiral.

Zam-Buk Cures Bad Burns.

Stoker Kingsmorth, of H.M.S. "Cochrane," says:—"I slipped and fell with my arm on an exhaust steam pipe, which fairly frizzled the skin. As soon the ship's surgeon dressed my arm, but the burns took the wrong way, owing to a lot of dirt from the pipe getting up blood-poison. Abscesses appeared, and from underneath the festering flesh, matter oozed out. I was feverish, pain and didn't know how to get ease.

"For weeks I remained under treatment, but the ordinary ointments proved no good. Indeed, I got worse. I therefore obtained a supply of Zam-Buk and almost as soon as this was applied I got ease. From the very first application, healing commenced; and a few boxes of Zam-Buk healed my wound completely."

Zam-Buk cures eczema, ulcers, abscesses, ringworm, bad leg, varicose ulcers, piles, cuts, wounds, chapped hands, blackleg, scalds, etc. All chemists & stores, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price. Send 1c stamp for trial box.

VILLAGE BLACKSMITH.

Under a costly canopy
The village blacksmith sits.
Before him in a touring car
Broken to little bits,
And the owner and the chauffeur, too,
Have almost lost their wits.

The village blacksmith smiles with glee
As he lights his fat cigar.
He tells his helpers what to do
To straighten up the car,
And the owner and the chauffeur, too,
Stand humbly where they are.

The village blacksmith puffs his weed
And smiles a smile of cheer
The while his helpers pump the tires
And monkey with the gear,
And the owner and the chauffeur, too,
Stand reverently near.

Behind the village blacksmith is
The portal of his shop.
The shop is very large in size,
With a tiled roof on top,
And the owner and the chauffeur, too,
As it were glad to stop.

The children, going home from school,
Look in at the open door.
They like to see him make his bills
And hear the owners roar.
And the chauffeurs weep as they declare
They never paid that before.

He rises each morning to the bank
And salts away his cash.
A high silk hat and long frock coat
Help him to cut a dash,
But the owner and the chauffeur, too,
Their teeth all vainly gnash.

The chestnut tree long since has died.
The smith does not repine.
His humble shop has grown into
A building big and fine,
And it bears "Garage" above the door
On a large electric sign.

In the Light of Reason.

A farmer returning home late at night found a man standing beside the house with a lighted lantern in his hand. "What are you doing here?" he asked savagely, suspecting he had caught a criminal.

For answer came a chuckle and "It's only me, sur."

The farmer recognized John, his shepherd. "It's you, John, is it?" What on earth are you doing here this time o' night?"

Another chuckle. "I'm a coortin' Ann, zur."

"And so you've come courting with a lantern, you fool! Why, I never took a lantern when I courted your mistress!"

"No, zur, you didn't, sur," John chuckled. "We can all see you didn't zur."—Answers.

Out of Reach of Lightning.

Men of science have finally decided that there is one safe place in case of a terrific thunderstorm or electric shower. Take a submarine boat and go out into deep water. Nobody has ever been struck by lightning while on a submarine boat. People have been killed in balloons, in caisons, deep down in mines, on trolley cars, in automobiles and all the other places which have had some advertising as safety resorts, but the diving boat is still immune by the records. Electric storms cause a great deal of terror. Keep away from the windows and objects in the house made of considerable steel or iron and don't worry. There has been more suffering in advance of lightning strokes than after them.—Worcester Telegram.

He served on the coast of Syria in 1840, was senior naval officer during the Jamaica insurrection in 1865, and during the Fenian raids on the Lakes of Canada in 1866; Commodore in the West Indies, 1872-5; Commander-in-Chief in the Pacific in 1876-9, and of the Channel Squadron in 1884-5; and for several years aide-de-camp to Queen Victoria.

Sir Algernon married a daughter of Admiral Andrew Drew, and they celebrated their golden wedding in April.

A Famous Jewel.

The Kohinoor, the famous diamond now in the British crown, was an ornament on the tomb of Abkar, near Agra, for more than a century in the open air without guard until Nadir, Shah of Persia, who invaded India in 1739, sacked the palaces and tombs of the Moguls and carried back to Teheran $300,000,000 worth of loot.—London Mail.

Official Etiquette in France.

The wives of French cabinet ministers share to some extent their husbands' dignities, the deference due to them being expounded in the protocol. Should a minister's wife enter a drawing room where any deputies' or senators' wives are present these are supposed to rise and remain standing until the new arrival is seated. Ministers' wives have to show a like homage to the wife of the prime minister. And Mme. Caillaux herself is supposed to rise in honor of the wife of the president of the chamber of deputies, for with her, according to the protocol, "c'est la representation nationale qui entre, le suffrage universel in France."—London Chronicle.

MARKET REPORTS.

Liverpool and Chicago Wheat Futures Close Higher—Live Stock—Latest Quotations.

CHICAGO, Oct. 16.—Altho to-day, for the first time since 1901, the visible supply of wheat in the United States went beyond sixty million bushels, the prices of the cereal made a net gain of 1-4c to 1-2c. The chief reason for the advance was that world shipments for the week were much less than expected. Corn finished a shade to 1-4c higher, but oats at 1-16c to 1-4c decline. At the end of trading hog products varied from 5c off to 15c increase in cost.

The Liverpool market closed to-day ⅝d to ¾d higher than on Saturday; corn, ⅛d to ¼d lower. Berlin, closed ⅛c lower on wheat. Buda Pest, ⅝c lower; Paris, unchanged to ⅛c lower.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Exporters.

Export steers sold at from $5.75 to $6.25; bulls, $4.50 to $5.40.

Butchers.

Prime picked lots sold at $5.80 to $6.10; loads of good, $5.50 to $5.75; medium, $5.20 to $5.40; common, $4 to $5.10; cows, $3 to $5.25; bulls, $4 to $4.50; bologna bulls, $3.50.

Sheep and Lambs.

Sheep sold at $4.50 to $4 for ewes, and rams at $3 per cwt.; lambs, $5 to $5.25, with a few selects at $5.30. Lambs were 20c to 25c per cwt. lower.

Hogs.

Wm. Harris quoted hogs on Saturday at $6.15 for selects, fed and watered, and $6.90 f.o.b. cars.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, Oct. 16.—At the Montreal Stock Yards, West End Market, the receipts of live stock for the week ending October 14, were 2750 cattle, 3375 sheep and lambs, 2780 hogs and 675 calves. The offerings on the market this morning amounted to 1900 cattle, 2475 sheep and lambs, 1330 hogs and 350 calves.

There was no further change in the condition of the market for cattle, prices for butchers' stock being steady, owing to the fact that supplies of such were not in excess of the requirements as a large percentage of the offerings were only suitable for canning purposes, which met with a good demand from packers at prices ranging from 2½c to 3½c per lb. Of the above number of cattle on the market there were twenty loads of ranch and domestic cattle from the northwest.

The demand from butchers was fairly good and the market on the whole was moderately active with sales of choice steers at 5¾c to 6c, good at 5½c, fairly good at 5c to 5¼c, fair at 4½c to 4¾c, and common, at 4c to 4¼c per lb. Good cows brought from 4c to 5c, and bulls 4½c to 5c per lb.

A steadier feeling prevailed in the market for hogs this morning and prices were practically unchanged from last Wednesday. The supply was not so large, for which the demand was good from packers, and sales of selected lots were made at $6.25 to $6.50 per cwt., weighed off the cars, and a few lots were delivered on contracts made last week at $6.75.

The trade in small meats was fairly active, there being a good demand from butchers for supplies and prices ruled steady. Lambs sold at 5½c to 5½c, and sheep, at 3½c to 3¾c per lb. The demand for calves was good at prices ranging from $3 to $10 each, as to size and quality.

Start Branches In Canada.

London, Oct. 17.—Norton Griffiths, M.P., urges manufacturers here to start branches in Canada, the same as the Americans. Four Days In Folding Bed.

Wilmington, Del., Oct. 17.—Miss Mary Elizabeth Graham, 70 years old, of Kenton, Del., will die as the result of a queer accident. She was found caught in a folding bed in her home, where she lived all alone.

While sitting on the edge of the collapsible bed it gave way under her weight. She became entangled in the bed clothing, and could not free herself. Finally the bed closed. She was too weak to extricate herself or to cry for help. She remained a prisoner for four days, when neighbors who had missed her, broke into the house and discovered her a captive. She had been paralyzed by her strange imprisonment.

Base Deceiver.

Professor John Dewey of Columbia was talking about a legislator who had turned traitor to the suffrage cause.

"A man who could be so mean to woman," he said, "must be the original of the Clayton jail story.

"A convict in the Clayton jail, you know, managed to do a little flirting over the wall. He flirted for some weeks with a girl who milked the cows in a field adjoining the jail, and one evening he called to her, and they struck up a conversation.

"Every day after that for a year or more the girl came to the wall. Then the convict, getting tired of her, told her it was no use waiting for him, as he was in for life."—Washington Star.

Royal Amonities.

Off on a royal visit he went, the great ameer.
He met a neighboring sultan and reveled in good cheer,
But liquor made them grouchy, like brawlers at a bar.
The monarchs' talk grew personal; they really went too far.
"You durned, insultin' sultan!" one stated, with a sneer,
The other said, "I won't take that, not from a mere ameer!"
—Kansas City Star.

A Bit of English Humor.

The night train was approaching Blackheath, outside of London, and two Americans, unacquainted with the locality, were in doubt as to the station. One peered out through the window into the unresponsive darkness and sank back to his place. The other did precisely the same.

"Is it Blackheath?" inquired the first.

"The Lord only knows," replied the other in a hopeless fashion.

A small, apologetic, shrinking sort of Englishman, sitting next, spoke up.

"I beg your pardon," he said softly, "for intruding upon your personal and private conversation, but as I happen to share that knowledge with the Almighty permit me to say that it is Blackheath."—Lippincott's.

Worry.

To worry is to show your hand.
To sv'ry feller in the land.
To worry is to let folks know
You think you hain't a fightin' show.
You can't win fame or even pelf
Unless you sort o' bluffs yourself
Into believin' that you be
Plum' failure proof, an' don't select
A pile o' dirt where gophers sit
An' make a mountain out o' it,
An' don't forgit this sayin' true:
There's millions more worse off than you.

Hornpipes.

Hornpipe takes its name from a wind instrument on which are produced tuneful strains as an accompaniment for this country dance, which originated in England.

PETRIFIED TREES.

The "Stone Forest" One of California's Natural Wonders.

California, among many other natural wonders, contains a "stone forest." This is located in Sonoma county, only a few miles from the little resort of Calistoga Springs. This "forest" consists of a great many petrified trees, all of which are prostrate.

In respect to the great number of petrified trees and their immense size, the California "stone forest" surpasses that of Arizona. Strange to say, very little is known about these wonderful Sonoma county petrifractions—so far as the general public is concerned. Many of these trees are of enormous size. The famous "Queen of the Forest" is a prehistoric redwood about eighty feet long and nearly twelve feet in diameter. It has been broken in several places, and these breaks are as clean as if cut off with a saw. A tree has grown up through one of the breaks and has attained quite a large size. Another giant tree known as the "Monarch" lies near by, which is almost ninety feet long and is without a break. This tree is a fir, and averages ten feet in diameter. Not far away is another giant son of the forest—a redwood that is about sixty feet long and nine feet in diameter. This tree is broken into many hundreds of pieces, yet it retains its shape almost perfectly. Scattered about for the area of several acres are many other pieces of petrifaction. So perfect has been the transmutation into atone that the grain of the wood still remains very clear, and the variety of the tree may be easily determined.—Scientific American.

Riches have wings, the wise men say,
But as the years have slipped
Along some few have found a way
To have those pinions clipped.

PLOT AGAINST TAFT.

Attempt to Destroy Bridge Discovered Just In Time.

San Francisco, Cal., Oct. 17.—A report received here yesterday by officials of the Southern Pacific Railway from C. C. Brown, section foreman for the road at Naples, Cal., gave details of the discovery of thirty-six sticks of dynamite under the Cairton viaduct, 20 miles north of Santa Barbara, several hours before President Taft's special train passed over the bridge en route to Los Angeles yesterday morning. The dynamite was found after the watchman engaged in a revolver battle with two men, who escaped.

The dynamite was discovered at 2 o'clock yesterday morning. The President's train passed over the bridge at 8.51. The nightwatchman saw two men on the bridge shortly before 2 o'clock. They were at the opposite end of the 1,000 foot span and ran when ordered to halt. The watchman hurried across the bridge, firing several shots, which were returned.

After the pair had escaped in the darkness, the watchman returned to the bridge and began an investigation. Near the centre of the span, lodged in one of the supports of the viaduct, he found the thirty-six sticks of dynamite with a ten-foot fuse attached to one of the sticks. He left the find untouched, going immediately to Santa Barbara and notifying the officials.

Sheriff Wines of Santa Barbara County went immediately to the bridge with several deputies and removed the dynamite. A general search is being made for the men.

Mr. Joseph Bradley was shot and killed near Paisley while hunting yesterday.

The prospect of a speedy termination of the Turco-Italian war is not favorable.

By the accidental discharge of a rifle, J. J. Bradley, aged 21, was instantly killed while in the bush near Paisley, Ont.

Fire, supposed to have been caused by an overheated stove, did $1,000 damage to Henry Lemon's house in Niagara Falls yesterday.

Harry E. Allen shot his wife and her sister, Miss Daisy Bothwell, at their flat in Jersey City. With a third bullet he committed suicide.

An emphatic contradiction is given to the report recently circulated that the new Government has ordered the construction work stopped on the N. T. R.

After a wait of three months since the required deposit was made a Treasury Board certificate has been granted to La Banque Internationale du Canada—Rodolphe Forget's new concern.

MATHEWSON SENT BACK AGAINST THE MACKMEN IN THIRD GAME OF SERIES

New York's Famous Twirler is Opposed by Jack Coombs, Hero of 1910 World's Championship Battles.

GIANTS SCORE FIRST

Special Wire to The Examiner.

NEW YORK, N.Y., OCT. 17. — The batting on the third game of the world's series was six to five in favour of the New York Giants. The weather conditions this morning were very unfavourable. It was raining and the grounds are already very wet, but the game will be played. In case of a postponement the third game would have been played here to-morrow.

NEW YORK, OCT. 17.—The prospect of decent baseball weather became more discouraging as to-day advanced, although the rain has stopped and the canvas covers have been pulled off the diamond. The field is in fine shape and fast. The threatening weather militated against a big crowd and there were many gaps in the bleachers, as well as in the high-priced seats.

The line-up:—

Giants — Devore, l.f.; Doyle, 2b; Snodgrass, c.f.; Murray, r.f.; Merkle, 1b.; Herzog, 3b.; Fletcher, s.s.; Meyers, c.; Mathewson, p.

Giants—Murphy skied to Lord; Merkle out, Barry to Davis. Herzog fanned.—No runs.

Coombs is using great speed.

Third Innings.

Athletics—Barry singled to left and stole second; Lapp lined out to Doyle, who doubled Barry at second, Fletcher taking the throw. Coombs out to Doyle.—No runs.

Giants.—Fletcher flied to Murphy. Meyer's grasser was too hot for Baker, and the runner was safe. Mathewson singled to right; Meyers going to third. Meyers scored on Devoir's infield tap, which Barry threw to Collins, forcing Mathewson. Devore out stealing second. Lapp to Barry.

One run.

Fourth Innings.

Lord lifted to Snodgrass. Oldring popped to Fletcher. Collins singled and stole second. New York kicked on the dicision. Baker out, Mathewson to Merkle.—No runs.

Giants—Doyle out, Collins to Davis. Snodgrass high-flied to Lord. Murray ably-scraped to Murphy.—No runs.

Fifth Innings.

Murphy safe on Herzog's error of hard grounder. Davis singled the ball, hitting Umpire Connolly, Murphy going to second. Barry sacrificed Mathewson to Merkle. Murphy out at the plate on assists by Mathewson and Meyers, and put out by Herzog, who chased the runner clear to the plate, after Lapp's infield tap. Coombs popped to Fletcher.—No runs.

Giants—Merkle sent a long fly to Lord. Herzog walked and was out, stealing second. Fletcher out, Barry to Davis.—No runs.

Sixth Innings.

Athletics—Lord lined to Murray; Oldring fanned. Collins lifted to Snodgrass.—No runs.

Giants—Meyers fouled to Lapp. Matthewson high-flied to Collins. Devore out. Baker to Davis.—No runs.

Seventh Innings.

Athletics—Baker lifted to Murray; Murphy repeated to Doyle; Davis fanned.—No runs.

Baker was given a rousing reception when he came to bat. The weather has cleared up this innings, only a slight mist remaining.

Giants—Doyle out, Collins to Davis; Snodgrass fanned. Murray walked and stole second. Merkle out, Collins to Davis.—No runs.

Eigth Innings.

Athletics—Barry opened with double to left. Lapp beat out a hit. Barry going to third. Barry out at plate on Coombs' rap to Doyle, who threw to Meyers. Lapp out at home when he tried to come in after Fletcher had dropped a throw of Doyle, who fielded Lord's grounder to catch Coombs at second. Oldring fanned. No runs.

Giants—Herzog flied to Lord. Fletcher out, Collins to Davis. Meyers fanned. No runs.

Ninth Innings.

Athletics— Collins out Herzog to Merkle. Baker scored a home run over the right field bleachers, repeating yesterday's feat. The stands went wild. Herzog fumbled Murphy's hit, then threw wild, Murphy taking second. Davis out, Meyers to Merkle. Murphy taking third. Barry out, Herzog to Merkle, ending the suspense. One run. Ames is warming up.

Giants—Mathewson fanned. Devore popped to Baker. Doyle fanned. No runs.

Tenth Innings.

Athletics— Lapp out, Fletcher to Merkle. Coombs flied to Doyle, Lord out Fletcher to Merkle. No runs.

Giants — Snodgrass was hit by a pitched ball, but not allowed by umpire Brennan. Snodgrass walked. Murray sacrificed, Coombs to Davis. Snodgrass out attempting to steal third. Lapp to Baker. Baker's uniform was torn to threads by Snodgrass' spikes. Baker was spiked in both leg and arm, but pluckily resumed play. Merkle walked. Merkle out stealing, Lapp to Collins. No runs.

Eleventh Innings.

Athletics— Oldring out, Herzog to Merkle. Collins singled to left. Baker safe on infield hit on Herzog's poor throw to Merkle, who dropped the ball. Collins took third and Baker went to second. Collins scored when Fletcher fumbled Murphy's hit. Baker scored on Davis, single to right. Murray threw Murphy out at third. Herzog taking the throw. Davis out stealing, Meyers to Doyle. Two runs.

Giants — Herzog doubled to left Fletcher flied to Lord. Meyers out, Collins to Davis. Herzog going to third. Herzog scored when Collins fumbled a hit from Becker, batting for Matthewson. With one strike on Devore, Becker was out trying to steal, Lapp to Collins. One run.

WASTED TIME AND MONEY

BEFORE THEY FOUND GIN PILLS

GALETTA, ONT.

"My husband used Gin Pills for Backache and Kidney Disease. The pain in his back was dreadful and the kidneys failed to do their work properly. As he became worse, we found it necessary to begin treatment and unfortunately wasted time and money on remedies that were little or no good. After taking one dose of GIN PILLS, he found them to be exactly what he needed, and after taking two boxes of GIN PILLS, was completely cured. We heartily recommend GIN PILLS, at every opportunity to our friends and relatives". Mrs. JAMES B. MILFORD.

Write us, mentioning this paper and we will send you a sample box free. Then, if you cannot get the regular 50c boxes at your dealer's we will supply you at the regular retail price—50c. a box, 6 for $2.50—and money promptly refunded if GIN PILLS do not give satisfaction. PARLIAMENT MEETS.

The first official act of our new Governor-General was to swear in the Minister of Agriculture in the Borden Cabinet and call a meeting of the Dominion Parliament for November 18th.

EAST PETERBOROUGH.

Mr. Ed. Hawthorne, the Liberal candidate nominated at Norwood last June, to contest the representation of East Peterborough in the Ontario Legislature, is actively in the field and has entered upon the beginning of an energetic campaign. He realizes that it is wise to not trust to the forbearance of Sir James Whitney, who promises to announce the date of the elections soon. He is taking time by the forelock so as to be ready whenever the elections are sprung.

GOOD-BYE SURPLUS.

If the Ontario Government gets its subsidy of a million and a half for the T. and N. O. railway, which the Liberals of Ontario started without any Federal aid; if the Manitoba Government gets all that it asked in the way of increased financial grant; and if the British Columbia Government gets its better terms, which Mr. Borden has promised, then good-bye to the Fielding surplus. A few years of such rule, the Ottawa Free Press thinks, will leave the treasury as empty as it was in 1896, when the Conservatives last left office.

DATE OF THE ELECTIONS.

The Toronto News, which seems to be the spokesman of the Whitney government, gives out that Sir James Whitney says that the date of the elections will be fixed as late as possible to permit of a revision of the voters' lists, which must be completed, he says, before the writs are issued, and that the announcement will be made in a day or two. The electors of the province will find that, in this matter, the public interests will receive no consideration. The time will be fixed at whatever date Sir James thinks will be most largely in his party advantage.

EXCEEDINGLY SARCASTIC.

The Ottawa Journal (Conservative) makes this statement, which will be accepted as just, except the conclusion, which no Conservative, and even no Liberal, will assent to:

"Of the Liberal cabinet of 1874-78, Laurier is the only survivor in the Commons. Of the Conservative cabinet of 1896, Foster is the only survivor in the present cabinet. Two cases of the survival of the fittest.

Does the Journal mean to say that Hon. Mr. Foster is better than Sir Charles Tupper, Hon. John Costigan or Hon. John Haggart. If what the Journal says was "writ sarkastic," no Liberal newspaper has ever said anything so cutting of the head of the nest of traitors that conspired against, and wrecked, Sir Mackenzie Bowell and his ministry, the sixth since Confederation.

KING A CANDIDATE.

There is no doubt whatever that the result of the recent turn-over in the province of Ontario will react injuriously, as it reflects discreditably, upon the Whitney administration. The electors of Ontario, seem to think that it is not desirable to keep any one government too long in power. In the Local Legislature of Ontario, there are great opportunities for legislation in the interests of the people. Hon. Mackenzie King, who, as Minister of Labour in the Laurier Cabinet, has done so much in the interests of labour and its associated interests, manufacturing, is going to be a candidate in North Waterloo, in opposition to Dr. Lackner, the present Conservative member. His presence in the Legislature will give it a character in the regard of the interests of labour, which has not been adequately in evidence. If the labour interests in West Peterborough will give their support to a candidate that will cooperate with Mr. King, the welfare of the working classes will receive some other, and more valuable, attention than mere election-time attention.

REFORESTATION.

Prof. Fernow has made an exhaustive examination of the reforestation possibilities of the north country, by means of a bird's eye glance. But either he or Mr. Burnham, or Mr. McClelland, who provided Government transportation by auto at $15 per day—$45—did not possibly get one hint of practical value beyond which is known to every person familiar with the conditions in the north country. A cruise on the "Bessie Butler" would have revealed as much new knowledge. It is, however, well enough to make a show of doing something, whether it amounts to the planting of a single tree, or not. Former representatives would have made the trip to the north at their own expense and have accomplished as much in the way of preventing farms from being stripped of timber and converted into "sand dunes, and made a prey to fimaes." The report of the visit and the practical deductions, of no practical value, show that the visit of the professor was unnecessary. Our own member would have done as much. Our representative makes great promises, and it is hoped that he speaks with Mr. Bourassa's consent; if so something may be allowed to be done.

GIVING THEM A CHANCE.

The Toronto News and the Mail and Empire and other enthusiastic Imperialists, who saw the wreck of the Empire in the presence of Sir Wilfrid Laurier at the head of the government, are hereby informed that Hon. Mr. Borden has included in his cabinet, three anti-British, and three anti-Imperial French Canadian Roman Catholics, as well as another English-speaking Roman Catholic, Hon. Mr. Doherty. Now that they are especially informed of this fact, they are expected to assume the proper spirit of indignation, and resent the outrage in no uncertain terms. They, of course, will point out that Sir Wilfrid Laurierier was not slaughtered to give place to the very elements that were combatted in opposing him. They will show him that the millions of flags waved in the interests of British connection, which was threatened so long as British Preference Laurier was in office, were an idle mockery, if the confessed enemies of British connection and everything British are given the plums of the cabinet; they will show that Bourassa, in the Borden cabinet, in three-ply strength, isn't what hundreds of loyal Ontario Conservatives and a good many misguided Grits voted for on Sept. 21. And we hope our readers will live to see the News and Mail and Empire taking this course. We are afraid that our trouble in calling attention to the presence of the treasonable elements Mr. Borden has put in the best places in his cabinet, will be wasted effort, and that these journals will "drink the hemlock" to the dregs and prostrate themselves before the power of Bourassa, the Conservative Cabinet-making Warwick of the twentieth century. Tory Toronto can't stand the trusts nominating a cabinet minister, but they accept the fact of traitors to the Empire putting three of their kind in the seats of the mighty.

THE PENALTY OF WEAKNESS.

Mr. Bourassa, hasn't yet asked anything of Mr. Borden that he did not get. He got three of his Nationalists in Mr. Borden's cabinet and in the best positions, too—no cabinet places without portfolio for him; but good big spending departments. Now, when Mr. Bourassa demands that Mr. Borden go back on the naval scheme sanctioned by parliament, and established by law, and refers a res gesta, to the people, will not Mr. Borden weakly yield, as he has weakly yielded, in the matter of the cabinet matters? So far, Mr. Bourassa has shown himself to be the master of the Borden administration. Mr. Borden has assumed a terrible responsibility in thus complicating the work of governing Canada, and advancing its development. He has placed himself, bound and fettered in the hands of the most sinister element of disruption and discord that has ever taken head in Canada. It was the boast of Mr. Borden's Ontario friends, and Ontario newspapers, the day after the election, that he held power quite independently of Quebec. Noble Ontario had rescued him from the hands of the enemy, and Mr. Borden was in a position to take the high imperial course, his mandate from loyal Ontario invited and warranted. But at the first step he halted; he basely surrendered to the anti-British section of his Quebec following, he turned aside from the high-level, Imperial path he was commissioned to follow, and is now floundering in the quagmire of opportunism—of treasons, stratagems and spoils. It may be said that Mr. Borden showed great firmness in taking action counter to the wishes, sentiments and aims of his loyal followers. But it was not courage, it was fear—he feared the reproaches of his friends and all loyal Canadians, less than he feared the power of Bourassa. He might placate his friends, and plead political exigency in extenuation of his betrayal of his decent and loyal friends—much love forgives much—but he was told that he could expect no mercy from Bourassa and his crowd. They demanded their pound of flesh, and would not be satisfied with one pennyweight less. They have got the first instalment, a concession, that will whet their appetites for more. Mr. Borden will have to pay the penalty of weakness, to the uttermost farthing, which would be a matter of comparative indifference, if his opportunism did not threaten injury to the highest national interests.

THE STATE AND THE MARRIAGE LAW.

There will be few dissenting voices even among Roman Catholics, from the principle laid down in the following resolution passed by a standing vote at the Ecumenical Conference yesterday:

"Resolved, that this Ecumenical Methodist Conference repudiate the principle that any Church decree should have power to override the civil law, and that any marriage consummated by any lawfully authorized persons, whatever be the religious beliefs of the contracting parties, shall be valid and inviolable."

Whatever it may be in the sight of the Almighty, marriage in the eyes of the State is a civil contract carrying with it certain obligations, for non-compliance with which definite penalties are prescribed. Clergymen in this country who perform the marriage ceremony are the agents of the State, from which alone they receive their authority to act. The State, represented by the various Provincial Governments, might at any time transfer the power of performing the marriage ceremony to Town Clerks, Registrars, or other secular officials, leaving to the clergy of various denominations such unofficial supplementary rites and ceremonies as the contracting parties might desire, and without which they might not regard their union as a true marriage in the sight of God.

It is to be hoped that no such drastic action will be necessary in Canada to vindicate the right of the State to control the civil ceremony of marriage. Present conditions cannot be permitted to continue. The State must be supreme, and all marriages performed by its authority must be recognized by all citizens and all churches as valid and inviolable.

CANADIAN LAMBS IN BUFFALO.

(The Globe)

It is a strange commercial news item that does not begin these days with the words: "With the elections out of the way." This applies especially to the live stock business, because some curious things happened in the trade while the campaign was on. There were photographs of flocks of American lambs published, so that people could see the advance guard of a vast host of live stock coming into Canada to swamp the Canadian product. As an effective campaign argument the pictures of Canadian lambs during the middle of September were probably worth much more than they cost, but now trade has resumed its accustomed channels, and Canadian lambs are overcoming a duty of 75 cents and $1.50 per head and selling in the Buffalo market. The firm which imported American lambs before the election and photographed them in the pens here have circularised their Canadian customers advising them to send their lambs to Buffalo. Under date of October 10th, they write from their Buffalo office:

"Good, handy Canadian lambs, if here (Buffalo) yesterday, would here sold at top prices as we sold one deck of Canadian, average 98 lbs., at $6.75. In case you have any lambs ready to come to market wire or write us and we will try and get you in on a good market."

The same day the same firm at its Toronto place of business dealt in lambs of approximately the same weight at $1 less. According to the report of the stock market, lambs weighing 90 lbs. sold at $5.55, and those weighing 95 lbs., sold at $5.75. Swift's on Friday last as this market bought almost 100 lambs of practically the same weight as those which sold in Buffalo at $6.75, but the Canadian seller received only $5.60, or $1.15 less. The freight rates from western Ontario points are the same to Buffalo as to Toronto. The duty is 75 cents for lambs under one year, and $1.50 for lambs over one year. It would be difficult to fix the exact sum lost to the farmer because of the obstacles in the way of reaching the other market. The farmer should rejoice that although tariff barriers prevent him from selling lambs at a figure from $1.50 to $2.00 more than the ruling prices, he has saved the country from annexation by retaining tariff obstacles to trade.

NOW BOURASSA WON THE DAY

TORONTO TELEGRAM (CON.)

From Our Own Correspondent.

MONTREAL, OCT. 13.—The story of how the Nationalists "bluffed Hon. R. L. Borden right off the lot" is being noised abroad in the gloating of the victors. The process of Cabinet-making was in the final stages of its completion when the Nationalists proceeded to tell Canada's Premier "who's who and what's what."

Ultimatum to Borden.

The Nationalist demand, with all the weight of Henri Bourassa's authority behind it, was briefly:—

Department of Public Works for F. D. Monk.

Department of Inland Revenue for W. B. Nantel.

Portfolio of Postmaster-General for L. P. Pelletier.

No Quebec Protestant to hold a portfolio in the Cabinet.

Borden Resists Demand.

The ultimatum failed to bend R. L. Borden to the purposes of the Nationalists. The Premier suggested that he would complete the making of his cabinet in a spirit of justice to everybody. Whereupon the Nationalists departed, supplementing their ultimatum with words to this effect:

"You will either meet the demands of our ultimatum, or you will meet Parliament with a majority of eight or nine, the reduction being due to the nineteen Nationalists voting with Laurier."

Borden's Big Chance.

Hon. R. L. Borden permitted the Nationalists to depart in "high dudgeon." The saddest lot of politicians in the Province would have been the Nationalists if Hon. R. L. Borden had said:

"Very well, I will meet Parliament with such majority as the country has given me, independent of the Nationalists. And with that majority I will put through a redistribution bill, and go to the country on the one issue as to whether F. D. Monk or R. L. Borden is to be Premier of Canada."

Nationalists Won the Day.

A good strong bluff would have chased the Nationalists to the tall timbers. The Nationalists want the help of the Conservatives to carry Quebec for Bourassa in the Provincial elections. If they offended Borden they ruined their chances in the Province and Quebec would not enjoy the prospect of the isolation that must follow the Borden Government's appeal to the country on the straight issue as to whether the chosen Premier of Canada or the chosen leader of the Quebec Nationalists was to be supreme in the Government at Ottawa.

The Nationalist gloating betrays the truth that the Nationalists were sent for on behalf of Hon. R. L. Borden, and they got everything they asked for in the allotment of portfolios, because the Premier of Canada weakened under the pressure of a pale bluff that the Quebec Nationalists would have never dared to make good.

WOLGAST AND WELLS ARE MATCHED AT TEN ROUNDS

NEW YORK, OCT. 17.—Ad. Wolgast, lightweight champion of the world, and Matt Wells, lightweight champion of England, are finally matched. They will fight ten rounds at the Madison Athletic Club here on Friday, Nov. 3, for a purse of $15,000. The men are to weigh in at 133 pounds at 5 o'clock on the day of the contest.

For several days past there has been much speculation as to whether or not Wolgast and Wells would fight in this city. One club offered a purse of $22,500 for the match a few days ago, but could not guarantee to hold the fight. Since then the managers of the various local fight clubs have been hot on the trail of the match.

The fact that both men are champions in their class, that they are conceded to be so evenly matched, and that the contest will be an international one, marks the most important event of the season.

Pete Campbell Was The Star

Gordon (Pete.) Campbell, son of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Campbell, of this city, was the bright and shining star of Saturday's Inter-Collegiate game at Toronto, between Varsity and McGill. All the Toronto morning and evening papers unite in acclaiming him as the best man on the field. His accurate and speedy passing, and fast dashes around the end for big gains, keeping Varsity to the front. He had a forty yard dash, through a broken field to his credit, and was in the limelight all the way. To him fell the responsible task of giving the signals and handling the plays, and he made good in every sense of the words.

THE COMING OF ARTHUR

BY WILFRED CAMPBELL

Draped in dreamings, splendid, imperial, radiant,
Marshalling her hosts, divine, the Canadian Autumn
Pauses a space, ere, fateful, flambent, and nightward,
She darkens her torches.

Centuries ago, Old Britain, mother of nations,
Over the foam-wake westward sent forth her great ones,
Titan winners of empire, fearless and godlike,
Splendidly daring.

Brave Kirke, Alexander, Cabot, her myriad pilots,
Invincible, fain for the foam-ridges, steadfast achieving,
Finding Gods' futures. Man's freedoms behind far horizons,
Of dawn-worlds out-flaming.

Then those, her great fighters, those sons of her tireless and tameless,
Spirit of world-unrest, her martial endeavour,
Planting her standards, triumphant, on war-fields historic,
To float through the ages;—

Wolfe and Brock; illustrious sons of her daring;—
Triumphant, splendid heroes, immortally dying;—
Scarlet on Abraham, Queenston, their blood as the maples
Her glory proclaiming.

Then, those, her great viceroys, noble servants of empire,
Rendering service unselfish, her greatness to build up;—
Throughout the turbulent days of strife and endeavour,
Wisely she chose them;—

Dalhousie, Durham, and Lisgar; Dufferin, Argyll;—
Stanley, Aberdeen, Minto; Grey her great Consul,
Who left us but yesterday, honoured, revered, and regretted
In the young nation's grieving.

And now in the fullness of time, her queenship of Empire,
She sends us her prince of the blood, all royalty's manhood,
In him, Imperial Viceroy, steadfast and valiant,
Duke Arthur of Connaught.

Stately Canadian maples, in garments golden,
Splendid beeches and sumachs grandly apparelled,
All the Autumn glory of forest and mountain;—
God-like to greet him.

Up the St. Lawrence, Ottawa those drapings of splendour
Homage meet for a king in the beauty of Autumn.
War mas the hearts of our people, royalty's conquest,
In the coming of Arthur.

Wilfred Campbell.

WEDDING BELLS

ROBERTSON—KELLY.

A very pretty wedding was solemnized this morning at St. Peter's Cathedral when Miss Annie Kelly and Mr. Joseph Robertson were united in the holy bonds of matrimony. Rev. Father O'Brien officiating. The happy couple left on the 11.45 train for Buffalo.

THE PRICE OF POTATOES

It is interesting to note in connection with the price of potatoes, that Mr. S. A. Oke all last week was selling the tubers considerably below the prevailing market price, retailing from his store at $1.50 per bag. He was therefore, somewhat surprised to find some purchasers who had learned the market price had dropped 40 cents on Saturday expected that he would give a similar reduction, which would have resulted in his selling potatoes at $1.10 a bag, a price out of the question under the present conditions.

"CHILDREN'S DAY" CELEBRATED AT ST. JOHN'S CHURCH

"Children's Day" was celebrated at St. John's church Sunday at all the services, Holy Communion at 8.30, Matins at 11 (with special sermon on Sunday school work by the Rev. Mr. Sawers of St. Luke's), children's service at 3 p.m., and Evensong at 7 p.m., bringing before large congregations the importance of a larger interest in this great work. At all services children's hymns were used, and during the offertory in the morning and evening, the solo work was given by the choir boys. The most note worthy items were numbers by three of the boys, Arthur Johnston, age 11, Harold Conway, age 7, and John Turner, age 7. The intonation and words were well defined and clear and Mr. Devey may well be proud of his boys.

At the children's service at 3 p.m., Rev. Canon Davidson gave a talk on the construction of the church, divine and human, showing how Anglican church buildings are arranged according to the ancient Jewish Tabernacle.

The decoration of the cross by the scholars was a beautiful ceremony. The cross was reared by Cyril Devey and Arthur Horsfield, and Mrs. Devey and Miss Maud Rush took charge of its decoration, leading by inserting in the centre beautiful tuber roses.

The white-robed choristers followed, and then commencing with the baby class, every scholar marched up to the altar rail and inserted their floral offering. The cross was then taken into the nave, and the pretty electric bulbs, half concealed among the beautiful flowers and foliage, burst forth with a flash, making a truly beautiful sight.

The service concluded with the hymn, "I love to hear the story," heartily sung by the children, and by many parents and friends assembled.

SCOW SANK

(Lindsay Post)

Yesterday morning when the men employed on the drill scow, "Frank Fairen" of Peterborough, which has been drilling in the Scugog River since the middle of September, returned to work they found that it had sunk. There are on which the drill rests when working four upright posts, one at each corner to keep it stationary and the scow was resting on these posts this morning only considerably lower than when the drill is at work, the corner posts having been raised when the men quit work Saturday night, so as to allow the drill scow to float.

The men immediately set to work at raising the scow from the bottom of the Scugog. Two scows were brought up, one on each side of the drill scow. Large square timbers were then placed across the space between the two scows, one in front of the drill and one behind. Chains were fastened underneath the drill scow, and passed over the timbers, which were jacked up.

WILL AVOID PETERBORO'

In connection with the proposed improvements on the G. T. R. line between Port Hope and Midland, the Post has been informed that the line between Omemee and Millbrook and running through Bethany, will be considerably improved. The grain trains will then take this route to the front instead of passing through Peterborough. There is absolutely no truth in the rumours that the train crews would be removed to Belleville when the proposed improvements are made.—Post.

The funeral was held unuder the auspices of the S. O. E. Society, of which Mr. Williams acted as Chaplain. The general esteem in which the deceased was regarded was manifested in the number of floral tributes.

The pall-bearers were Messrs. Rose and F. Linley, (neighbours), and Messrs. Wareham, Shiner, Frick and Smith of the S. O. E.

THE DOCTOR'S QUESTION

Much Sickness Due to Bowel Disorders

Rexall Orderlies are a positive, pleasant, and safe remedy for constipation and bowel disorders in general. We are so certain of their great curative values that we promise to return the purchaser's money in every case when they fail to produce entire satisfaction.

Rexall Orderlies are eaten like candy, they act quietly and aid in producing a soothing, strengthening, healing influence of the entire intestinal tract. They do not purge, gripe, cause nausea, flatulence, excessive looseness, diarrhoea, or other annoying effect. They are especially good for children, weak persons, or old folks. Three sizes, 10c., 25c. and 50c. Sold only at our store.—The Rexall Store, McDermid and Jury.

THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron

"I HAVE been thinking to-day of the undercurrents.

No, I do not mean the undercurrent at the seashore that endangers so many lives.

But I do mean a dangerous undercurrent just the same.

The undercurrent of thought, is what I refer to.

You are seated at your desk attending to some task. Theoretically, all your thoughts are upon your work. Actually, only your top thoughts are with your task. For all the time there is a steady undercurrent of thought of other matters on in your mind.

Sometimes the undercurrent consists of a review of work done; sometimes it relates to the good time you are going to have to-morrow; often it is pondering upon your next season's wardrobe; again it is concerned with something that is going on outside the window. In my own case, I find it is most frequently a cogitation upon what I am going to do next.

If you think that only volatile and lightminded people thus divide their thoughts, please observe yourself the next time you sit down to some task. If you cannot discover any undercurrent in your mind, you may consider yourself quite above the class for which I write—Lincoln's friends—the average folks.

Now, perhaps, you want an explanation of my description of the undercurrent of thought as dangerous. Perhaps you are asking, "What harm can it do if I DO have an undercurrent of thought? What objection is there to my thinking of two thigns at once if I can? What is there dangerous about it?"

The danger, my friend, is simply to your capacity to do the best work of which you are capable and to do it in the least possible time.

That undertow carries something out to sea, just as surely as the ocean undertow does. And that something is your concentration.

To be sure, there is no harm in your thinking of the work you have done, or the work you are going to do, or even praiseworthy subjects for thought, except when they are thieves. And in this case, that is what they are, since they setal your thoughts from the subject to which they belong.

If the volume of thought which goes into that undercurrent could be combined with the volume of thought which is upon your work, don't you see how much more swiftly and correctly and thoroughly your work would be done?

Of course, it is not the easiest thing in the world to control this undercurrent. But, I believe it can be done. I believe that if you scold yourself severely every time you find that undertow growing powerful, and try with your whole might to bring all your thoughts to bear on what you are doing, you can at least diminish the power and volume of the thought undertow.

Here's wishing you good luck if you care to try.

Please wish me the same.

At "The Grand" Saturday Next Matinee, Night

Read what the Montreal Star has to say:

"The Private Secretary" has been presented times without number in Montreal, and having been acted for the most part by American players our audiences have got into a rut in regard to the manner in which this comedy should be presented.

The piece is of that nature generally characterized as "farcical" by writers on stage topics. To take exception that particular classification is not purposed, but it would be, perhaps, justifiable to state that this play is simply a broad comedy. It may be acted according to American traditions or according to English traditions; and the two are as far apart as the North and South Poles.

Mr. C. James Bancroft elects to enact the part of the secretary according to English traditions. His Rev. Robert Spaulding is always a gentleman, rather eccentric and considerable of a molly-coddle, but not necessarily, because of that, an egregrious ass. Because Mr. Bancroft shows us the celebrated curate in a new light much astonishment has been expressed, and some have been heard to say that either Mr. William Gillette or Mr. Bancroft are wrong in their limning of the character.

C. JAMES BANCROFT,
Who Appears in the Title Role of "The Private Secretary."

Good people, contain yourselves. "The Private Secretary" is on the way to become a sort of modern classic, and in such plays many divergent characterizations are allowable. If Mr. Gillettte wishes to make a ninny of his curate he may do so; if Mr. Bancroft desires to make a gentleman of him, well and good. Mr. Gillette's Spaulding will remain a creature to be laughed at; Mr. Bancroft's is one to be studied, it is one which must be analyzed to be appreciated. This

Other members of Mr. Bancroft's Spaulding — that it is a relief from some that figure in one's memory.

Other members of rM. Bancroft's company whose acting was enjoyable were Mr. Shirley Braithewaite as Gibson and Miss Nell Cave as Miss Ashford. Mr. Joseph Clapey, the Catermole, was suffering from a severe cold which caused him great inconvenience and handicapped his effectiveness in climaxes.

Again the uniform excellence of English enunciation. The dialogue did not require to be followed with the assistance of an ear-trumpet and a pronouncing dictionary. Success to English leading players and English companies; may they continue to visit Montreal in increasing numbers!

NORMAL STUDENTS ENTERTAINED TO A MOST ENJOYABLE "AT HOME"

One of the most enjoyable events of the season was celebrated in the Sunday School room of the Charlotte Street Methodist Church last evening, when the Epworth League of the church entertained about 125 of the Normal students to an "at home" which was very pleasant in every respect. The absolute success of the event was a source of gratification to the members of the League, who are worthy of much praise for their untiring efforts in trying to make all happy, their success in this respect being manifested in no uncertain manner, for on all sides were to be seen the jovial faces of the guests mingled in mirth and sociability, which is always in evidence at a well-organized event of this kind.

A splendid programme was given, the numbers of which were all of a very high order, and received the hearty applause of an enthusiastic audience. The numbers, which were well chosen, and exceptionally well given, were as follows:

Instrumental duet—Misses Smith and Storey.
Address—Mr. Henderson.
Vocal solo—Miss Dickson.
Reading—Mrs. Downey.
Quartette—Messrs. Lee, Fleming, Downey and Skitch.
Reading—Miss Thomas.
Vocal solo—Mr. Skitch.
Chorus—"The Milkmaid."

Autograph contest and social.
National Anthem.

Rev. G. W. Henderson, pastor, made an ideal chairman, and enlivened the proceedings by his humorous remarks, and added greatly to the social part of the evening by the hearty welcome he extended to all. He expressed his extreme pleasure at the large attendance of students, and hoped that he would have a chance to become even better acquainted with them.

Mr. R. J. Kidd made a neat speech, in which he extended a most hearty welcome to the visitors, and expressed his sincere desire to see them assembled in the same building and for the same purpose again in the near future.

The "Normalites" showed in no uncertain manner their appreciation of the kind and generous manner in which they were treated.

At the close of the programme a dainty luncheon and refreshments, prepared by the ladies of the League, were served, and a social evening in general was indulged in. A prize was given for the one having the most names on his or her exchanged card and this prize, a dainty box of chocolates, was won by Miss Lizzie Grady, who received the hearty applause of the audience.

The singing of the National Anthem concluded an enjoyable evening's entertainment.

NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE

A Scientific Achievement

The discovery and turning in an alarm of fire makes possible the heroic work of the firemen in putting it out.

Undiscovered, a fire spreads with amazing rapidity, destroying everything within reach.

The discovery of the dandruff germ was of inestimable value to mankind, but only because it paved the way for the greater service, the discovery of Newbro's Herpicide.

Dandruff is contagious, and its spread is checked by the use of Herpicide. This delightful scalp dressing kills the germ, and prevents the hair from falling. It stops that itching almost instantly.

Herpicide is the one standard and original dandruff germ destroyer. Any other preparation making this claim is an imitation.

Recommended and applied by first-class barbers.

Send 10c. in postage or silver for sample and booklet to The Herpicide Co., Dept. R., Detroit, Mich.

One dollar size bottles are guaranteed by all druggists. McDermid and Jury, special agents.

East City Woman Hurt

An East City woman, residing on Driscoll Terrace, had the misfortune to step on a loose plank in the sidewalk on Saturday afternoon. The plank tipped and she was thrown heavily to the ground, sustaining a broken ankle as a result. The victim of the accident was removed to her home and medical aid summoned. The plank in question had been pried up by some boys, earlier in the day, who were seeking to recover an article which had fallen between the boards.

A WONDER WORKER

"It heals like magic," is a favorite expression when Dr. Chase's Ointment is used. It works quickly, stops all itching at once, often heals in a single night. For eczema, salt rheum, barbers' itch, skin irritations or eruptions, it is a most satisfactory treatment. Being antiseptic, it prevents blood poisoning.

Canada's Population Is Announced As 7,081,869

Greatest Growth Has Been in the Western Provinces—Ontario's Growth Slower Than That of Quebec—Result is Disappointing Compared With the Estimates.

Ottawa, Oct. 18.—The decennial census taken in June last under the direction of Hon. Sydney Fisher is sorely disappointing. The census of 1901 showed a total population of 5,371,315. The late Government promised that the count in June would give a total of eight millions. The total, with only four electoral districts to hear from is officially given by Hon. Martin Burrell last night as 7,081,869. The probable addition to this is only about 70,000.

Ontario is credited with an increase of 336,966. Quebec has an increase of 351,789. An enormous increase is credited to Saskatchewan, the 1901 total being 91,279 and the 1911 total 453,509.

The result on the Parliamentary representation appears to be that Prince Edward Island loses one member, Nova Scotia two, New Brunswick two, and Ontario four, while the western provinces gain five members each, making a House of 332 members.

Four electoral districts have not yet made complete returns, viz., Cumberland in Nova Scotia, Regina and Battleford in Saskatoon, and Yale-Cariboo in British Columbia which are estimated to give a population of 70,000.

The population of the cities and towns reported may be changed slightly on revision, but it is thought it may be accepted as correct.

The figures follow:

Population of Canada by census of 1911, less districts not reported, as compared with 1901:

TO GUARD TRIPOLI

Captured City Will be Entrenched by Italians, Meanwhile Turks Are Endeavouring to Incite Arabs

START HOLY WAR

Rome (via frontier), Oct. 18.—The reports received by the Government from Gen. Caneva, commander of the Italian expedition in Tripoli, show that his attention has been directed chiefly to making the city of Tripoli an impregnable base from which will be provided the reinforcements and supplies necessary for the campaign in the interior.

Fortifications are being extended all about the city, making it a thoroughly entrenched camp. Posts will be established all along the line of the advance into the country in order to make it impossible for the enemy to cut off the invading column from its base of supplies.

News from the interior reaching the Italian commander through friendly natives, describes the Turks as making an active campaign among the Arabs to incite them against the Italians. The intentions of the Italians are misrepresented and their occupation of Tripoli is declared to be an infamous blot on the page of history. The Arabs are told that when Tripoli was taken, there was a general massacre and that those who were spared, suffered something worse than death. Men and women were made slaves and babes in arms were slaughtered. It was the intention of the Italians, the Turks said, to apply the sword and the torch to the whole country. Thus, it is said, it is sought to start a holy war against the invaders. The Turks are also said to hold out the promise of rich booty when the invaders are driven into the sea.

Hamilton, Oct. 18.—George Kennough, whose name has been so closely connected with the $6,000 express robbery case, appeared before Judge Monck in the County Court yesterday morning, on the charge of stealing $15 from his former employers, the Canadian Express Co. His counsel, W. H. Wardrope, K.C., declined to elect, and the prisoner was remanded for an indefinite period. The date of his trial will be set probably by agreement between his counsel and the crown attorney.

It is said that Kennough's wife and child are in needy circumstances. They live in Dundas, Kennough's former home.

Report on Martin Wreck.

Ottawa, Oct. 18.—The Department of Marine and Fisheries has received the preliminary report of the inquiry into the loss of the Martin, the Georgian Bay tug which was lost with all hands.

According to Captain Dean, the master of the barge Albatross, who with his wife and one sailor, was examined by the investigating officer, Captain Coates, Captain Vert of the Martin, chartered the Albatross on August 20, and the two vessels left Midland in fine weather. Off Point au Baril a storm was encountered, and the vessels tied up at the wharf. Vert insised on going out again. The decision was against Dean's judgment. Some distance out the barge sprang a leak and Dean notified Vert, who took no action. Later the barge, being in distress, Dean sent up a flare signal without any response. He then decided to save those on the Albatross if possible, and they put away in the yawl. The Martin was then visible, but was thought to be still towing.

Captain Coates speaks in high terms of Dean's work.

Bill Miner Out Again?

Millergeville, Ga., Oct. 18.—William Miner and two other prisoners at the State Farm here, overpowered a guard yesterday and escaped. A posse with dogs is on their trail. Miner, with Tom Moore, serving a life sentence, for murder, and John Watts, in for twenty ars for murder, gagged the guard and with his revolver took to the woods.

Miner was the leader of the gang which on February 18 last, held and robbed a Southern Railway train at Gainesville, Ga. He was sentenced to twenty years. He was wanted in Washington State and British Columbia for train hold-ups and escaped from the penitentiary at New Westminster, B.C., where he had been sentenced for robbing a C. P. R. train.

BELITTLE THE RISING

Chinese Government Prophesies Early Collapse of the Revolutionary Trouble.

SITUATION UNCHANGED

Pekin, Oct. 18.—The desertion of Gen. Li Yuan Hung from the rebel leaders, is reported to be a Government story designed to encourage the imperialist troops. The legations are strongly of the opinion that the Chinese army will not risk a battle when the investment of Hankow is complete, but will open negotiations with the object of inducing the rank and file to surrender their leaders, on the promise of pardon and a reward for the rebel troops.

The Japanese legation declares that there is no foundation in the report that the Japanese flag will be raised over the Hanyang iron works.

Despatches from Shanghai say that owing to the publication by the native press of statements that the Japanese newspapers are belittling the revolution, describing it as a mere riot, the revolutionaries are circulating pamphlets urging the boycott of Japanese goods.

The Government, which is constantly on the lookout for Japanese machinations directed against Manchuria, is of the opinion that the present Chinese crisis will prove that Japan's action and policy are entirely correct.

The Chinese Foreign Board has issued an optimistic communique, announcing the arrival of the troops at Hankow, and anticipating the speedy recapture of Wuchang and Hanyang. Nine troop trains left Paotingfu yesterday. Late advices from Hankow say that 3,000 Government troops are encamped outside of Hankow.

So far as can be learned the situation at Wuchang for the past six days has remained absolutely unchanged. There are no indications that the rebels possess any allies at points elsewhere, and, considering all the circumstances connected with the rising in the Provinces of Hupeh and Hunan, the revolutionists appear not to be making much headway. It is now said that the insurgents number at the most 6,000 drilled men, together with a few armed auxiliaries.

Several detachments of troops from Honan have united with the Government troops from the north, and a joint naval and military bombardment of the city will probably occur on Saturday. This will be followed by an assault. It is predicted here that the collapse of the revolution is only a matter of days. It will, however, have had the effect of intensifying the agitation for the immediate assembling of a National Parliament and of radical reforms in the Provincial Association system, which the throne will be obliged to accept.

Admiral Sahchenping, according to official announcement, arrived at Hankow yesterday with eight warships, and there are not less than a dozen foreign warships lying in the harbor. The British vice-admiral, Sir Alfred L. Winsloe, commander of the British eastern fleet, arrived at noon yesterday on the British despatch boat Alacrity. As he is the ranking officer, he may assume command of the combined forces.

Announcement a Surprise.

London, Oct. 18.—The announcement from Berlin that Vice-Admiral Von Kroesig, commander of the German Asiatic squadron, was about to take command of the international forces at Hankow came as a surprise to the British officials. It was stated at the Foreign Office that there had been no arrangement made for the placing of these forces under the supreme command of any one. It also appears that Vice-Admiral Sir Alfred L. Winsloe, commander of the British Eastern fleet, who arrived at Hankow at noon yesterday, is considerably the senior of Vice-Admiral Von Kroesig.

South Essex Recount.

Windsor, Oct. 18.—After several days' work the recount of ballots for South Essex in the recent election was completed by Judge M. A. McHugh, here Monday. Only technical errors were discovered, and Mr. Clark's majority now stands at 201, instead of 218, as shown in the early figures. The general mistake noted throughout was the failure to detach the counterfoil from the ballot, but this Judge McHugh decided to be unintentional, and the ballots were allowed to stand.

Wife-Beater Sentenced.

Hamilton, Oct. 18.—Mike Seban, the foreigner charged last week with brutally beating his wife because she refused to provide him with money with which to leave Hamilton, was sentenced to two months in jail yesterday by Police Magistrate Jelfs. The court had evidently entertained the notion of having the lash applied to Seban, and told the foreigner if he was again brought up on such a charge he would not get off so easy.

Attempted Suicide.

Leamington, Oct. 18.—A Southerner by the name of Abbott, who has been employed in the fruit belt during the last season, and who has been drinking heavily of late, took the contents of a two-ounce bottle of laudanum yesterday near Ruthven. Dr. Hiffler was called and arrived just in time to save the man's life. He was brought to Leamington later by Officers Lamarsh and Wilkinson and locked up.

The officers say he has been engaged in the liquor traffic and is wanted in several places in the south riding.

MAKING PROGRESS.

Six Jurors Have Now Been Chosen In McNamara Trial.

Los Angeles, Oct. 18.—The defence in the McNamara murder trial has passed six talesmen; one had been excused by the court, and two excused because of challenge for cause, when court adjourned last night. This was the most rapid day's work so far.

Of the six talesmen passed at least one seemed virtually sure of rejection before the jury is completed to try James B. McNamara for the death of Charles J. Haggarty, who was killed in The Los Angeles Times' explosion and fire.

The line-up of the passed talesmen last night was as follows:

J. W. Roberts, real estate dealer.
Robert F. Bain, carpenter.
H. Y. Quackenbush, expressman.
A. R. McIntosh, baker.
T. W. Adams, grocer.
G. M. McKee, retired real estate dealer.

Yesterday's rejections were: Z. T. Hiatt, excused by the court because of scruples against capital punishment.

Samuel McCreary, challenged for bias after he had said he had a fixed opinion as to whether or not The Times' disaster was caused by a criminal act.

Edmund S. Johnson, challenged and excused. He said he was prejudiced against labor unions.

Talesman Quackenbush, it was thought last night, would not find himself on the final jury because he did not believe in capital punishment. Talesman Adams said he read as a rule The Los Angeles Times, The Social Democrat and The Appeal to Reason.

At this rate a jury may be obtained within two weeks.

The defence may offer an alibi for McNamara, or may rest solely upon the gas explosion theory, in support of which it has gone as far as Europe for expert evidence.

Water Has Dropped Over Five Feet.

Kingston, Oct. 18.—The water in the St. Lawrence river has about reached the lowest point in its history. It is now 5 1-2 feet below the mark of three years ago.

Among the Thousand Islands navigation is quite seriously affected, and little motor boats have to move about with caution to avoid rocks. It is said that 500 or more new islands are now peeping above water.

Passenger steamers have quite a time in passing up and down, and wharves are being damaged by the decaying of wood, which heretofore has been under water.

"The Gun Runner"

By ARTHUR STRINGER

Intuitively, as she stood there studying his changing expression, she caught at the feeling that was still challenging and bewildering him.

"This is puzzling you — that a woman can face such things as this?" she demanded, with what was only a moment's hurried and unhappy smile. "But you must remember that I have lived in the midst of such things for nearly three years."

"Were they always this bad?" he asked her, with an answering smile that unedged the solemnity of the question.

"No," she replied: "but all the while I was in Guariqui I breathed nothing but an atmosphere of intrigue and counter-intrigue. It was the same with my brother Arturo, ever since he went south to fight for father's claims. We talked and worked together often in Guariqui. It must have crept into my blood in some way, for even when I was away from it, even when I was safe and happy in New York, I wasn't altogether sorry when a Locombian planter's son, studying in the School of Mines there, came and gave me the first inkling of what was going on. I believe I was almost glad when I found Arturo needed me again, and needed me so badly. It appealed to something dominant in me; it made idling seem so empty and foolish. Then I found it was more than an escapade, a game—that it was a peril, and I couldn't stand off. I couldn't hold myself away from it a moment longer."

He moved his head slowly up and down as a sign of comprehension. His sympathy brought the fleetest shadow of a smile to her still troubled lips.

"It's not that I like it," she said. "It's more that I can't bear to see anything that's near to me suffer undeservedly. I hate the thought of Arturo being dealt with so unfairly. It—it—— Oh, I think it must be because my own father was a soldier himself!"

"I rather imagine I know the feeling," McKinnon told her. "I think I've carried the same fighting madness in my own blood for quite a number of years."

"But you're a man, and you're still young," she murmured, looking up at him a little sorrowfully, wondering at the touch of bitterness that had crept into his voice. "You do it from choice; I must do it from necessity. You can glory in it—it's unselfishness with you; it's the spirit of adventure. With me it's only selfishness—it's only fighting for my own."

"But isn't that enough?" asked McKinnon comprehendingly as he took her hand and turned away toward the door.

He could imagine nothing less militant and predaceous than that soft and birdlike warmth which lay for a moment between his fingers.

CHAPTER XII
THE BULL-BAITERS

McKinnon waited until he knew Captain Yandel had turned in from the bridge. Seven bells of the first watch had already sounded mournfully out of the gloom of the dipping forecastle, and to wait longer would only add to the danger of the enterprise in hand. The wind had somewhat lessened, so that the seas on the Laminian's quarter were less thunderous than during the day, and comparative quietness reigned on the ship's upper deck.

McKinnon, as he stepped out and glanced towards the bridge, felt that this quietness was not without its touch of the ominous. Yet he quickly hooked back the cabin door and adjusted his helmetlike receiver. Then he deliberately pushed the call-button that summoned a steward from below. This done, he turned back to his operating-table, drew up his form-pad, and wrote a sentence or two on it, studiously knitting his brows as he decided on the name and distance of the sending ship. Then the pencil once more flew over the form-pad. He did not look up until he heard the steward's repeated knock on his door-frame.

"Tell the passenger in stateroom eleven to come to the wireless-room," he requested. "Get him there quick, for it's important."

Even before the sleepy-eyed steward had turned agay the operator had his 'phones once more over his ears. Then his eyes travelled to the watch lying on the table before him, and an increasing spirit of uneasiness both concealed and revealed itself in the studied and deliberate slowness of his movements as the minutes dragged away.

It was not until he caught the sound of approaching steps that he reached languidly out and swung down his switch-lever. He stood, then, in an attitude of studied preoccupation, waiting to send the "splash" of his blue-flamed spark out into the night. Yet the one sound that came to his anxious ears was that of slippered feet shuffling nearer and nearer to him along the deck. It was not a hurrying sound. There was no touch of anxiety or eagerness in the heavy and methodic tread, even as it entered his very cabin. Yet McKinnon knew, before he so much as looked up at the intruder, that it was Ganley who had come in answer to his call. And he had to restrain a smile at the thought of how identical were the tactics adopted by both his enemy and himself.

"Well?" demanded the non-committal and titanlike figure as McKinnon worked his key for a preoccupied moment or two, switched off, and once more took up his earphones.

It was at least a minute before the operator deigned to look about. When he did turn, his first movement was a peremptory sign for his visitor to close the cabin door. Yet before the man with the 'phones had once more turned about to his key and closed communication with a studiously weak-powered "Good-night," he had made careful note of the intruder's figure. It suggested, as he had hoped, that of a sleeper turned unexpectedly out of his berth.

Ganley was still in his pajamas of braided Chinese silk. Over these he had thrown his great black raincoat. This he held together at the waist in an attitude incongruously feminine, though the operator could still see the fat, dead-white flesh where the sleeping-jacket stood apart beneath the pendulous and weather-darkened throat. There seemed something gigantically and incongruously Columbinelike, something shaming and over-intimate and repulsive in the waiting figure and its accidental exposure of dead-white flesh.

"Well?" the titanlike visitor draped in black once more demanded. He seemed to show no undue haste, no exceptional interest as he stood there with his great shoulders hunched impassively up. Between his fingers, strangely enough, he held one of his thick-bellied, short Honduran cigars, as yet unlighted. He made a picture of guarded and judicial unconcern, a picture so complete that McKinnan stopped for a moment to admire it in secret. And every second that passed was a second gained. But the limit of delay had already been reached.

"You said you wanted to look over anything special that came in," began the operator, laying down his 'phones.

The Columbinelike giant in pajamas nodded his head.

"I've got news, big news," McKinnon confessed. "Yet it's not exactly about Ganley."

He could see the other man's eyeflash of impatience, but still the attitude of wary unconcern was not relaxed.

"Well?" was all Ganley ventured.

The man at the table, as he tore the written sheet from his form-pad, knowwhat he was being closely and keenly watched. This prompted him to toy with the situation for another moment or two, for he had his own watching to do.

"Do you know anything about this Locombian mixup?" was McKinnon's casual question as he peered momentarily down at the sheet in his hand.

"Not a whole lot," guardedly answered the man in the raincoat. "And what's more, I don't want to. They're all the same, those tropical revolutions; the same fireworks, the same brass bands, the same bad ammunition and gold braid and bombast, and the same eternal countryful of starving peons!"

McKinnon, watching him covertly and closely, was a little disappointed at his enemy's apathy. The red-rimmed eyes seemed to grow no more alert or alarmed, the heavy lips continued to chew the end of the unlighted and thick-waisted cigar. Yet time was slipping away minute by minute.

"I seem to have picked up pretty bad news from down there," began the operator, waving his message-sheet.

"You mean bad news for me?" mildly inquired the other, with a languid uplift of his shaggy, iron-grey eyebrows. The two men looked directly at each other for a silent moment or two. McKinnon had a two-fold end in view, and his line of advance was not an easy one.

"There's been hard fighting in Locombia," he slowly asserted.

Again the pajama-clad figure merely nodded.

"I've picked up a Savannah liner bound north; she relays the news from an Atlas fruiter. They've got this revolution of Ganley's in full swing."

The speaker did not allow his eyes to stray from the other's face. Yet he could still detect no unusual betrayal of concern. Beyond the spasmodic and habitual working of the heavy iron-grey eyebrows, the huddled hulk of a body in the steamer-chair made no movement that could be interpreted as a sign of surprise.

"They report that the revolutionary forces under De Brigard met the government forces under Ulloa on Tuesday."

"Where?" asked the other, casually enough.

"It was twenty miles southwest of Puerto Locombia; De Brigard was convoying eight mountain-guns up towards Guariqui."

McKinnon stopped and waited. The other man slowly took his cigar from his lips and looked at the tattered end. Any current of emotion that may have been awakened in him remained shrouded and subterranean. Whatever he might be, concluded McKinnon, he was at least a consummate actor.

"Well?" the stolid and guarded figure demanded; and that was his only comment. McKinnon bent over as though to consult the message-sheet.

"They report that De Brigard has pounded his way through the Locombian lines and occupied Itaula."

The other man sat down, with a scarcely audible sigh, in the broken desk-chair beside him. There was an appreciable space of silence, unbroken except for the breathing of the two motionless figures.

"Itaula!" at last purred the black-coated man, as though uncertain of the name. Then he peered down at his slippered toes for several meditative seconds, slowly stretching the gross legs clad in Chinese silk. McKinnon knew he was digesting his victory, but only to the initiated could the movement have been interpreted as the very core and essence of any such luxurious mental easement. Then he looked up and repeated the word "Itaula?"

Before McKinnon could realise it he was on his feet.

"One moment," he called back as he crossed the room.

McKinnon caught up a message-sheet and intercepted his enemy at the door.

"I want you to see this dispatch," he said, catching at the other's arm and talking against time. "I want you to understand what this 'Three-four-five-two—six Refunfuno' means. You'll see it here in the A B C Telegraph Code. It means 'Revolution broken out here.' I want you to see it for yourself. Then you'll know——"

"I'm taking your word for it, young man," retorted the other as he shook his arm free and started through the door. McKinnon knew it would be madness to try to hold him by force.

"What's up, anyway?" he asked instead, following the other out on the deck.

"I've got a map of that country down in my cabin," answered the huge figure in the Chinese silk.

"But we don't need your map!" persisted McKinnon.

"I guess we may as well find out where they're having all that fun we've had to miss," called back the other from the stair-head. And he was gone before McKinnon could get to his side.

The operator knew only too well what the man's return to his cabin meant at such a moment. He did not take time to determine in his own mind he cause of that return, whether his enemy had suddenly remembered his unlocked door and his unguarded papers, or whether something had cropped up to arouse his suspicions.

But McKinnon, without a moment's loss, sprang back into his wireless-room and faced his switch-lever. He threw the ebony handle of his starting-box down across the contact-pins with a force that seemed almost to explode the dynamo into a roar of droning protest. It was like the burst and sound-rush of an ascending rocket. Then his hand darted out to his key and he broke and closed the great current, quick and strong, sending the huge blue spark exploding from his coils until it cannonaded through the closed cabin with a crash and throb like the quickened thunderclaps of a tropical storm. Madly he repeated the call, again and again, wondering, as he feverishly worked the key in that one brief word of warning, if he had been too late; praying, as the moments dragged away and nothing broke the midnight quietness about him, that the girl in the cabin below had heard and understood his warning.

He suddenly began to reprove himself as he stood there counting off the seconds, and listening to the interminable muffled throb of the far-off engines, for not thinking in time, for not holding Ganley back, even though it had to be by force. Or he might have done it, he felt, by the mere pretense of some fresh message coming in. He might have kept him there for another precious five minutes if he had only acted as a man in his place ought to have acted. But he had missed his chance.

He crossed to his open door and paused there to listen. He knew that by this time Ganley was in his cabin, and that, unless Alicia Boynton had caught the warning signal, she had already been trapped. This gross, malevolent, red-handed enemy of whom she stood in such fear must already have confronted and caught her. The mere thought of it was too much for him.

McKinnon started back to his cabin, remembering he was unarmed, thinking of the revolver that still lay in his trunk.

But something in the quietness of the midnight ship filled him with some sudden keener sense of impending disaster. Without the loss of another second's time he turned and darted below decks.

CHAPTER XIII
THE RECOVERED GROUND

It took McKinnon but half a minute to reach the passageway that led to Ganley's cabin. He felt, as he paused for an instant before his enemy's closed door, that his entrance into the room before him involved a final and unequivocal betrayal of his own position. His line of advance from that time forward could no longer be the circuitous and subterranean one he had hoped to make it. The contest between him and Ganley, thereafter, would have to be open and aboveboard.

Then, preparing himself for the scene he was to face, he turned the knob and swung open the door.

The cabin was empty. The electric lights were turned on, the disordered berth stood before him, and Ganley's massive pigskin wallet lay on the floor. But the room was without an occupant.

McKinnon, now thoroughly alarmed, turned and ran to the second door farthur down the passageway. This door, he remembered, led into the cabin of Alicia Boynton, and for just a second or two he hesitated about entering it.

Then a great sense of gratitude welled up through him, for as he stood with his hand still on the knob the sound of the girl's voice came out to him. He had no time to resent the tumult and poignancy of this newer feeling, for it was the woman's words, and not her voice, that coerced him into sudden attention. "How dare you!" cried the voice beyond the closed door.

"How dare you come into this cabin!" she was crying. McKinnon could hear her gasp of what might have been either indignation or increasing fright.

"This is a little dose of your own medicine, young woman!"

It was Ganley who had spoken. His voice was still low and unhurried. It seemed almost casual in its studied deliberateness. Yet it held a tremolo of restrained passion that made the deliberating McKinnon wait there for a minute or two with his hand still on the door-knob.

It was Alicia Boynton's voice that sounded out of the quietness.

"How dare you!" she gasped again. "Cut out that play-acting and stand back against that wall there! So! Now hand out that stuff of mine — every line and rag of it!"

It was the woman who spoke next.

"I have nothing to hand out."

"I'll give you ten seconds," protested Ganley. "I'll give you ten seconds to get those papers of mine into my hand here, every shred of 'em!"

"I have no papers of yours," declared the more and more terrified woman.

Distress From Indigestion

Tried in Vain to Get a Cure—All Medicines Failed

Old Trouble Disappeared When the Liver and Bowels Were Set Right by

DR. CHASE'S KIDNEY-LIVER PILLS

You cannot make a greater mistake than to think that indigestion is confined to the stomach. It is a disease of the liver and bowels, and it is only by getting these organs healthy and active that you can ever hope to cure chronic indigestion.

Here are two cases reported by Mr. Skinner, which tell of continued failure to cure indigestion by dosing the stomach. Both were cured thoroughly by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

Mr. A. C. Skinner, Atlantic St., Hardwoodhill, Sydney, B.C., writes: "My wife was troubled with indigestion and tried all sorts of medicines in vain. Hearing about Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, I got her to try them, and to our great delight she was cured. We would not think of being without them in the house for use when the liver and bowels became sluggish.

I told a friend about them and gave him a box. He had suffered from indigestion for yeras and tried most everything he could get. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills were also successful in his case, and he says they beat any medicine he ever came across."

FIVE DOCTORS GAVE UP ALL HOPE

Said the World Ho et Kidney Trouble

"FRUIT-A-TIVES" CURED HER

MOUNTAIN, Ont., Dec. 14th. 1910.

"For six years, I suffered from dreadful Kidney Disease. My legs and lower part of my body were fearfully swollen, and the pain was awful. My people thought sometimes I was dead, as I would faint from the agony. Five different doctors attended me, and all said it was kidney trouble and gave me no hope of getting well. A kind neighbor told me to try "Fruit-a-tives" and mentioned the case of Mrs. Fenwick, who was cured by them.

I took "Fruit-a-tives"—and in a short time, I began to feel better, the swelling went down, the pain was easier, and then "Fruit-a-tives" entirely cured me. All my friends look upon my recovery as a miracle, and I am unable to praise "Fruit-a-tives" enough."

(Miss) MAGGIE JANNACK.

"Fruit-a-tives" is the most scientific remedy ever discovered for Irritation or Congestion of the Kidneys, frequent Pain in The Back, and Swollen Limbs. 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, or trial size, 25c. At all dealers or from Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron

"The Captain had settled down to live in old Chester; his son, Cyrus, lived with him and his languid daughter-in-law — a young lady of dominant feebleness, who ruled the two men with that most powerful domestic rod —foolish weakness. This combination in a woman will cause a mountain (a masculine mountain) to fly from its base; while kindness, justice and good sense leave it upon unshaken foundations of selfishness. Only when the secrets of all hearts shall be revealed, will it be understood why a man loves a fool, but why he obeys her is obvious enough."

—Margaret Deland.

There is a certain kind of selfishness, which, although it is one of the commonest and most troublesome in the world, seems to me is seldom recognized as such—and that is the selfishness of fear.

People who hamper and hinder and fret and tie down those whom they pretend most to love by fear, usually think they are showing love and tenderness and beautiful solicitude.

As a matter of fact, they are usually giving an evidence of simon pure selfishness.

When the fear tyrant objects to his loved ones doing this or that, because there might be some vague possibility of risk connected with the pleasure, he thinks he objects because he loves them so very much. But, nine times out of ten, the real rock-bottom foundation for the objections is the fact that he knows he will worry and be unhappy.

I know a man who was badly thrown from a horse in his youth, by the breaking of a saddle girth, and had a deep-seated fear of horses. And yet this man bought his little boy a pony.

"That gift," he told me, "cost me more self-sacrificing than anything I ever gave him. I made myself buy the pony, because I believed that the exercise would do him good physically and give him pleasure and develop courage and self-reliance in him. But it was weeks before I could go out to ride without suffering agonies of anxiety. Again and again I longed to take it from him, but I would not let myself, because I believed I ought not to allow my fear to deprive him of pleasure and benefit."

What an extremely rare scruple that is.

How many people, so far from being capable of such heights, shamelessly descend to the depths of hindering those they love the pleasures and profit, by saying frankly and openly, "If you do that I know I shall worry."

"Every night," chronicles Mrs. Deland, "the captain screwed down all the windows on the lower floor; in the morning Cyrus pulled the screws out. Cyrus had a pretty taste in horseflesh, but Gussie (the young lady of dominant foolishness) cried so when he once bought a trotter, that he had long ago resigned himself to a friendly beast of twenty-seven years, who could not go much out of a walk, because he had stringhalt in both hind legs."

What one of us does not know some "Gussie" in real life, whose fears bring similar discomfort and inconvenience and deprivation into his or her home circle?

And what one of us does not, to some extent, however small, have his share of the selfishness of fear?

The instinct to preserve our own peace of mind at the expense of other peoples' comfort and pleasure, seems to be a natural and almost universal one.

Unfortunately, it is usually regarded as a virtue, or at the worst, a weakness.

If we can only come to recognize it as an actual failing, a real vice and happiness destroyer, surely we shall have gone part ways toward curing ourselves of it.

SOMETHING ABOUT OUR NEW GOVERNOR-GENERAL

Ottawa, Oct. 16.—A new Governor-General has been welcomed and Ottawa has recovered from the temporary delirium of enthusiastic loyalty which possessed every citizen on Saturday. Loyalty remains but the frenzy has passed and it is now possible to arrive at some estimate of the impression created by the distinguished arrivals personally, quite apart from their importance as representatives of the King and Queen.

Ottawa is going to like the Duke and Duchess of Connaught, and Canada is certain to acclaim them as the most popular viceroy and vicerine that have been sent to Canada for many years.

From the time he set foot on the King's wharf at Quebec until the moment when he crossed the threshold of Rideau Hall ,the uncle of King George has been making friends. He has not given the impression that he desired to condescend; on every occasion when he has been given opportunity, he has shown that he has no fear for his dignity by allowing his cordiality to show.

HAS IMPRESSED FRENCH

He knows Canada, and is evidently sincerely glad of the chance which has come his way to have some part in the making of her history at a period of her most remarkable development. He realizes her peculiar problems but approaches their solution with broad minded sympathy. He has made a most remarkable impression on French-Canadians.

His French is almost perfect, a French spoken with liquidity of pronunciation, a perfect mastery of idiom and an absence of formality of phrase. "I wish," said the correspondent of a French-Canadian newspaper to the Star representative, "that I could speak French like that." The Duke had just concluded his brief reply to the welcome of the St. Jean Baptiste Society, and the thousands who packed Parliament Hill were cheering wildly.

NOT THE USUAL KIND

None of the speeches which he has delivered has been long, but all have been happily worded and each has struck a note of earnestness and desire to serve. The first speech in French delivered in Quebec was an excellent example of the manner in which he has been effective and yet "different." He did not say the usual things inspired by the neighbouring Plains of Abraham, and tell of hopes that the bravery there exhibited might ever be the bravery of Canadians, while the battle between the races might be forgotten while English-Canadians revered the memory of Montcalm, and French-Canadians did honour to the name of Wolfe. Instead by a few deft sentences, he showed a much deeper and older reason for friendship, a friendship for which he wisely inferred there was no reason to plead. England herself, since Norman mingled and married with Saxon was, and had been, largely French by blood and kinship.

THE ENTENTE CORDIAL

How quickly this idea, new to the consideration of many of his hearers, sank in, was expressed by a French-Canadian as the crowd slowly made is way down the wide stairs of the Council Chamber. "That is true," he said, in discussing this part of the reply to Sir Lomer Gouin, "and perhaps that is why we shall always speak of his brother as the King of the Entente Cordiale."

LOOKS LIKE THE SOLDIER

The Duke of Connaught is probably the tallest of the descendants of Queen Victoria. He stands about 6 feet 11 inches high, and broad of shoulder and erect of carriage, he does not need the military uniform to proclaim him a soldier by training and choice The Duchess, who retains her youthful looks, has taken every opportunity to show her pleasure at being in Canada. On the return from the great reception on Parliament Hill on Saturday, while His Royal Highness was obliged to content himself with a continuous touching of the hat in recognition of the cheers, she leaned far forward, smiling and bowing from side to side, and making no secret of her enjoyment of the demonstrations of loyalty.

DUCHESS AND LADY LAURIER

The greeting of Lady Laurier by her Royal Highness was watched with appreciation by the ten thousand who crowded the grounds outside the Parliament Buildings.

There was nothing of formality in it, but instead, while His Royal Highness conversed for five minutes with Sir Wilfrid, the Duchess maintained a most animated chat with the wife of the Liberal Chieftain, and at one point laughed quite merrily.

WHEN BLOOD IS POISON

The blood must be filtered, otherwise you are poisoned. If the kidneys fail the liver is overworked, and becomes torpid. By using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills you get both these filtering organs working right, and also ensure healthful action of the bowels. For this reason these pills are an ideal family medicine. They cure biliousness, constipation, chronic indigestion and kidney disease.

THE GIRL WITH A GROUCH

She is always selfish, unhappy and discontented.

The most selfish girl in the whole world is the girl with a grouch. The most unhappy girl in the whole world is the girl with a grouch. The effect would not be so disastrous if it ended with her own feelings; she not only injures herself, but she injures every one about her, because she seems to enjoy her grouch most when she sees those about her most unhappy. With some girls, this disposition is chronic—the attacks last from four days to four weeks. Girls subject to the grouch, spend nearly all their time thinking of themselves. They also spend much of their time smoothing out with cosmetics the wrinkles that these grouches plow into their faces. They cannot, however, change the facial expression that this disposition cultivates. Elsie Janis, who is famous for her youthful beauty, says: "A sweet disposition does more toward promoting good looks than any other thing. Never think unkind thoughts of anybody, never sulk, never get into a temper. You can't have a nice, frank expression half of the time, if, during the other half of the time you are wearing a frown. Keep your temper and think kind thoughts. Temper is a great wrinkle producer, and a sour expression adds years to one's looks." It is considered as much an asset nowadays for a young lady to have a good disposition as beauty. Lady Diana Manners, who is a recent London debutante, has been named Lady Perfect Manners, because of her beautiful disposition.

ANCIENT VILLAGE FOUND

Remains of Houses and Utensils Used By Prehistoric Man

What is claimed to be a Neolithic walled village has been discovered near the main road between Harrogate and Bolton Abbey at a spot a few miles from Otley, by Mr. W. Storey, of Pelraton, a member of the Royal Archaeological Society of Great Britain and Ireland.

The discovery may be divided into two parts. In a dell behind a hill are 24 stone circles, varying in diameter from 20 feet to 3 feet, the whole being surrounded by evidences of a stone wall.

One of the stone circles was a well. A number of stone implements, which experts ascribe to the Neolithic period, have been found.

On a site above the village is a 30 foot stone circle commanding a magnificent view for miles down the valley, and evidently at one time used as a look-out.

On the other side of the hill are two stone circles connected by a huge stone slab, a small stone circle, filled with smaller circles, about 8 inches in diameter, and 2 feet deep, containing charcoal, and two large circular erections, supposed to have been used as a place of worship and a crematorium.

A LAUNDRY WRINKLE

When washing skirts, especially starched ones, do not hang them to the line by the hem, as this pulls them out of shape, and makes it difficult for the froner to get them into shape again. Find the centre of the back seam, peg on to the line at the waist, then in the centre of the seam, and again at the bottom of the hem. The skirt not only does not get out of shape, but dries quicker.

NOBLEMAN INVENTS INVISIBLE AIRSHIP

Mirror-Like Surface of Huge Craft Will Reflect Its Surroundings and Effectually Hide It

The recent disaster to the great naval airship at Barrow, England, and the sharp criticism of the British press, it is said, at last has caused the British Admiralty and War Department to adopt different views with regard to the development of military aeronautics in England. Four aeroplanes have now been ordered from the Bleriot Company in France, and a British War Office expert is now in France attending the military competitions for heavier than air machines that are taking place at Rheims.

This complete change of official attitude is primarily due undoubtedly to the remarkable lessons taught by the Army manoeuvres held recently, and almost simultaneously, in France and Germany. Comparatively little notice has been taken in Great Britain of the part played by aeroplanes at those manoeuvres; yet the results obtained in utilizing the heavier than air machine for purposes of war cannot but have been most important. One may judge this from the fact that as soon as the operations came to a conclusion the Kaiser, in one of his characteristic speeches, declared that the money spent on military aviation in Germany was quite insufficient. A few days later a semi-official announcement was issued to the effect that there would be a substantial increase for the purpose of aeroplanes in the German Budget over the $375,000 voted last year. Similarly in France the Budget for 1912 for military aviation was at once raised to nearly $3,400,000.

Curiously enough, simultaneously with the British Government's decision to give up further experiments with dirigibles, came the news that a young engineer of noble birth, Baron A. Roenne, has just been granted patent rights in England for an improved airship, which promises to be a wonder—if the invention can be successfully worked out.

Baron Roenne, who has already designed and built a number of dirigibles, believes he has solved the problem bearing on the equal distribution of weight in a lighter than air vessel. According to him the number of accidents to airships would have been almost nil had the constructors given greater importance to the question.

In order to preserve this essential requirement of "flight," the inventor's airship will be so built that the passenger-car will be exactly of the same length as the framework.

"As planned by myself," said Baron Roenne, "the new airship will have accommodation for 400 passengers and be capable of remaining aloft for at least a week. She will be fitted with fifteen motors, each developing 120 horsepower, and this aggregate power of 1,800 will, I am confident enable her to travel at a speed of 40 miles an hour, and this in a 40-mile wind."

Another wonderful feature of Baron Roenne's projected airship is that at a height of 3,000 feet she will be absolutely invisible. It is by the method of equalization of light and shade that the inventor claims that it is possible to secure invisibility for the airships while in the air.

The cover, or envelope, of the airship is made of chromium, a metal possessing a highly-polished surface, which is perpetually retained by a covering of transparent varnish. Therefore, the metal is equivalent to a mirror, and it is by reflection that the invisibility is obtained. The surface and sides of the polished envelope naturally must reflect the same colors—bright or murky, according to the weather, and blend with its environment. The device has been submitted by the inventor to the officials at the Greenwich Royal Observatory, who declare that it is thoroughly scientific and certainly practicable.

HON. WALTER SCOTT

Sketch of the Career of a Typical Western Canadian

Like other prominent Canadian politicians, the Hon. Walter Scott entered politics by way of journalism. Sir Wilfrid Laurier himself gained much of his facile power of expression during the year in which he edited Le Defricheur. Alexander Mackenzie, the only other Liberal Prime Minister that Canada ever had, was also an editor, while the Hon. W. S. Fielding grew politically wise while wielding the editorial pen of the Halifax Chronicle.

A very humble position introduced Mr. Scott to journalistic life, for it was none other than that of printer's devil. The young "devil" rose quickly. He was soon at the "case," and a year or two later saw him mechanical foreman. With mechanical foremanship he combined leader writing, for in those days there were no nice distinctions between the different departments of Western newspapers. Ten years after "pitting" the West, Mr. Scott was editor and proprietor of two newspapers. There is cause for gratification in the fact that men like Mr. Scott are constantly rising from the ranks to give States and Provinces and nations just laws and good government. Upon this fact the world depends for its guides and leaders. The old idea that a single class, an hereditary, or patrician class of the community could supply a succession of competent law-givers has hopelessly broken down.

Mr. Scott grew up as the son of pioneer farmers in Old Ontario. His father died when he was a baby, and for that reason Mr. Scott had to work perhaps a little harder than other boys. He milked and ploughed and did every common task incidental to the raising of stock and the growing of grain. In the summer time he went, like other children, barefooted to the common school, and in the autumn, when the mornings were chilly, he learned the trick of warming his feet on the patches where the cows had been laying.

The spring of 1885 saw him, a gaunt lad of seventeen, pack up his traps and set out for the Canadian West. He felt in his bones that he was not destined to spend his life upon the farm. He got off the train at Portage La Prairie, one of the small towns west of Winnipeg, on the Canadian Pacific Railway, which was then pushing through the Rockies to the Pacific Coast. For five months he drove a tradesman's cart, and then, following a true instinct, he entered the office of the Manitoba Liberal, and became a printer's devil. The proprietor evidently thought him a bright lad, for about a year afterwards the two went together farther west, and started a new paper in Regina, then the capital of the North-West Praries. The next fifteen years were spent by Mr. Scott in Regina, and intermittently in the neighboring town of Moose Jaw, in active newspaper work. He did everything there was to do about a newspaper. He often wrote a leading article and set it up in type himself. It is one of his boasts that he is still a union printer. The years brought their return. In 1894 Mr. Scott bought the Moose Jaw Times, and the following year the Regina Leader, both of which are, to-day prominent among the daily newspapers of Western Canada.

Toronto Man Cured of Intolerable Itch

Mr. J. E. Hooper, Toronto.

By Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment

"I just want to say a good word for Cuticura Soap and Ointment. Four or five years ago I was in Port Arthur, and I had an attack of the itch. It certainly was an intolerable nuisance. The itching was principally at nights before I went to bed. The thighs were especially affected.

"I went to two doctors about it, and tried more than one remedy. I was beginning to think the complaint was incurable, when I was telling my trouble to a barber, and he said that he would guarantee to cure me. He told me to take a hot bath, use Cuticura Soap, and then apply Cuticura Ointment. I took his advice, and, sure enough, the itch vanished. I had probably been troubled with the itch for two or three months before I tried Cuticura Soap and Ointment, and they completely cured me of that intolerable nuisance. After one warm bath with Cuticura Soap and use of the Cuticura Ointment I was never troubled with the itching again. Anything in this testimonial I would be prepared to swear to in a court of law." (Signed) J. E. Hooper, 268 Parliament Street, Toronto, Jan. 16, 1911.

For more than a generation Cuticura Soap and Ointment have afforded the speediest, simplest and most economical treatment for skin and scalp humors. Sold by druggists and dealers everywhere. A liberal sample of each, with 32-pag book, sent free, to any address, by the Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., 53 Columbus Ave., Boston, U. S. A.

RULES OF GREAT WORTH

Before going to bed that night the discouraged girl had committed to memory these rules for being a good clerk which the older woman had prepared in the form of an acrostic, daintily colored and framed:—

Make light of hardships, forget annoyances, and keep cheerful.

Avoid quarrels, close intimacies and gossip.

Keep alert, interested, attentive and progressive.

Induce customers to buy by being pleasant, obliging and helpful.

Neglect nothing that will make you valuable to your employers.

Gain the good-will of your fellow-workers, and—keep it.

Give honest work and loyalty to your firm, it will not go unrewarded.

Omit laziness, rudeness, freshness and superiority in dealing with customers.

Obey orders, stick to rules, and don't be a firebrand.

Determine to succeed and live up to that determination.

So well did the clerk live up to her rules that not only the end of the month found her in her place, but she had conquered the unfriendliness of her mates and had won notice from her superiors by her courteous, obliging manner and her growing favor with customers.

PARNELL'S SISTER

Drowned While Bathing at Ilfracombe —Her Lonely Life

A romantic story came to light at Ilfracombe following the tragic death, while bathing there, of Miss Anna Catherine Parnell, a sister of the famous Irish Nationalist Leader. Miss Parnell went to bathe in a rough sea and was drowned. At the inquest next day the story of her solitary life under the assumed name of "Miss Palmer" was related.

Miss Parnell had lived at 6 Avenue road, Ilfracombe, in the house of Mrs. T. Rowe. She had been there since June, 1910, and on arriving there she gave the name of Palmer, and at once said that she was "getting on for sixty." While she was with Mrs. Rowe she had three letters in the name of Parnell, on which curious fact Mrs. Rowe said she passed a remark. After that all letters came in a sealed envelope, and addressed in the name of Palmer. Miss Parnell was a regular bather in the sea. When Mrs. Rowe remarked that it was not much of a day to go bathing, Miss Parnell merely said, "Rubbish."

The story of her death was told at the inquest by Mr. T. Austin, the bathing attendant. A heavy sea was running, and Miss Parnell began to drift out. Mr. Austin went for help, and Mr. Parkin and his son, with Police-Constable Bedford, launched the boat which was kept at the Tunnels, and secured the body, which was floating on its back.

"Accidental death" was the verdict.

Miss Parnell was one of four sisters, and at one time took an active part in the work of the Ladies' Land League. She was an eloquent platform speaker, and the author of numerous articles in Mr. William O'Brien's paper, the "Irish People."

At one time she lived at Brockley, London, S.E., also at Southwold, Suffolk.

It was her custom at Southwold for nearly six months in the year to go bathing every afternoon. For most of the time the water was far too cold for the ordinary bather to brave it. She always had two Irish retrievers with her; one named Judas stood guard over her bathing-box. She rarely spoke to anybody, and the landlady of the house where she stayed during those years afterwards said she never had half an hour's continous conversation with her.

CHEAPER CUTS OF MEAT

Butchers should endeavor to correct the impression of customers that only the high-priced meats are valuable as food. On the contrary, the cheaper cuts are often more highly flavored and fully as nutritious.

The chuck is one of the cheapest portions of the beef, but when cooked slowly in a small amount of water, either with or without vegetables for seasoning, is a most excellent dish.

In stewing meat, if too high a temperature is used, it will toughen the fibre. Another mistake is to overcook the meat until it falls to shreds. The skirt steak sells for 2 to 3 cents a pound less than the others, but if properly cooked is just as good. Lay the steak on a meat-board and score it well with a chopping knife. Then dredge with flour and put it into a smoking hot frying pan that has been greased enough to keep the meat from sticking to it. When well seared over on both sides, pour over it a little boiling water and allow it to simmer slowly for two hours. Season to suit the taste. A bit of carrot or onion or bay leaf and a little vinegar to soften the fibre will add to the flavor of the meat.

ILLITERATE SOLDIERS

All But One Per Cent of British Soldiers Can Read and Write

According to statistics recently published, the number of illiterate recruits in the French Army has attained the astounding total of 14,000. The German newspapers, on the other hand, point with pride to the fact that in the whole German Army they have only 46 illiterates; that is recruits who can neither read nor write.

Ten years ago the number of illiterates in the German Army was 218. Going back another decade, the number was 860. It is stated that the percentage of illiterates in the British Army—the last figures available being those for 1907—showed 1 per cent.; France, 3.5 per cent.; Austria, 23 per cent.; Italy, 31 per cent.; and Russia, 62 per cent.

Peerless Peninsular

A DURABLE CAST-IRON RANGE WITH MODERN CONVENIENCES

You don't want to use a range as a step-ladder—not as the ordinary thing—but you do want a strong, well-built range. This picture is given here to show that the oven door—a weak spot in most ranges—is a firm, strong piece of construction in the Peninsular and it is typical of the whole make-up of this durable range.

Some people prefer a cast-iron range but want one or two features usually found only in steel ranges.

The Peerless is designed for just such people.

It has the perfectly-fitting doors and parts, the firm, substantial body and the cosey, homelike appearance peculiar to cast-iron ranges.

At the same time it has an oven made partly of iron and partly of steel—an oven that will heat quickly and evenly all over.

It has a large oven, two inches deeper than any other range of the same size—just large enough to cook four pies at once.

Grates Easy to Remove

It has a drop oven door, which is not usual on a cast-iron range.

It may be had with a hot water reservoir and a steel warming closet with drop door.

The Part You Cannot See

These are all things that you can see—very important things, but not more so than the things you cannot see—the interior construction, which decides whether or not your pies will burn, whether your oven will be perfectly tight so as to keep out dust and smoke, whether it will wear.

These unseen points you can be sure of when you buy a Peninsular range.

Fifty years of building stoves—honest stoves—are behind every range that bears the name "Peninsular." That name says the materials are good—the flue arrangement is good—the oven is built to heat evenly—the range will wear.

There is a Peninsular range to suit every purse and to please every taste in range architecture.

Low Closet for Pots and Pans

"The Cost" illustrates some of the more popular lines and explains why Peninsular ranges cost less in the long run than others. Don't buy a range before reading this book. It's free.

BALFOUR'S MEMORY.

It Frequently Plays Him a Mean Trick While Speaking.

Mr. Balfour, who has completed his sixty-third year, is frequently the victim of absent-mindedness. Once in a speech he referred to the late Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman as Sir Henry Bannerman, Sir Charles Bannerman, and Mr. Bannerman. Not very long ago he spoke of Lord Northampton as Sir Henry Fowler and Sir William Fowler. There was another entertaining instance some time back at a Primrose League demonstration at the Albert Hall. "Where do I sit?" asked Mr. Balfour, with a bland note of inquiry. A surprised official pointed to the chair. Mr. Balfour, seemingly, had totally forgotten that he was to preside over the meeting.

The right hon. gentleman was born in Scotland, eldest son of the late Mr. James Maitland Balfour, of Whittinghame, who married Lady Blanche Cecil, sister of the late Marquis of Salisbury. Educated at Eton and at Trinity College, Cambridge, Mr. Balfour entered the House of Commons in 1874 as M.P. for Hertford; from 1885 to 1906 he sat for East Manchester, and since then he has been one of the representatives of the City of London.

For a few years he acted as private secretary to his uncle at the Foreign Office, and accompanied the mission of Lord Beaconsfield and Lord Salisbury to Berlin in 1878. His administrative experience commenced in 1885 as President of the Local Government Board, and he was Chief Secretary for Ireland from 1887 to 1891, when, on the death of Mr. W. H. Smith, he became First Lord of the Treasury and Leader of the House of Commons.

On Lord Salisbury's retirement in July, 1902, Mr. Balfour succeeded him as Prime Minister, in which post he continued until the Liberals regained power, in 1906.

The right hon. gentleman is Chancellor of Edinburgh University, an Elder Brother of Trinity House, and Grand Master of the Primrose League. He has been president of the British Association, and Lord Rector of Glasgow and St. Andrew's Universities.

Mr. Balfour is a very astute man of business, and a wealthy one withal. He has investments in real estate in many unlikely places, including New Zealand. His fortune originated with his paternal grandfather, James Balfour, an Indian civil servant, who afterwards made $1,500,000 out of contracts for supplying the Indian navy with provisions.

Perpetual Motion.

Perpetual motion has not been actually discovered yet, but the Hon. R. J. Strutt, the son of Lord Rayleigh, has come pretty near it. He has invented a timepiece which will go for 10,000 years without winding. It consists of two leave of aluminium, an exhausted glass tube, and a fraction of a grain of radium The apparently inexhaustible radio-activity of the radium causes the aluminium leaves to move once in a minute, and with a wireless coherer a bell rings at each movement. For 10,000 years at least the wonderful energy inherent in the microscopical piece of radium will, it is calculated, continue to act, and nothing whatever needs to be done to the clock once it is set going.

The Horse.

A horse will live twenty-five days without solid food, merely drinking water, seventeen days without either eating or drinking, and only five days when partaking of solid food without water.

Writ For Yale-Cariboo.

Ottawa, Oct. 18.—At the Cabinet Council yesterday afternoon an order was passed for the issue of the writ for the bye-election in the constituency of Yale-Cariboo, rendered vacant by the acceptance of office of Minister of Agriculture by Mr. Martin Burrell.

Nomination day is November 4 and polling, if any, will take place on November 11.

Warrants were issued to be signed by the Governor-General for the payment of civil service salaries for September and October. The total amount authorized was $1,900,000. This will bring gladness to the hearts of many civil servants who have been without pay, owing to the failure of the late Government to ask for supply.

English Students For McGill.

London, Oct. 18.—The Cheshire Education Committee is asking McGill University to accept students holding Cheshire county scholarships for the latter portion of their training, to be undertaken at Montreal. The chairman said this would provide a better outlet for their scientifically educated students than this country offered. The spirit of Imperialism was linking the colonies and they wanted to do the best for their students.

Youthful Desperadoes Found.

Huntsville, Oct. 18.—Stowed carefully away in an unsealed box car, Harper and Gill, the Toronto youths who broke from the Huntsville jail on Sunday night, were arrested at Orillia Monday. They are now in the cells here awaiting their arraignment on the double charge of theft and jail-breaking.

Royal View on Manners.

At the Speech Day celebration at Wolverley School, Worcester England, the other day, the Bishop of Worcester retailed an account of a conversation he once had with King George, when he was Duke of York, on the subject of manners.

The bishop said in the occasion in question he was about to address some public school boys when the Duke of York remarked: "Why do you not ask that at public schools manner should be taught?" In response to the bishop's question as to why he should specially emphasize manners, the Duke of York replied, "Because, as you know, I mix among all sorts and conditions of men, and it has been a positive distress to me to see how often, when abroad, Englishmen lose in the race with Frenchmen, Italians, and Germans because of the Englishman's want of manners. "The foreigners know when to bow, to shake hands, to converse, to stand up or sit down in the presence of their superiors, while the Englishman is wanting in these manners, and when vacancies have to be filled up those are the points which very often tell, and that is where the Englishman does not shine."

Dr. Yeatman-Biggs is a native of Dorset, and has been Bishop of Worcester since 1904.

Samples Wedding Breakfast.

Tom Whitham, blacksmith's striker, of High street, Ecclesfield, England, was ordered to pay 3s. 6d. per week and the costs in respect of an illegitimate child.

It was stated that the man agreed to marry the girl, the banns were put up, and all preparations were made for the marriage, even to the laying of the wedding breakfast, but the night before the marriage day Whitham called at the house, ate some of the wedding breakfast, and observed, "There will be no wedding." At the last moment he had decided for bachelorhood.

Oil Engines For Warships.

New developments with regard to the employment of oil engines for marine work in England are now proceeding apace, and the next six or twelve months may possibly open a new era in marine propulsion. The Admiralty has ordered a 6,000 horse-power Diesel engine, which is to be placed in existing twin screw cruisers in substitution for steam engines. The Times says it has not often occurred in the previous history of shipping that such important changes were on the verge of fulfilment.

The Herbert Case.

Montreal, Oct. 18.—The now famous Herbert marriage case, involving a decision as to the validity of the "ne temere" decree, is inscribed for trial and argument this month. The date of the hearing is not yet fixed, and it is quite possible that, in view of the very large number of cases on the roll, the trial may be postponed until sometime next month.

The pleadings in the case are now settled, and examination shows that this case, if carried to the Privy Council, will mean a decisive establishment of the law regarding the solemnization of marriage in this province, and, incidentally, a decision as to the rights of any religious body to make rules regarding marriage which have the effect of law.

New Bank Opened.

Montreal, Oct. 18.—One of the most important developments that has occurred in Canadian banking circles for a number of years took place yesterday, when La Banque Internationale du Canada threw open its doors following on the receipt of its license from the Treasury Department at Ottawa.

The organization of the new bank, with its important Paris connections, has been under way for some time past, so that immediately on receipt of the license from Ottawa, it found itself prepared to proceed at once with its regular business, equipped with a permanent staff and banking connections established throughout the entire world.

A Short-Lived Strike.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Oct. 18.—Because the Dominion Suspender Co. issued an order that its employes should work Saturday afternoons till Christmas, fifty girls employed there were on strike a few hours yesterday. The matter was adjusted at a conference yesterday afternoon, the company guaranteeing extra pay.

Met Death In Motor Accident.

Warhouse Point, Conn., Oct. 18.—In a motor car accident here late yesterday, Mrs. Rose Richards of Henrysburg, St. John's County, Quebec, and Mrs. Julia Richards, North Adams, Mass., were instantly killed, and Mrs. P. S. Mailloux, 330 Summer avenue, Springfield, Mass., internally injured and may die.

Actress Ends Her Life.

Washington, Oct. 18.—Minnie St. Clair, an actress who was playing at a local vaudeville theatre under the name of Sue Simpson, killed herself by drinking a poisonous disinfectant in her dressing room Monday night. She is said to have been the wife of a well-known song writer and her recent separation from him is given as the reason for her act.

Boys Caused Wreck.

Toronto, Oct. 18.—An enquiry held by the C. N. O. into the recent mishap at Grafton has revealed the fact that the open switch which caused the trouble had been tampered with by small boys. It appears that the lads had opened the switch, and, being unable to close it again, went away, and left it as it was.

An investigation will be held concerning the matter at Cobourg to-day, when the four boys who are implicated will give their evidence before the crown attorney.

Will Not Annex Egypt.

London, Oct. 18.—In official circles denial is given to the report circulated on the Berlin Bourse that the annexation of Egypt by England was imminent. It is believed, that when the Franco-German agreement with regard to Morocco is concluded, Great Britain may request the consent of the Powers to the abolition of the capitulations of the mixed tribunals. It is thought that the Powers will raise no objections to such a measure, which is calculated to improve the judicial administration.

Two Minute Talks About

PANDORA RANGE

for Coal or Wood

WOULD you like to know the reasons for the wonderful baking powers of the Pandora oven?

One reason why the Pandora oven excels as a baker is because the Fire-Box is amply large enough to provide all the heat the oven requires. Another is because the Sheet Steel Walls of the oven are uniform in thickness. This, together with the Special Flue Construction which carries the heat around the oven twice, assures absolutely uniform distribution of heat in the oven. Still another is because the main bottom of range is protected with a heavy coating of Fire Clay which prevents cold drafts, passing underneath the range, from cooling the oven.

Look at a batch of bread baked in the Pandora oven. The crust on each and every loaf is exactly alike. The Pandora oven is the sure-working, uniform oven that you've long desired. And it's in a range that's guaranteed to satisfy you in every particular.

Go and see the Pandora at our agent's in your locality.

A FIERCE BATTLE

Ten Thousand Revolutionists and Four Thousand Chinese Government Troops Engaged at Hankow

CASUALTIES HEAVY

Special Wire to the Examiner.

HANKOW, CHINA, OCT. 18. — A force of ten thousand revolutionists are to-day engaged with fourthousand troops from the warships in a fierce engagement on the outskirts of this city. Warships of all the great powers are here to protect foreign life and property and most of the women and children from the city have been shipped down the river. Casualities are heavy on both sides and surgeons and hospital crews from the foreign warships are helping to succour the wounded Chinese. The gunboats on the river used their guns very effectively against the rebels' fortifications. From the observation of the officers aboard the neutral ships, it is evident that at this hour that the revolutionists appear to have the advantage.

PEKIN, CHINA, OCT. 18.— There are alarming despatches here to-day to the effect that Nanking, Kiakiang and other big cities have fallen into the hands of the revolutionists. It is believed that the victors in all cases take particular care to protect the foreign missionaries and other outsiders.

WEST BOOMED AT EXPENSE OF EAST

Atlantic Coast Provinces Have Suffered Severely as Result of People Flocking West

Special to The Examiner

TORONTO, OCT. 18.—Comments received from all over Eastern Canada this morning indicate that the Maritime Provinces are much disappointed and in some cases, discouraged at the results of the Dominion census. There is a distinct feeling that Western Canada has been boomed too much, to the expense of the East, and that the Atlantic Coast Provinces have suffered most severely as a result. So far as Ontario is concerned a most startling feature is the apparent decrease in agricultural population and great flocking to the cities. The opinion here is that while the last decade has been so overwhelmingly Western, Canada's next decade will show a reaction in favour of greater mixed farming possibilities of Eastern Canada.

CAUSES SICKNESS

Good Health Impossible with a Disordered Stomach

There is nothing that will create sickness or cause more trouble than a disordered stomach, and many people daily contract serious maladies simply through disregard or abuse of the stomach.

We urge every one suffering from any stomach derangement, indigestion, or dyspepsia, whether acute or chronic, to try Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets, with the distinct understanding that we will refund their money without question or formality, if after reasonable use of this medicine they are not satisfied with the results. We recommend them to our customers every day, and have yet to hear of any one who has not been benefitted by them. Three sizes, 25c., 50c. and $1 00 a box. Sold in Peterborough only at our store.—The Rexall Store, McDermid and Flury.

HEEDED WARNING

The autoists of the city evidently heeded the warning in yesterday's issue re the strict enforcement of the motor laws, as the Chief of Police was besieged this morning by automobile owners, inquiring for more definite information regarding what was expected of them. Those who interviewed the Chief seemed well satisfied to comply with the laws, but some, whose autos carried a large permit number, offered objections to putting it on the headlights, on the ground that it obstructed the light to a certain extent. The objection is useless, however, as the laws make no provision for transparent letters.

BUSINESS MEN HAVE OBJECTION TO ELECTIONS

Complain That the Whitney Government is Trying to Obtain a Snap Verdict From the People of Ontario to the Detriment of Business Interests by Forcing an Election at the Height of the Christmas Rush.

A reporter of the Examiner, in conversation with a strong Conservative business man to-day, finds that the springing of the Ontario elections by the Whitney Government, is looked upon by business men, as not at all the right thing for Sir James Whitney to do. The business men further stated that they wanted the Fall and Christmas season to pass without any excitement other than the ordinary current affairs, so that the business may be done without interference.

In an interview with another business man, he expressed himself very much disgusted with the prospects of the Provincial elections this Fall, and this merchant felt that the Provincial Government were more anxious to hold their own seats, and their own party in power than they were to advance the general interests of the community. This Liberal politician said that it was an outrage for any Government to bring on an election, which would interfere with the trade of the country.

In another interview with a professional gentleman, whose politics the Examiner reporter did not know, in answer to the question of what he thought as to the action of the Government, in springing the Provincial elections at this particular time, said that "Oh, it is just a political trick. Mr. Whitney expects that his Government will have the advantage of the Conservatives' sweep in the Dominion elections, and there is no doubt that Whitney is endeavouring to take advantage of what ever is in it. You know all politicitns endeavour to take advantage of all "warm winds," but, for myself, I don't think that politicians gain anything by sharp practises. There are not as many party men as there used to be. People are voting every way. Some Liberals are voting Conservative, and some Conservatives are voting Liberal. In the recent campaign you could only tell where the extreme politicians stood. You know where the prejudices stood, but the voter who wanted to vote for what he thought was right, had to have a strong opinion, or his own opinion would be warped by the strong invective used by those who wished to overthrow the Government. For my part I think Whitney is making a mistake in forcing the elections at present. I am always suspicious when a man, or a party, wants to take advantage of the other fellow. I am going to vote this time against the Whitney Government, though last time I voted for them. I think eight years is long enough for any party to control the affairs of the country. Now you know where I am. I know you are satisfied. Good-day."

To-day's Game Off On Account Of Rain Matty Still Confident

Special Wire to The Examiner.

TORONTO, ONT., OCT. 18.—W. A. Hewitt, the Toronto base ball expert at the world's series games, says it was Mathewson's waist high ball to Baker in the ninth innings that cost the Giants the game and led to the great Mathewson's permanent downfall yesterday and assures the Athletics the world's championship again this season. Christy Mathewson himself attributed the defeat to Snodgrass bad judgment in the tenth innings. He is confident that the Giants will still pull out at the right end of the score for the series. A despatch from Philadelphia says at ten o'clock there is a heavy rain falling, making it impossible for a game to-day.

TELLS OF DEPLORABLE CONDITIONS IN RUSSIA

Examiner Has an Interesting Interview with Native of Czarland, Who Speaks of Russia, Past and Present in an Instructive Manner.

Dr. M. L. Sosnin, of Windsor, Ont., is a guest at the Hotel National today. Dr. Sosnin is a Russian by birth, and a Canadian by adoption, having immigrated to America eight years ago.

In conversation with an Examiner reporter to-day, Dr. Sosnin gave a very interesting sketch of some of the conditions prevailing in Russia at the present day, and some circumstances that led to them.

The following, in the doctor's own words, will probably prove interesting to the readers:

"Russia is about two and a half times as large as the United States, Canada, Cuba and Alaska, and yet its population is only one hundred and forty millions. What is now called Russia, is practically an aggregate of countries swallowed up by the old "Russ," this being the name given to the early Russians. In the early existence of Russia, the tribes were headed by chiefs, who had lots of fighting to do to keep from being swallowed up by the Tartar Khans. They later united, appointing a prince, and in this way, the Russian Empire was formed. They kept on spreading, and in due time they got Moscow as the capital, until Peter the Great decided to build a new capital, "that he could overlook from the windows, the four corners of the earth." He accordingly made Sweden give up a little piece of quicksand, that not even the fishermen cared to camp on, and with millions of Russian peasants and prisoners who, by exposure and starvation, gave their lives for the ambitions of "Peter the Great," the foundation of St. Petersburg was laid. This very kind of despotism has not yet ceased. The religious and educational movements in Russia have been suppressed with no less despotism. When bloody Vladimir Sviatoslav, wanted to marry a sister of the Greek king, he was told that it was not the custom of Christians to give up a sister to a Pagan, and in order to get the beautiful Olga for his wife, Vladimir went to Greece, where he became a Greek Catholic, bringing back with him, not only his wife, but a number of priests, who were sent out on the Strait of Kieff, preaching to the people their religion, after which a decree was passed compelling every man, woman and child to go down to the river, and by the act of baptism, being made Christions. Since then, the Greek church has been the National church with the Czar at its head. But all other denominations have since, to some extent, been tolerated, but have, nevertheless, suffered much opposition for the sake of freedom of conscience. More than 80 p.c. of the population of Russia is illiterate, and this of course, is to the advantage of the government. No encouragement is given to coming generation to get any education whatever, for those who receive a liberal education and appreciate freedom, get to be the avowed enemies of the present despotic system which is governing Russia. Those who are pushing their way forward to more liberal education, are not only given great opposition in achieving their desires, but in some cases are even debarred from schools of higher learning."

Such was the description given of the prevailing condition in Russia, by a man who was born and brought up under those conditions, and who later came to Canada where all enjoy freedom, which none but Canadians can appreciate.

Dr. Sosnin will be in the city for the next few days, being here in the interests of a manufacturing concern.

BOARD IS PRAISED

Liverpool Buyer Congratulates the Local Cheese Men on the Rapid Strides They Have Made in Recent Years

TO-DAY'S MEETING

The regular semi-monthly meeting of the Peterborough Cheese Board was held this morning. A full quota of buyers were present. At the opening of the meeting, Mr. Jones, a prominent Liverpool cheese buyer, made a few brief remarks.

"It is eleven years since I first attended a Cheese Board meeting in Canada," he said. "Since that time you have made rapid strides in the manufacture of cheese, both from a quality and quantity standpoint. Your cheese has given good satisfaction wherever sold. I congratulate you on the good prices you have received during the past season. While I do not think it will be duplicated next year, I think myself, personally, the price will hold good for the rest of the remaining year. We fell about 28 p.c. short of the quantity of cheese which we ordinarily produce, and this state of affairs has resulted in the opening of a wider channel for the Canadian product.

Mr. Watkins opened the bidding at 13 1-2. This was raised by Mr. Cook to 13 13-16c., at which figure he purchased Keene, Shearer, Central Smith, Selwyn, Villiers, Westwood, Maple Leaf, Myrtle, Young's Point, Lang. At the same figure, Mr. Kerr secured Warsaw, East Emily, Trewern and Fleetwood.

The balance of the Board, with the exception of Warminster, Indian River, North Dummer, which remained unsold, went to Mr. Kerr at 13 7-8c.

The following factories were boarded:

Keene	75
Warminster	70
Shearer	80
Central Smith	71
Selwyn	92
Villiers	60
Warsaw	110
Westwood	115
Oakdale	70
Daisy D.	50
Pine Grove	60
Maple Leaf	65
Myrtle	140
Ormonde	100
Young's Point	66
Lang	85
Indian River	85
North Dummer	40
East Emily	70
Trewern	100
Norwood	125
Fleetwood	70
Killarney	150
Total	1949

Regarding the question of procuring an expert to address the annual meeting, it was pointed out that the services of Mr. Barr could not be secured. The chairman inferred that he would be able to secure Mr. Ward, whose services he recommended to the Board. The matter was left in the hands of Mr. Gillespie.

The Board adjourned for two weeks.

Debauch Over Body Of His Wife

Special to The Examiner.

MONTREAL, OCT. 18.—Dead since Friday or Saturday, the body of Mrs. William Dooit, in a fearful condition, was found in a squalid room, on Inspector street, this morning, and at the foot of the bed, in the midst of empty whiskey bottles, was her husband, dead drunk. He had been going in and out of the room recently, apparently too drunk to realise that his wife was dead. The tragedy was discovered when the landlady called in the police. Dooit is under arrest. There are indications of violence.

LITTLE PROGRESS

Special to The Examiner.

LOS ANGELES, CAL., OCT. 18.—While the lawyers continue fighting over technicalities connected with the securing of the jury to try Jas. McNamara, defendant sits unconcerned. His lawyer gave it to be understood this morning that McNamara would not be called to the box, but the defense would rest the case on trying to prove the building was blown up by gas. There was little progress with the jury choosing to-day.

PETERBORO'S POPULATION HAS INCREASED BY 7,073

Official Census Figures Issued Last Night Show This City the Seventh Largest in Ontario—Made Substantial Progress in the Past Decade—Lindsay's Population Diminishes by 47.

The official census returns for Canada, given out last night, gave Peterborough's population as 18,312 which, while one thousand less than the assessor's figures for this year, shows a substantial and most gratifying increase in the past decade. In 1901, the city's population, according to the census of that year, was 11,239, while on June 1st, 1911, it is given at 18,312, an increase in ten years, of 7,073. This city is the seventh largest city in Ontario, bein beaten only by Toronto, Ottawa, Hamilton, London, Brantford and Kingston, and its aggregate increase is also seventh among Ontario towns and cities, while its percentage of increase is still higher. Lindsay shares with Cornwall, the unenviable distinction of being the only places in the province to show a decrease during the past ten years. Lindsay's population has decreased by 47, while Cornwall has diminished to the extent of 106.

LINDSAY, ONT., OCT. 18.—In explanation of this town's decrease in population, according to the census, leading citizens admit that while the town has all the attractions of its neighbour, the people have not been quite so aggressive. The Town Council promises things during the coming decade to make Peterborough and other high fliers sit up and take notice.

PRAISE FOR COL. SAM

Special to The Examiner:

WINCHEST, ONT., OCT. 18.—Speaking to five hundred delegates to the Provincial W. C. T. U. convention here, Mrs. A. Gordon of Ottawa, spoke enthusiastically of the appointment of Colonel Sam Hughes as Minister of Militia. She recalled that on one occasion Colonel Hughes had commanded his men not to take liquor into camp at Kingston, and she said this augured well for his temperance influence as Minister of Militia.

NOT INCREASE EXPECTED

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, ONT., OCT. 18.—While the census does not show the increase expected, it is interesting to note that it shows a higher increase for the decade than any similar percentage in the United States, whose best figures are twenty-four per cent., while Canada's is thirty-two per cent.

57th Officers Get Instructions

Major Hordern of Kingston, gave a very able lecture and also instruction in "Tactics and Manoeuvres" to a large assemblage of officers at the armouries last night, and this morning he and a number of officers went down to the vicinity of Keene, where he will put into practice the points he was drawing out at the lecture. There were quite a number of officers turned out and all were well pleased with the practical knowledge they had gathered from the exercise.

Major Hordern is one of a number of English officers sent out for the purpose of teaching "Tactics and Manoeuvres" to the Canadian forces. He is stationed at Kingston and has got as far as this city, instructing the numerous regiments of the 3rd division.

To-day's manoeuvres were carried out very successfully on account of the beautiful weather.

A NEW INDUSTRY

A poor reputation is an easy thing to get, but a good reputation is the hardest thing to get. Once secured, the latter sticks. The possessor cannot get away from it, and it cannot be separated from the possessor. When you see the name, Ruth and Condon, marked on a pump, or manufactured article, you may rest assured that you are reciving one hundred cents on the dollar, value for your money. In addition to the pump works, this enterprising firm, with a view to filling a long-felt want, have a foundry, where all kinds of job casting and repair work can be undertaken on short notice. The premises, when visited by an Examiner reporter to-day, presented a scene of industrial activity. On all sides could be seen castings and machine parts in all stages of manufacture. This industry will, no doubt, be instrumental in divesting a large number of orders which now go to outside concerns, and it is worthy of the unanimous support of those desiring casting and repair work done, thereby helping to assist by action, rather than by words, to build up an industry that will rank with the best.

ENJOYABLE PIE SOCIAL

The Golden Link Rebekah Lodge held a most successful pie social last evening. The inclement weather did not prevent a large crowd from attending and the evening, though gloomy outside, was one of the brightest inside.

An excellent programme, composed of the following numbers, was rendered, in an acceptable manner:

Instrumental—Miss Kemp.
Banjo solo—Mr. Frank Clarke.
Vocal duet—Mr. and Mrs. Lees.
Vocal solo—Mrs. Wells.
Vocal solo—Mrs. Reynolds.

Ald. Duncan presided during the programme, after which a dainty luncheon was served, and this was followed in turn by a social evening, during which progressive euchre was played.

The ladies' prize was won by Mrs. A. Fowler, while Mr. Prest captured the gentlemen's prize.

The ladies, who were in charge of the luncheon, were as follows: Mrs. Hartley, Mrs. Watt, Mrs. Martin, and Mrs. Reason, all of whom are to be congratulated upon the brilliant success of the efforts. The evening was a most enjoyable one, and was brought to a close in the usual manner, by singing the National Anthem.

Thankoffering Service Held

In spite of the very inclement weather, there was a good attendance at the annual Thank offering service of St. Andrew's Women's Missionary Society held yesterday afternoon, and the meeting was a most profitable and successful one. Mrs. (Rev.) Fee gave an interesting address on the subject of missions, her remarks being followed with much interest. The contributions for the afternoon were quite satisfactory. At the conclusion of the business portion of the meeting, refreshments were served and a pleasant social hour spent.

All Saints' Football Club will meet to-morrow (Thursday) night in the chapel hall. A full attendance of players is requested as business of importance is to come up.

PLAYING TRUANT

Truant Officer Cochrane is After Offenders and Half Dozen Will Appear in Court in a Short Time

THE LAW QUOTED

As the result of alleged truancy, six youngsters, ages ranging from 8 to 14 years, will appear in the Police Court inside of a week. The Truant Officer was notified re the absence of the children from school and in pursuance of his duty, the charges were laid.

In order that the parents of the children may be warned regarding the necessity of sending children to school, the following laws are quoted for their perusal:

To the parents of children attending schools in the city—

You are hereby notified that pursuant to the provisions of "An Act respecting Truancy and Compulsory School Attendance" (Chapter 56, Ontario Statutes, 1901), all children between eight and fourteen years of age are required to attend school for the full term during which the school of the Municipality in which they reside is open each year, unless excused for the reasons mentioned in said Act, and if the parents or guardians having legal charge of such children, shall fail to send them to school regularly for said full term, or if such children shall absent themselves from school without satisfactory excuse, such parents, guardians, and children shall be subject to the provisions and penalties of section 9 of the said Act, which provides as follows:

"If the parent, guardian or other person having the legal charge or control of any child, shall neglect, or has been excused from such attendance as provided by this Act), the Truant Officer shall make, or cause to be made, a complaint against such parent, guardian or other person, before any Police Magistrate or Justice of the Peace having jurisdiction in the Municipality in which the offence is committed, and upon conviction of such refusal or neglect, such parent, guardian or other person shall be liable to a fine of not less than five dollars, or more than twenty dollars, or the Court may, in its discretion require persons so convicted to give bonds in the penal sum of one hundred dollars, with one or more sureties to be approved by said Court conditioned that the persons so convicted shall cause the child, or children, under their legal charge or control to attend some school within five days thereafter, and to remain at school as required by this Act".

And whereas complaint has been made to me as such Truant Officer, that you or that as parent, guardian, or other person having the legal charge or control of a child/ha ve violated the provisions of the said Act, by refusing yourself to attend, or as parent or guardian neglecting to cause such child to attend some school. This notice is, therefore, to command you to attend, or as parent, guardian, or other person, to cause said child to attend some school within five days from the date of the service of this notice upon you; otherwise I will take such proceedings as I am required under the provisions of the said Act, of which you are respectfully requested to take notice, and govern yourself accordingly.

George Cochrane, Truant Officer, City of Peterborough.

EXPLANATION SUGGESTED.

Hon. Mr. Monk, will be honoured by the Monk club of Hull, at a banquet early in November. Here should be an opportunity for Mr. Monk to explain the nature of the compact between him and Mr. Borden, by which the latter took into his cabinet, a member at odds with the leader, in the matter of a great national question, the navy, and to explain the further fact that without any excuse from necessity of making such a choice he, Mr. Borden, has chosen to make a Nationalist alliance when he might have found as good material among the straight Conservative element of Quebec. It is not for Liberals, but rather for Conservatives, to demand an explanation of these conditions. But we need not expect an answer now to these questions, nor before the bye-elections. A frank explanation would probbaly increase the difficulty Mr. Borden is finding, and may find yet, in comfortably placing in seats in the bye-elections, Mr. White and Mr. Cochrane, who are threatened with opposition, if not defeat, because Mr. Monk and his Nationalist colleagues were taken into a Conservative cabinet over the head of good Conservatives.

WHAT IS THE OBJECT?

The new Minister of Railways and Canals, Hon. Frank Cochrane, is making quite a splurge, at the outset of his career. He is busying himself with ordering cessation of work on contracts awarded by the Department when it was in charge of Hon. Mr. Graham. This may be due to a little "new-broom" zeal on the new Minister's part; but it is possible that tactics of this kind may be employed to give the impression that there is something wrong or irregular in the letting of these contracts, with the result that the virtues of the new rule may shine in contrast with the wrnog-doings of the old. But the country need not expect anything wrong to be discovred in connection say, with the Hudson Bay Railway contracts. Mr. Graham, said they were entered into with all the engineering cautions possible, and that the lowest tender in every case got the contracts. If Mr. Cochrane succeeds in delaying the work he can excuse his want of enterprise by pleading the necessity of caution. He will need to do well ot equal the enterprise shown by his predecessor in administering his department.

THE CENSUS.

The tone of the newspapers in speaking of the forecast of the results of the census of 1911 is invariably one of disappointment, coupled with the statement that the population of Canada will be considerably smaller than it was expcted that the census would show. People who indulged in extravagant estimates of our growth in population may be disappointed. They were perhaps, justified in assuming that the census would show a considerable increase of population, for that would furnish part of the explanation of the wonderful material progress the country has made during the past ten years, a growth great enough to be achieved by a population much greater than the census will probably show ours to be. There is comfort in this over the disappoinment of a census giving a population below expectation. It shows that it is quality, not quantity that counts. In the past, with its small population, Canada has shown a record of accomplishment in the way of material progress and the provision of transportation facilities and national equipment that would have been a credit to a country with many times greater population. There is an advantage in growing slowly, and thus assimilating foreign population as it comes in. While our population in the West has increased, it has been largely at the expense of the other parts of the Dominion — mainly replacement of population. With our large foreign immigration to the West, we find the problem of assimilation a difficult one, and this problem would be made much more difficult if we had double the quantity of foreign element to deal with. Seven million good Canadian citizens, born good, or made good, by gradual assimilation of the foreign element to the condition of the native, or long resident Canadians, is better than eight, or ten millions, largely composed of elements not yet inspired with the high ideals of citizenship that now animate our Canadian population. Canadians may be slow, but they are sure. We may be jeered at as unprogressive by our swarming neighbours, whose numbers are so far greater than ours. But numbers are not the true test of the greatest good. If righteousness—good citizenship—exalteth a nation, the little handful of Canadians, where, as shown by results in the way of achievement, one counts for ten, is not to be despised by our more unmerically powerful neighbours.

MR. MACKAY'S INDICTMENT.

The London Advertiser thus summarizes the indictment of the Whitney Government contained in Hon. A. G. MacKay's address to the people of Ontario:

1. The inexplicable bungle of the Education department in regard to rural schools. The destruction of the model schools at one blow has forced a large proportion of the schools to engage unqualified teachers.

2. The jobbing of the public school readers, making them an advertising appendage of Eaton's departmental store — a discrimination against the whole retail trade of the province.

3. Neglect of technical education.

4. The unjust incidence of the succession duties. Mr. McKay would have a graduated rate, falling more heavily upon large than upon small estates.

5. The inequalities of the mining tax. The royalty should be greater upon the product of a mine-yielding exceptionally high profits than upon poorer paying mines.

6. The peremptory rejection of the Fripp bill, to allow municipalities to tax land at a higher rate than improvements.

7. The lack of a progressive policy of reforestation.

8. The inequitable character of the government's power policy, which discriminates against seven-eighths of the municipalities of the province.

9. The governments' slothfulness in opening Northern Ontario to settlement, the pioneers being oppressed by heavy freight rates on the Temiskaming Railway.

10. The need of developing the Temiskaming Railway by branches and extensions.

To the above list might be added a number of other things, including the three-fifths clause of the Local Option Act, failure to enact satisfactory legislation against truancy, the Beattie-Nesbitt scandal, and the startling increase which has been made in the provincial expenditures.

It is possible, however, that the indictment which will count for most against the government is that its majority is already larger than it ought to be and that advantage ought to be taken of the "snap appeal" which is at present being made to the electors to strengthen the Opposition. It is not in the interests of the province or even of the government itself, that the latter should have everything its own way.

CHILDREN OF THE TOILER NEGLECTED.

Among the charges made against the Whitney government is that it has failed to devise a proper system of industrial and technical education for the province, and that in consequence the children of the common people have not been given as good a chance to be outfitted for citizenship as they are entitled to have. And, speaking of the neglected class, one must not overlook Abraham Lincoln's wise observation that "the Lord must love the common people; he made so many of them."

In one of his speeches in the Legislative Assembly, dealing with this subject, Mr. MacKay produced figures showing what the province is doing by way of aiding in the education of certain classes of people. He made clear that the provincial grants to public and separate schools amount annually to $1.38 for each pupil attending the same; that the grants to high schools and collegiate institutes amount to $4.66 per pupil; that grants to normal and model schools amount to $112 per pupil, and that the grant to Toronto University amounts to $128 per pupil. Thus the province follows from stage to stage those who are financially able to attend our schools and colleges with a view to obtaining a liberal education, while it practically says to the lad who is driven from school to earn a livelihood that it does financially no concern for him. Hence the declaration of policy laid down in behalf of the Liberal party contained in the following motion, which compelled the government to take some action:

That in the opinion of this House the province and the municipalities should unite in the establishment of technical schools in the towns and cities in Ontario to supplement the practical training of the workshop; an arrangement as to the basis of support for such schools, as between the province, the municipality and interested manufacturers; the establishment in large industrial centres of technical high schools; that the powers of the municipalities should be enlarged so as to enable them to aid in the support of such work.

There is a marked difference between our educational system and that of other countries which have given the question of industrial education serious consideration. Our continuation classes are still entirely scholastic, whereas Germany says to her children: "I will give you an education sufficient for ordinary life up to the end of your common school course; after that you must begin to think of this as a practical world, and the state will assist you, in a practical way, so that you may earn an honest living." The continuation classes in Germany become continuation industrial schools, and of these there are some 2,200, attended by 350,000 pupils. After a two years' course in these industrial schools the young man specializes and attends higher technical schools and institutes.

Probably a more important matter than the establishment of evening industrial schools is the combination of industrial training with our present book methods in such a manner as will lead the lad who contemplates an industrial career to remain longer at school, and thus qualify himself to take the highest prizes available to skilled labour. As things are arranged at present, we make it easy for such a lad to leave school before he has secured more than a rudimentary education, and if he sees fit to thus leave we provide practically no means by which he may make good the loss he has thus sustained. The result is that he is confined to the ranks of unskilled labour; in fact, sentenced to the industrial gallery for life.

This question of a "fair chance for the sons of the toilers" is one which ought to have a vital interest for the electors of Brantford, and, indeed, for those of all other industrial centres in the province, and the neglect of the government to take action with regard thereto should not pass overlooked.—Brantford Expositor.

HAPPINESS OF HOME

I have been accused of late of being unreasonably hard upon my own sex. Indeed I have been accused of being a man because I so often take the masculine point of view

Perhaps it is because I love women so well that I scold them so often; just as a doting mother reprimands the child nearest her heart.

It has seemed to me that in the making of the happiness of the home the woman holds the balance of power. Hence I have tried to coax and scold and argue her into a realization of what she may do. Not because I consider her most at fault, but rather that she may know the path of wisdom which will lead her to make the best of herself and her surroundings.

If the men who read my screeds, however, think that I exonerate them from the sins which cause domestic unhappiness, they may consider themselves mistaken. I have no sympathy for a weak man, no pity for a household tyrant, and I find no excuses for the unfaithful.

Women's failure to keep the matrimonial contract is usually evidenced by a craving for excitement and pleasure, and she often seeks these outlets because the indifference or selfishness of her husband drives her to find solace in things which she would gladly give up if he would substitute for them his own society.

Many men after marriage indulge in what might be called a "settling down process." The chase over, they give themselves a rest after the hunting. They do not love their wives any less than they did their sweethearts, but having endowed them with all their worldly goods they expect contentment to follow.

But the woman is not content, she loves the outward evidence of a man's affection, and he who is wise will exert himself to show her what he feels. He will exert himself, too, to try to understand her moods and tenses. The parting of the ways has come with many a couple because the man refused to respond to his wife's advances, and because he dropped too soon the courtesies of the lover to become the complacent husband.

I believe that a man usually shows less politeness than a woman. At the family table he often shows himself a bear. The manners which should be an unconscious part of himself are doffed in the presence of his wife. He grumbles at the food, the servants, at everything and everybody. He says things which he does not mean, but which hurt none the less.

The husband should never forget that he owes deference to his wife more than to any other gentlewoman. Few women can remain obdurate in the face of unfailing courtesy. It is man's boorishness which often creates discord and recrimination.

Selfishnes in money matters paves the way, in many cases, to the divorce court. Marriage is a contract in which the husband and wife are equally partners. The pocketbook is as much the woman's as the man's. A fair and just division of funds is imperative, and the man who makes his wife feel that she is dependent upon his bounty, or who grudingly hands out an insufficient allowance, is not alive to his responsibilities.

The things that women hate in a man are weakness, cowardice, tyranny. The man who fails in self control and generostiy and in tenderness has only himself to blame if his domestic affairs do not come up to the ideal. D. M.

Tributes To Sir Wilfrid Laurier From His Political Opponents

From the Victoria Colonist (Con.)

The passing of Sir Wilfrid Laurier from power is a notable event, not only in Canadian history, but in Empire politics. His career for the past fifteen years has been synonymous with the development of the Dominion. In that time he has been the commanding figure in the affairs of this country and in the Imperial councils has won the first place among the representatives of the Overseas dominions. Many elements have contributed to the position which he occupied and the greatest of these was his winning personality He has been the idol of the French Canadians, and, if there is one thing above all others by which he will be remembered, it will be the part he played in bringing into harmony the two races which occupy this country.

Sir Wilfrid will have a prominent place in the history of Canada. How prominent only the perspective of time will be able to determine. That he has had the interests of his country at heart, and thought most of Canada during his long years of service, there can be no gainsaying. He has been described as on Imperialist but if he is, he belongs to a school which is of his own creation, and his Imperialism hardly dovetails with that of the Right Hon. Joseph Chamberlain. With this factor in his career we have, however, at present no concern, as it is our object to pay a tribute to Sir Wilfrid, the man, and the statesman, who guided the destinies of this country through a decade and a half, during which many things of considerable moment were accomplished.

Both as a parliamentarian and a Prime Minister he was above suspicion. He has ever been actuated in all his actions by motives which he believed would redound to the credit of his beloved country. Whatever measure of national importance he fathered gained immensely through his earnest advocacy and the inspiring belief which he instilled into his followers. His title of the silver-tongued orator was richly earned. Indefatigable in whatever cause he espoused, he brought the whole force of his intellect to bear upon the issue of the moment, and his brilliant periods and striking phraseology have often-times carried weight where logical arguments have failed. His winning personality is a thing which few can resist. He is indeed "suaviter in modo, fortiter in re." Whenevr he comes to be measured up in the annals of his country he will be remembered as a diplomatist, a courtier, a statesman, and a patriot, and as a man against whom no finger of scorn has ever been pointed. He has served his country to the best of his great abilities, and it is a matter of congratulation that his period of service is not yet ended.

His Fine Abilities.

From the Charlottetown Guardian (Ind.)

Both Mr. Fielding and Mr. Graham ought to be in Parliament and are likely soon to be there. If their return is secured, Sir Wilfrid will be at the head of a strong party in both Houses of Parliament, and capable of there rendering excellent service to the country. Sir Wilfrid Laurier, with his fine abilities, communate tact, and many attractive qualities, should now make an admirable and effective leader of the Opposition. He has been forty years in political life, fifteen years at the head of Canadian affairs, and previously has led his party when it was in Opposition. His present position is no novelty to him. His decimated party is firmly united under him and full of admiration and devotion to him as leader. Never yet has a Canadian Opposition been led by a man of greater prestige and influence throughout Canada and the Empire than Sir Wilfrid Laurier now holds.

It must follow in the ordinary course of events that in the years immediately to come there will be much vigorous and skillful political warfare in Parliament. Mr. Borden and a number of his colleagues are without the administrative experience in which Sir Wilfrid and a goodly number of his lieutenants in both Houses are exceptionally strong. We look to see the Liberal Opposition, when once they have recovered from the shock of a rather crushing defeat, putting on a resolute front, fighting aggressively and not without hope of again carrying the country five years hence.

Classy Fields Will Start The Examiner's Thanksgiving Day Races

With Thanksgiving Day drawing near the outlook for the Examiner road races is of the brightest and the prospects are for one of the best races in the history of the competitions. On account of the adoption of the new rules, which provides that junior runners must be fourteen or over, the size of the junior field will no doubt be cut down, but what the race loses in numbers, will be more than equalled in quality. It will be remembered that in other years a horde of youngsters, at least half of them not in their teens faced a starter and the little fellows didn't a chance to win, while at the same time there was danger of the five-mile grind doing physical harm to the smaller boys. By having a minimum age fourteen years, the danger will be eliminated and the fault should be a classy field of starters in the junior event.

There is every prospect of a lively battle in the senior event. Albert Smoke Chemong, who has won the race in the past two years, last year in record time, will make an effort to carry off the Examiner Trophy for the third time in succession and word comes from Chemong that he is in good shape for the battle. He will have stiff opposition all along the line this year. The Y.M.C.A. will have a trio of dangerous starters in W. Wills, who won the five mile race at the Labour Day games and Harold Smith, who has a number of good performances to his credit, including the feat of leading the Ward Marathon, including Thomas Longboat and company for ten miles. U. Worthley of Ennismore, who has been second to Smoke in a number of races this season is in fine fettle and is confident of giving the fleet-footed Chemong boy a contest all the way. J. E. Lean, whose entry came in this morning from Cambourne, Ont., was a student at the Normal School last year and finished fifth in last year's race without any training. He is in better shape this year and may have to be counted upon. George Robinson and Morris Montgomery who have been contenders for several years are expected to face the starter again, while there are a number of dark horses in training, including a couple of Old Country runners, upon whom it will be impossible to get any line until the field is sent away on Thanksgiving Day morning. The entries so far are as follows:

Senior.

Harold Smith, Peterborough Y. M. C. A.
J. Worthley, Ennismore.
J. E. Lean, Cambourne, Ont.

Junior.

P. L. Crowley, Peterborough.
Thos. McAuliffe, Ennismore.
Rupert Brady, Peterborough.
Leonard Board, Peterborough.
J. McMahon, Peterborough.

Special to The Examiner.

CLYDESDALE, OCT. 17.—Mr. Albert Blacburn spent a few days in Toronto last week.

Changes At The Fire Hall

The Fire, Water and Light committee held a brief session last night. There were present, Mayor Morrow, Chairman Ald. Morgan, Aldermen Kerneghan, Graham and Metheral.

A letter was read from Fire Chief Howard, advising the appointment to the permanent staff, of Fireman Archibald McDonald. On motion of Ald. Graham, seconded by Ald. Kerneghan, this appointment was made.

Other changes that will probably be made on the brigade were left in the hands of the chairman.

A motion was made to have the tap bell removed from ex-Assistant Chief Grange's house and have it placed in that of his successor.

The question of installing several new lights was left in the hands of the chairman. Lights are required on Aylmer, Princess, Lansdowne, Park and Elm streets, and in all probability Pearl avenue.

An account of $30.80 for lighting Smith street bridge was passed. It will cost $96 per year to light the bridge.

Chairman Ald. Morgan will interview Chief Howard regarding the appointment of a man to permanently act as watchman at the Fire Hall. The man to take charge of the hall while the men are out at a fire.

The treasurer was authorized to deduct from the street lighting account, at a pro rata charge for lamps not burning at night.

HAIR HAPPINESS

It sounds funny but the hair really must feel happy when it is clean and healthy and free from dandruff. So many people have neglected caring for their hair, that a woman with thin, harsh hair, or a man with no hair is not an unusual sight. There is no excuse for unattractive harsh hair since Sageine has been obtainable in Peterborough, and when W. J. Kent sells it with a guarantee to do all that is claimed for it. Sageine means a healthy clean scalp, a luxuriant growth of hair, and it only costs 50c. a large bottle from W. J. Kent, or charges prepaid from B. V. Marion, Bridgeburg, Ont.

Presentation To Dr. Bell

Honoured by the People of Apsley on the Eve of His Departure

APSLEY, OCT. 17.—A number of the citizens of Apsley and surrounding country called on Dr. Bell on Tuesday evening last and presented him with a purse of money. The following address was read by Mr. Pippin and the presentation made by Mr. H. G. McIlmoyle.

Apsley, Oct. 9, 1911.

Dear Doctor Bell.—We, your friends and neighbours, have assembled here this autumn evening to bid you a formal farewell. The word thrills us with sorrow as we realize that to-night heralds your separation from us.

During the past ten years which you have been amongst us, you have left the imprint of many pleasant remembrances upon our minds.

Socially, we have always been pleased to meet you, as your unbounding good nature and unfailing kindness have endeared you to us, and we feel deeply this severance of your future presence.

As clerk of the municipality, you have ever been anxious to promote our individual and mutual welfare.

As our doctor, you have stood with us at the bedside of our loved ones, sharing our sorrow with us and doing all for them that medical skill could avail.

We can but imperfectly express our regret at your departure in this short address. Words sound hollow and shrunk by usage, but rest assured that you can carry away from each and all of us the warmest feelings of friendship.

As a slight token of esteem, we ask you to accept this sum of money hoping that you and Mrs. Bell may spend your riper years in comfort, contentment and happiness.

Signed on behalf of the citizens of Apsley and surrounding country.

The doctor replied in a most feeling manner, thanking the people for their gift and for their kindness to him during the time he had lived amongst them. He said he had intended to spend the rest of his days here, but as he was getting up in years, he found himself unable to respond to all the calls, especially during the winter months. He hoped to come and see them all again next summer.

All joined in singing "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow," and ended by giving three cheers for Dr. Bell.

SAMPLES OF APPLES

The Grand Trunk Pacific Railway have procured samples of apples grown in the Kitsumkalum Valley, ninety miles east of Prince Rupert. These apples are of different varieties, beautiful in their colouring, and the flavour is in every respect up to the perfect brands grown in Ontario, and entirely unlike the inferior flavoured fruit grown under irrigation in the more southerly regions and in practically all of the Pacific Coast States.

The specimens came from the orchard of Mr. D. Stewart, who has about fifteen acres under cultivation, and they represent the first grown on the operated line of the Grand Trunk Pacific.

In the valleys of the Kitsumkalum, Lakelse and Copper rivers, with other areas along the Skeena River, there should be approximately 300,000 acres of ideal fruit lands placed under cultivation in comparatively few years, and much of this land can be procured by pre-emption in 160 acre lots, the only charge being $1.00 per acre in addition to the residence requirements of the law. It is confidently predicted that this territory will become the centre of a new and greater fruit district in British Columbia.

At Prince Rupert this summer strawberries grown along the Skeena River and in the valleys of the Kitsumkalum, Lakelse and Copper rivers came into market for the first time in considerable quantities, and the fruit is reported to be superior to anything grown on this continent, being extremely high coloured, and as sweet and fine a flavour as wild strawberries; their size was remarkable, running as large as a good size crab-apple or a small snow apple.

There will no doubt be a class of settlers in this section of the country who are looking for and will get tremendous returns for their labour at comparatively small expense.

BULL SICK HEADACHE, BILIOUS BREATH, BAD STOMACH, CONSTIPATION—TAKE CASCARETS

Sick headaches! Always trace them to lazy liver, delayed, fermenting food in the bowels or a sick stomach. Poisonous matter, instead of being thrown out, is re-absorbed into the blood. When this poison reaches the delicate brain tissue it causes congestion and that dull, awful throbbing, sickening headache.

Cascarets remove the cause by stimulating the liver, making the poison move on and out and purifying the blood. The effect is almost instantaneous. Ladies whose sensitive organisms are especially prone to sick headaches, need not suffer, for they can be quickly cured by Cascarets. One taken to-night will straighten you out by morning—a 10-cent box means a clear head and perfect health for months. Don't forget the children—their little insides need a good, gentle, cleansing, too. Children gladly take Cascarets, because they taste good and never gripe or sicken.

CASE WILL BE TRIED IN 3 WEEKS

The case of Herbert Francis Wood vs. Wm. Payne of Dummer, was aired before Police Magistrate Edmison in the County Court this morning. Mr R. Ruddy appeared for the defence, while Mr J. D. O'Connel appeared on behalf of the boy.

Wood, who is a boy of about 17 or under, was living with a farmer out near Warsaw, and Payne is charged with inducing him to leave his foster home and occupation. Payne pleaded not guilty, the defence taking exception to the charge, and the Magistrate dismissed that information, with the result that a new information was laid, and the case will be tried again in three weeks. The costs in the case were reserved by the Magistrate.

Classy Fields Will Start The Examiner's Thanksgiving Day Races

With Thanksgiving Day drawing near the outlook for the Examiner road races is of the brightest and the prospects are for one of the best races in the history of the competitions. On account of the adoption of the new rules, which provides that junior runners must be fourteen or over, the size of the junior field will no doubt be cut down, but what the race loses in numbers, will be more than equalled in quality. It will be remembered that in other years a horde of youngsters, at least half of them not in their teens, faced a starter and the little fellows hadn't a chance to win, while at the same time there was danger of the five-mile grind doing physical harm to the smaller boys. By having the minimum age fourteen years, the danger will be eliminated and the result should be a classy field of starters in the junior event.

There is every prospect of a lively battle in the senior event. Albert Smoke Chemong, who has won the race for the past two years, last year in record time, will make an effort to carry off the Examiner Trophy for the third time in succession and word comes from Chemong that he is in good shape for the battle. He will have stiff opposition all along the line this year. The Y.M.C.A. will have a pair of dangerous starters in W. Watt, who won the five mile race at the Labour Day games and Harold Smith, who has a number of good performances to his credit, including the feat of leading the Ward Marathon, including Thomas Longboat and company for ten miles. J. Worthley of Ennismore, who has been second to Smoke in a number of races this season is in fine fettle and is confident of giving the fleet-footed Chemong boy a contest all the way. J. E. Lean, whose entry came in this morning from Cambourne, Ont., was a student at the Normal School last year and finished fifth in last year's race without any training. He is in better shape this year and may have to be counted upon. George Robinson and Morris Montgomery who have been contenders for several years are expected to face the starter again, while there are a number of dark horses in training, including a couple of Old Country runners, upon whom it will be impossible to get any line until the field is sent away on Thanksgiving Day morning. The entries so far are as follows:

Senior.

Harold Smith, Peterborough Y. M. C. A.
J. Worthley, Ennismore.
J. E. Lean, Cambourne, Ont.

Junior.

P. L. Crowley, Peterborough.
Thos. McAuliffe, Ennismore.
Rupert Brady, Peterborough.
Leonard Board, Peterborough.
J. McMahon, Peterborough.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

WONDERS OF THE MODERN HOTEL

Only those who have been privileged to peep behind the scenes can form an ida of the marvels of the big modern hotel where everything is run on scientific principles. For science is the keynote of those huge establishments—science in construction, science in engineering operation, science in cookery, and science in management. Dip down into the engine room of one of the largest of New York's hotels and see what science means to a modern hotel.

In the sub-basement, forty or more feet below the sidewalk, is a plant covering almost the entire floor space of the hotel that could satisfy practically every need of a community of from 30,000 to 40,000 people. It makes the hotel, so far as mechanical devices are concerned, almost completely independent of outside assistance, an isolated organism. The whirring of immaculately kept dynamos, motors and engines, beautifully graceful, tells you that 23,000 electric lights are dancing in the hotel, that the water supply of 50,000 cubic feet a day is being doubly filtered and pumped throughout; that elevators, twenty-six in all, are flying up and down, and that twenty tons of ice, enough for a good sized skating rink, are being frozen daily.

How an alchemist of mediaeval days would have revelled in the harvesting of a tonnage of ice of this kind in his cellar every day! Yet it doesn't bother in the least the chief engineer, who is responsible largely for the planning as well as the running of all the mechanics in the hotel, a huge factory of multiple activities. He turns a lever or a handle of some kind while you are talking down in the sub-basement, and up on the fourteenth floor in the refrigerator in the pantry of Mrs. Jones-Smith's private $50,000 a year apartments the ice-cold air begins to play about delicate salads and terrapin and the like to cool them. It is a brine circulation plant for cooking the thirty upstairs private apartment refrigerators and the twenty-four in the basement, as well as a cold room on the seventeenth floor for the storage of furs, tapestries and blankets.

It saves the hotel thousands of dollars a year to have its own independent engineering department. For one-third or more of what outside prices would be is lopped off. Here are a few examples: / Steam for running the dynamos and engines is generated in nine water tube boilers of 3,500 horse-power. Roughly, 50 per cent. of this steam energy would be lost in exhaust after doing work through the engines. But this dead exhaust steam is still useful to this many-sided hotel plant, except for the three summer months. It heats the water and warms the building through radiators.

The varied nature of this hotel manufactory again shows its economy in the machine shop and draughting room. When a piece of expensive machinery breaks it is not replaced by a costly similar part from the maker. A design is drawn, a casting ordered from outside at a comparatively low figure and the part finished andadjusted on the lathes and drills of the machine ship inside. The mechanical storeroom contains only 2,000 different items.

Again, said the chief unto himself one day as he looked over the fields of silver teapots and cake trays, spoons and cream pitchers, the Greek dish washing squad were busy bathing in the steward's best soft soap and water, after 3,500 tea sippers had dropped in from Fifth avenue one afternoon for the daily tea fight upstairs—said the chief, "Let us save the hotel some more money by making silver." The chief did not mean to be a counterfeiter, only a silverware manufacturer, for he and his men are men of many parts, who can do anything from running an intricate electric plant to repairing a watch or a baby carriage. And now behold! The hotel is its own silversmith, its shop of fifteen men manufacturing and repairing all its silverware, adding its own distinctiveness and costing less. And what's more, a guest with a pressing engagement and a broken silver case can get the latter repaired on the spot.

He can get almost anything else repaired too among this small army of 150 men, electricians, mechanics, printers, carpenters, cabinet makers, blacksmiths, decorators, upholsterers, stage hands and general men of all arts. There's a locksmith who controls a master key and also an emergency key that not only unlocks every one of the hundreds of locks in the house but defies any additional bolts you may slip. Then he looks also after the 2,500 new keys that have to be added a year.

Vacuum cleaners bring all the lirt of the house down into two machines which separate the sheep of the dirt from the goats, although both are destroyed—the one ca ' into the fire, the other, the dust, &c., into the outer darkness of the sewer.

The fire brigade has a record in fire drill of one minute and a quarter to the furthest part of the building, the elevator dropping immediately to the ground floor for the smoke eaters on an alarm. Water could be pumped at the rate of 4,000 gallons a minute through the hose lines.

One of the best features of the modern hotel's engineering plant is the ventilating system. Eight great fans blow cool fresh air into the lower parts of the hotel. The kitchen is well nigh as sweet and airy as an ocean breeze, with nothing of the sickening odours that issue from the ordinary small restaurant or hash house. There is an average temperature the year round of 70 degrees. Every minute 100,000 cubic feet of air are blown in, which in the winter first passes over steam radiators.

Your modern hotel engineer is a director of enterprise, primarily of good executive abailty, combining with it a wizard-like mechanical knowledge that must be adaptable to almost anything.

The kitchen! Do you think of a low, broad, sunny homestead, a big fireplace with a roast on a spit against a grate, a high back settle seat drawn up evenings to pop corn from, the willow broom in the corner the cat on the hearth and the neat housewife bustling about?

Well, the modern hotel kitchen is not like that. It's a kind of a young army headquarters, with troops of waiters swooping down upon tables scattered about bargain counterwise and then flying off again up the stairs, pausing just enough to have all their trayful checked up by the checker, who seems to be able to take in a meal in a glance and set it down on paper.

The steward is an important personage in a big hotel. "Coffee, butter, eggs and milk—the four essentials of a good hotel. Without them you perish, and your hotel with you. Let a man sleep on the bumps of a lumpy bed all night, but give him a wonderful cup of coffee for breakfast and he's all right. Give him the downiest bed there is and a cup of washy coffee the next morning and he'll consign you to perdition."

This is the gospel of the hotel we are visiting, and he will show you the boxes of coffee that could chase away memories of the lumpiest bed if ever called upon.

Th stewart is the purchaser of supplies. He's also the policeman of the kitchen, for he's always about keeping things in order. And he's a kind of a "seeing the town" man, for whom a company of 200 new waiters arrive on New Year's eve for the big rush on the dining room he has his minions pilot them about so that they don't go looking for ice cream in the pickle jar. He also presides over the 2,000 daily meals for the help.

Stroll about this steward's realm, see lines of delicate china stowed away in neat compartments, hear that the gold is smelted off the rims of broken plates on to the buttons of the page boys' and waiters' coats; peek into long rows of refrigerators stocked with rich fruits and delicate vegetables, as also the storerooms of groceries, and you are sure that there is enough here to have lasted through the siege of Port Arthur.

Dish washing brigades stack dishes in wire cages, then let them down into steaming hot solutions of water and soft soap, and they come out to dry of themselves. And when you are drying dishes and silver by hand, hold a towel inn each hand instead of one, and you will economize time and effort.

These are some of the things that go on beneath decks in a big hotel. Up in the top storey the hotel upholsterer, Davis, has his followers making over the mattresses of the hotel, which happen about every three months to each one. Electric darning machines are working on the linen and bath towels. Twelve hundred windows need curtains changed every two weeks. Furniture, carpets, tapestries and colour schemes have to be ripped out and reset when a new resident takes an apartment and the scheme doesn't suit his fancy. The draperies and upholstering work are all done here. Electricity runs the sewing machines.

OBITUARY

ALEXANDER GRIEVE.

On Tuesday afternoon there passed away at his residence, Denison Ave., one of Peterborough's highly and most respected oitizens, in the person of Mr. Alexander Grieve. Mr. Grieve's death removes from the city one of its best known residents, who was born in the County of Northumberland, near Cobourg, almost seventy years ago. Up until a few days ago Mr. Grieve was in his usual health, and was a keen observer of everything that was going on in the city and country, taking a great interest in public matters. For a number of years Mr. Grieves farmed in the Township of Smith, but about 20 years ago, he retired and took up residence in the city. During the past year, Mr. Grieves' wife passed away, since which time he has aged considerably. Being afflicted with heart trouble his death was not unexpected, and for the past few days his friends and physicians saw that his end was near at hand. In religion the deceased was a member of St. Paul's church, and in politics he was a strong Liberal. He was a great admirer of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, and had always taken a great interest in the campaigns in which Mr. Stratton was a candidate. The deceased was of a kindly disposition, held strong views of his own, was a great reader, and had a bright and kindly greeting for all. Miss Sadie Walton, a niece of the deceased, has resided with the family for some time, and the friends of the family feel the death of Mr. Grieve very keenly. Three sisters remain to mourn the death of a loving brother. They are: Mrs. Ludgate, of Boissevain, Mrs. Cowan of Orangeville, and Mrs. Melrose of Guelph. The deceased had many friends in the Township of Smith, and in the City of Peterborough, who will regret to learn of his death.

The funeral will take place to the Little Lake cemetery from his late residence on Thursday afternoon at 3 o'clock. The funeral service will be held at 2.30.

MARY ANN THRALL.

A bright young life ended at 507 Rubidge street, last evening, when Mary Ann Thrall, daughter of the late Mr. H. P. Thrall, passed away at the early age of 20 years.

Born in Marmora, the deceased came to Peterborough two and a half years ago and during that short space of time she had boome exceddingly popular with those with whom she was acquainted, on account of her cheerful disposition. In creed she was a Protestant.

Miss Thrall is survived by a sorrowing mother and three sisters, Christina, Frances, and Lily.

The remains will be sent to-morrow by the 11.20 train to Marmora, where interment will take place. The body will be met by friends from Toronto.

PAMPERED BABIES

Thee never was a time when so much money was spent by the very rich on their babies as in the case to-day.

The best cot blankets, for example, fifteen or twenty years ago, could be purchased for $10 or $15—the richest people never thought of paying more. But nowadays the child of great wealth reposes in hand-woven Russian blankets of a peculiarly soft and fine quality tht cost from $50 to $75 apiece.

The cots themselves in some nurseries cost a small fortune. Antique cots are extremely fashionable today, and a genuine specimen of a sixteenth or seventeenth century corved wooden cot might cost anything from $5,000 to $10,000, according to its shape or design.

Every night the baby heir to one of the wealthiest peers in England reposes in a cot for which an American millionaire offered the baby's father $60,000; the cot is four hundred years old, is made of oak, and is beautifully carved. It has been in the peer's family for the last three hundred years.

The modern cot, with its carved gilt posters and lace curtains, is much cheaper than an antique one, and can te bought for about $1,000.

To these expenses may be added the cost of real down pillows, at $25 each; the finest linen lace-edged sheets, at $75 the pair; and hand-worked coverlets, at $30 to $35. Nurseries nowadays in the houses of the very well-to-do are fitted with bathrooms for the special use of the babies.

The baths are lined with the finest marble, and inlaid with quaint designs for the entertainment of the little bathers when getting their morning and evening tubs. There are baths in some nurseries in London which cost from $500 to $1,000, according to the quality of the marble and inlaid work.

Then there are, of course, special bath soaps at 75 cents a square, which suffice for one bath only, and soft "baby" bath towels that cost $10 apiece.

But, though the children of the very rich are nowadays reared amid greater luxury and splendo than ever they were, these little heirs to great wealth are not specially to be envied whilst they are in the nursery, at all events.

One of their trials is the burden of clothes that a heaped upon them. From the day of its birth the child of great wealth is nowadays half smothered in lace and silk. And the fact that the lace may cost $250 a yard, and the fine-spun silk about $10.0 does not lessen the burden.

A well-known doctor informed the Press that some time ago the infant son of a wealthy financier was brought to him suffering from convulsions. The baby arrived attended by two nurses. He was wearing a magnificent lace and silk robe that cost at least $500. The garment buttoned round his neck, and the weight o fit hanging from his neck had brought on the attacks of convulsions.

This luckless child of wealth had a rattle in his hand, made of gold and ivory, that certainly did not cost less than $100.

"But there is many a child," said the doctor, "whose parents cannot afford to pay more than a penny for a rattle, whom this baby millionaire might have envied."

A Big Hit In Ottawa

Journal Calls "Private Secretary" a Most Delightful and Wholesome Comedy

The Ottawa Evening Journal has the following to say of "The Private Secretary," which comes to the Grand for matinee and evening performances on Saturday:

A more delightful and wholesome comedy for their farewell to the Russell Theatre than "The Private Secretary" Their Excellencies Earl and Countess Grey could not have seen. One of the most representative audiences of the city's prominent people were present for the last time with the Governor General and his party. The royal box was very prettily decorated and at the close of the performance the orchestra played "Auld Lang Syne," and then three hearty cheers were given for Earl Grey.

In spite of his age and extensive travels, "The Private Secretary" is just as mirthful as when he first stood in front of the footlights as a molly coddle parson.

Mr. James Bancroft as Rev. Robert Spaulding,(as the bona fide secretary was a scream. Every time he came in with his "goods and chattels" to arouse the wrath of that old uncle with the bad liver, Mr. Joseph Clancy, the audience almost went into convulsions. Such a part as the sanctimonious parson is one that will test the versatility of any actor. It is thoroughly well acted by Mr. Bancroft, who is one of those finished comedians which the English stage produces without an equal.

As "Douglas Cattermole," nephew to his namesake with the troublesome liver, Mr. Edwin Hoge was remarkably good. He put every kind of comedy where it was necessary and passed himself off as the private secretary to fool his rich uncle splendidly.

Mr. Shirley Braithwaite as a Bond street tailor, aspired to be a gentleman, where he could be beyond the pale of vulgar business. He measured his role off very cleverly.

The ladies in the company were delightful, especially Miss Agnes Villa, as the lodging house keeper and Miss Nell Cave as a lady with a craze for spiritualism.

If you want a good evening's fun, wholesome and clean, given with the finish of a first class English company, well, go and see "The Private Secretary" at the Grand Saturday afternoon and evening.

A NEW DEPARTURE IN SELLING HIGH-CLASS LOTS

The introduction of an auction sale as a means of selling building lots, is a novel one in Peterborough, but A. Brown & Co. the local [illegible] agents, have adopted this means of disposing of the lots in the new subdivision called Parkdale, on Edison avenue, running off Park street, opposite the Exhibition grounds. This property is an excellent one, close to factories, churches, schools and stores and there is just enough of them to give every buyer a bargain.

The first auction sale will take place to-morrow afternoon, and as well on Friday and Saturday afternoons. Free cars will leave Central Park each day at 1.30 and 2 o'clock.

A number of useful articles will be given away at each sale free, and you don't require to buy a lot to get a present. It is only a means of advertising.

Anyone interested in a start for a home for himself should attend this sale.

Leaves For California

Rev. Father Phelan, who has for the past ten years been parish priest of Lakefield and Young's Point, has retired on account of the unsatisfactory state of his health. He arrived in the city to-night en route to the Mount Clemens (Michigan) Hot Springs, from which he will go to the south and California and spend the winter. It is to be hoped that Rev. Father Phelan will realize the expected benefit from his visit abroad. He is succeeded by Rev. Father John O'Brien of St. Peter's Cathedral staff, who enters upon his new duties next Sunday.

MUSIC AND DRAMA

At the Grand Opera House last night a small audience with sufficient musical enthusiasm to brave the drifting rain, heard the pianoforte played as it has perhaps never before been played in Peterborough. Mark Hambourg was magnificent in every way great piano playing can be regarded. Though there was little of uplift in the handful of appreciative listeners, he played like one inspired. His programme was a popular one, in that the audience had heard played, or thought they had heard, played most of the selections. These numbers consisted of Sonata Op. 3, No. 2; Allegro Adagio Scherzo and Finale.— Beethovyn; a Schumann group—Des Abends, Traumeswirren, and Arabesques. Barcarcolle and Nocturne, F Sharp, Impromptu in A Flat and Scherzo, C Sharp, Minor—Chopin. Etude Mignon, Percy Pitt; Danse Negre, Cyril Scott; Spinning Song, Mendelssohn; and Rapsodie, No. 2, Liszt. Many in the audience, who fancied they had heard many of these selections before, realized that they had only heard them attempted. Last night they heard them played. They heard the soul, the great composers had written into their works brought out by a sympathetic genius of interpretation that made them revelations. They witnessed a marvellous mastery of technique, of wonderful infallibility and grasp. Hambourg's tours de force, always musical, gained by contrast with the wonderful delicacy of his touch in tender and dreamy passages; the keys were caressed as if the player loved them. His irreproachable technical skill was, at times, startlingly demonstrated. In passages taken at a terrific tempo every note was clean cut as a cameo, and every nuance of expression delicately graded and intelligently defined. But the great charm of his work was the magnificent tone colour the player developed. The exquisite singing tone was brought out with especial effect in the chanting of Schumann's dreamy Des Abends. Altogether Mark Hambourg, in the unaffected dignity of his style—free from affection—in his delightful interpretative instinct; his rich and massive tone production, in his wonderful technical resources, and the flawless finish of his work, is a pianist, whom it is a delight and inspiration and a musical education to hear.

COMING LECTURE

Considerable interest is being taken in the coming lecture under the auspices of the Peterborough Health Association by Hon. Adam Beck, who will speak on the subject of Tuberculosis, as viewed by a layman. The address will be given in the Assembly Hall of the Collegiate Institute on the evening of Oct. 26th and is the first of a series under the auspices of the Health Association. The public should be vitally interested in a discussion of the great white plague, and of the precautions necessary to check and prevent its growth..

The education of the people along this line is one of the most important objects of the Association, and it is felt that a series of addresses by gentlemen who have a comprehensive grasp of the subject, will accomplish a great deal in this connection. Hon. Adam Beck has made a study of Tuberculosis and his remarks should be interesting and instructive. There will be no admission charge.

Our doubts are traitors and make us lose the good we oft might win by failing to attempt.

The day returns and brings us the petty round of irritating concerns and duties. Help us to play the man, help us to perform them with laughter and kind faces; let cheerfulness abound with industry. Give us to go blithely on our business all this day, bring us to our resting beds weary and content and undishonoured, and grant us in the end the gift of sleep.

ABOUT WALTZING

It is astonishing in these days, when girls go in for all kinds of sport and calisthenics, that so large a number of them should walk so badly.

A graceful woman charms the eye and possesses an attraction that does not depend on youth or beauty.

In order to attain a graceful poise of the head practice walking with a book upon it, and it should not fall off.

The heels, shoulders and the back of the head should be all level when staring to walk, and the chest well thrown out.

Swinging arms are an abomination: they should hang easily—they were never intended to be used as flails or to help propel the body along.

Comfortable clothing has a great deal to do with grace in walking, and girls should avoid both the mannish stride and the mincing gait. There is a happy mean and the length of stride a girl can gracefully take depends, of course, upon her height and length of limb.

Walk from the hip, not from the knee. "Heels first and toes out," as our school teachers impressed upon us, is a rule to be observed, and girls should recollect that meandering aimlessly along is not walking in any sense of the word. It does not lead you anywhere, and no healthful benefit is gained thereby. Walk briskly, not as if you were in "a tearing hurry," but smartly, and as though you had some object in view, which, indeed, you should have in every walk, no matter whither it leads you.

It is well worth while learning to walk. No one would dream of going to dances unless they had studied the art of dancing, and in the same way it is sheer waste to slouch along anyhow, when one might, with a little trouble and knowledge, be storing up health and getting advantage from the walking that daily necessity forces upon us.

Have You Seen the New SUITS & OVERCOATS Shown Here?

If not, you've missed seeing decidedly the finest line ever shown in Peterborough—a showing of high-class uncommon garments that exhibit tailoring of the very highest character. The styles are uncommon too, yet they are not freakish. The qualities are such that they'll make a steadfast friend of any man who wears them.

MAGNIFICENT! Rather a strong word to describe our New Overcoats, but nothing more mild would do them justice. It doesn't matter what shape, size or kind of a man you are, if you want an Overcoat you'll find just what you want here, the styles that are ust out.

The popular convertible collar and "Presto" collar overcoats are here in great abundance, as are the stylish new Chesterfields and long regular collar coats. Your overcoat desires can surely be satisfactorily fulfilled here. Prices to suit every pocket. Come and see.

HAS PASSION FOR MURDER

Charles Marzyek, Ex-convict and Slayer of 14 Persons, Fugitive From Police

STILL SEEKING PREY

Ellsworth, Kansas, Oct. 19.—That Charles Marzyek, ex-convict, sought by the county authorities in connection with the murder of the five members of the William Showman family here Saturday night, had been in Colorado Springs, where the six members of the Wayne and Burnham families were slain and was acquainted in Monmouth, Ill., where three persons were murdered recently, was the startling statement made to the authorities yesterday by Mrs. Minnie Vopat, Marzyek's divorced wife. All these fourteen victims were killed with an axe.

Samuel Showman, brother of William Showman, head of the murdered family, yesterday started at the head of a possee to search the county. Marzyek is believed to be hidden in the neighborhood. If he is found a battle is expected.

Marzyek not long ago served a term for stealing grain from James Vopat. Tuesday night Vopat, who is the husband of Marzyek's former wife, saw the ex-convict in a field near his house. Vopat and his family, terror-stricken, locked their house and fled to the home of a Slav fellow-countryman, five miles distant.

All the members of the Slav community who had any connection with the conviction of Marzyek went armed yesterday, for he is reported to have sworn vengeance on those responsible for his imprisonment.

Ira Lloyd, the attorney who defended Marzyek in the wheat stealing case, said yesterday:

"I believe Marzyek will remain in the neighborhood until he completes his vengeance. After his sentence he told me that when he was released he would come back and kill the people who were responsible for his conviction, and also their children. 'I will put them all in hell,' he said."

Evidence furnished by Mr. and Mrs. William Showman is said to have been largely responsible for Marzyek's conviction.

Nine persons remain here who fear his vengeance. These persons, all of the Slavic own race, are:

James Vopat, Mrs. Minnie Vopat, who obtained a divorce from Marzyek immediately after his sentence, and married Vopat nine months later; their two children, one ten months old and the other three years; John Katke, father of the murdered Mrs. Showman, who testified against Marzyek; Mrs. John Katke and the three Katke children, Emile, aged 17; Armie, aged 18, and Mary, aged 20.

As to a possible connection between the Ellsworth and other tragedies, Mrs. Vopat said her former husband was convicted of forgery in Colorado Springs a few months ago. She said it was not improbable that he had been in Monmouth lately. The same insane cruelty on the part of the slayer is evident in the Burnham and Wayne tragedies at Colorado Springs, in the murders of William E. Dawson, his wife and daughter in Monmouth, and the killing of the Showmans.

He (rejected)—Then you regard me merely as a summer lover, a convenient escort to excursions and picnics?

She—That's about the case, George. I have looked upon you as a lover in the picnickian sense only.—Boston Transcript.

THE WEST FEELS SORE

Census Figures Fall Considerably Below Expectations on the Prairies

OTTAWA DISAPPOINTED

Winnipeg, Oct. 19.—A feeling of disappointment is prevalent in the cities and towns of the west, arising from the low rate of population accorded them by the recent census. Regina alone is throwing bouquets at herself, her thirty thousand count boosting her percentake ahead of her provincial rivals. For many years the keenest rivalry has existed between Regina and Moosejaw, and when the latter learned that she had been altogether eclipsed, a sense of injustice was aroused.

Saskatoon also feels that she has been hardly dealt with, being placed lower in the list than Regina. Calgary and Edmonton are strong in their refutation of the accuracy of the figures, while other towns in the west also discredit their respective enumerations. Practically all, however, affirm that the census in their particular district was taken in an inefficient manner, and all credit themselves with a goodly number above the published figures. Vancouver, for instance, claims 30,000, while of the smaller towns Saskatoon claims an increase of 5,000 more, Port Arthur 3,000 and others in like manner affirm that the figures accredited to them should be swelled by an addition of 25 per cent. upwards.

Ottawa Disappointed.

Ottawa, Oct. 19.—That the population of Ottawa as estimated by the Dominion census-takers is far below the real population of the city is the contention of Assessment Commissioner Stewart.

The estimate given in the census returns is 86,340. Last year the estimate made by the assessment department of the city's population was 86,106, and this was really below the real figure at that Brantford Also.

Brantford, Oct. 19.—The census enumeration as given out from Ottawa is 1,000 short of the count made by the assessors. The population of the city was given at 23,046, and considering that the enumerators were not trained in the work, the result is favorably received.

And Woodstock.

Woodstock, Oct. 19.—Woodstock is disappointed at the figures given out in the official census report and the citizens are inclined to put more reliance in the figures of the city assessor than in those of the Dominion enumerators. The city assessor in his sworn report to the City Council gives Woodstock a population of 10,091, whereas the census report places the total at 9,521. That the assessor's figures are correct there is no reason to doubt.

Want Free Paper Repealed.

New York, Oct. 19.—At a meeting yesterday of the executive committee, officers and board of managers of the American Protection Tariff League, a resolution was adopted urging that industrial interests make common cause "against the enemies of American business," and in the fulfilment of this action all members of the league should work for the defeat at the polls of the candidates of whatsoever party who are not protectionist and vote for all candidates who are protectionists.

Other resolutions adopted opposed piecemeal revision of the tariff and requested the repeal of the agreement with Canada permitting the import of print paper free of duty.

TURKS ONLY LAUGH.

They Ridicule Action of Italian Anti-Slavery Society.

Rome, Oct. 19.—Commandator Simonetti, general secretary of the Italian Anti-Slavery Society, which has been working in Tripoli since 1899, gives an appalling description of the slavery still conducted there despite the efforts of the society to liberate those in bondage.

He says that the society provides the slaves with freedom papers which the Turkish officials have disregarded derisively, calling them "papers of the second slavery."

He tells of Turkish steamers engaged in the slave traffic and says that when the slave markets were closed in 1900 the slaves were brought within a day's march of Benghasi, from whence they were secretly embarked or returned to the interior. A common trick of the Turkish officials was to declare freed slaves Ottoman subjects because they had come from Mussulmans' regions, and so keep them under an influence favorable to their return to slavery.

The greatest trade, he says, has been among the Bedouins, who sell negroes to the Senussi, who still have public markets at Abesbir in Wadai, State of Central Africa, in the French zone of influence, and at El-Fasher, the capital of Darfur, Egyptian Sudan, under British domination.

The younger of the women slaves, he says, were sent to Tobruk and the Gulf of Solum, Tripoli, and were destined for Turkish harems. These slaves were chained at night and acts of disobedience were punished with death. At Sliten, not far from the City of Tripoli, Simonetti says that a slave was killed in such a barbarous fashion that a woman who was present died of fright. He closes with a statement that he possesses a long list of so-called respectable Turks, who indulge in the traffic of human flesh simply for sport.

Antarctic Mails.

Ottawa, Oct. 19.—The Postoffice Department yesterday issued the following bulletin:

The Postoffice Department of the Dominion of New Zealand announces that a postoffice named "Victoria Land" has been established for the convenience of the members of the British Antarctic expedition, 1910, at Cape Evans, McMurdo Strait, Victoria Land, and that a mail will be despatched to that place early in December next.

Mail matter of all classes, including parcels, addressed to Victoria Land will be despatched from this country to New Zealand by steamer leaving Vancouver on the first of November. Correspondence of all classes should be prepaid at the rates for New Zealand.

The Chats' Falls Sale.

Ottawa, Oct. 19.—Confirmation of the announcement that the Dominion Government sold fourteen acres of Victoria Island at the Chats' Falls after the election is contained in the registration of a deed of sale here. The deed gives the date of sale as Oct. 2, and is signed by Thomas Mulvey, Under Secretary of State, and J. B. Hunter, Deputy Minister of Public Works. The exact area disposed of is 4.71 acres, and the price paid is $1,471.

Banquet to Borden.

Halifax, Oct. 19.—The Conservatives of Nova Scotia some time ago determined to tender a complimentary banquet to Hon. R. L. Borden, to be held in this city. A telegram was received from him accepting the invitation for the night of November 2. It is expected that more than six hundred guests will be present. Invitations have been extended also to the members of Mr. Borden's Government and already acceptances have been received from Hon. Messrs. Monk, Reid, Hazen and Foster.

OFFICIALS REJOICE

Chinese Government Claims a Crushing Victory at Hankow

PROBABLE EXAGGERATION

London, Oct. 19.—A special despatch from Hankow last night says that the Imperialists still hold the trenches, but they have lost several hundred men, killed and wounded. The fighting lasted all day. The revolutionaries after repeated but unavailing bayonet charges, fall back to Wuchang. Trainloads of wounded were brought into Hankow.

Victory Exaggerated.

Pekin, Oct. 19.—The Chinese Government claims to have won a great victory at Hankow, and it announces that the Government troops held the station, where troop trains are arriving rapidly. Although this appears to be an exaggeration of facts—the fight still continuing—the feeling prevails here that the Government has really achieved an important meral victory.

The belief has been held in Pekin that if the first encounter between the revolutionists and the loyal troops proved decisive, the supremacy would be settled there and then. Only a few unimportant towns outside of Hankow, Wuchang and Hanyang have taken part in the rising. Nanking, Changsha, Canton and other cities of known revolutionary tendencies, have not responded to the call of the insurgents, so far as can be learned. They are seemingly awaiting the result of the first encounter. Had the rebels overwhelmingly won the battle yesterday, it was expected that the provinces below the Yangtsekiang would be theirs. With other important cities in rebellion the Government would have been unable to concentrate its strength against the three Hupeh divisions.

The rebel leaders have shown the characteristic national weakness in not following up their early victories. During the past four days many miles of railway could have been taken under control by any really modern army.

Acceptance of the office of viceroy of Hupeh makes Yuan Shi Kia's appointment a military one, his duty being to fight for possession of the provincial throne, and make it secure by restoring order in the two large provinces of Hupeh and Hunan. It is reliably stated that Yuan Shi Kai demanded permission to raise his own division of 10,000 troops, and also to cash a personal grant of 3,000,000 taels ($3,300,000). To this humiliation the regent agreed.

Many officials, previously dissatisfied with the progress of reform, are rallying to the support of the Government, as they now believe that the chances for securing reforms are greater by aiding the dynasty than by supporting the present rebellion.

Acceptance in the presence of the real emergency, which confronts the Government, is a vindication of Yuan Shi Kai's loyalty. He occupies a striking strategal position with respect to his old friends and supporters. Gen. Chao Ehr-Feng, who is combatting the rebellion in Sse-Chuen, supports his right flank and is the man who, by a military expedition to Lahasse in 1910, amazed foreign militarists. At his back he has Hai-Liang in control of railways, and at his left and rear Yang Shiang, viceroy of Chihli.

Owing to the censorship, even the officials are unable to obtain reliable news, which they are eagerly seeking from the correspondents and the foreign legations. The British and Japanese reports fail to confirm the announcement that the situation at Nanking is critical.

The Russian troops have been ordered to suppress immediately any excesses by revolutionaries or bandits near the railway in Manchuria, without waiting for further instructions. A consular report says that several revolutionaries have been decapitated at Muklden. Except the Japanese there are few foreign consuls beyond Harbin and Vladivostok; hence reports of Russian activities depend entirely upon Russian sources. There are no newspapers represented in the outlying Manchurian districts, even along the railway.

An edict has been issued forbidding the exportation of rice from Pekin. A division of the old style troops, which arrived here Tuesday, are quartered in camps and the temples around the various city gates, and in the city streets in which the high officials live.

To Connect With Canada.

New York, Oct. 19.—Newman Erb, president of the Minneapolis and St. Louis and the Iowa Central Railway Companies, who returned yesterday from an inspection trip, said that preliminary arrangements had been made for extending the Minneapolis and St. Louis to the Canadian border.

Engineers were instructed to make a reconnaissance for two routes to the Canadian border, one from Minneapolis to Emerson, where a connection would be effected with the Canadian Northern, and another from Watertown to a point on the border, where a connection would be made with the Grand Trunk Pacific as well as with the Canadian Northern.

Not a Case of Suicide.

Hamilton, Oct. 19.—Alex. Connelly of Toronto, who was stricken with paralysis in the rotunda of the Hotel Royal yesterday afternoon, died in the city hospital last night. It was at first thought that the man had taken poison with suicidal intent, but the hospital physician who attended him, found that death was caused by heart failure. The body will be sent for interment to Niagara, where Connelly formerly lived.

Autumn is the Time
— FOR — GLASSES
WHY?

The increasingly long evenings of Autumn give greater opportunity for Sewing, Writing, Reading, Study, and as this is necessarily by artificial light the strain upon the eyes is such as to make Glasses quite a boon at this season of the year. This no doubt accounts for much of the present increased demand for Glasses.

Appointment for examining the eyes for Glasses is usually necessary.

A Graceful Act.

Quebec, Oct. 19.—Yesterday morning Messrs. Bouanquet and Bourquet, the French delegates to the ceremonies attending the unveiling of the Montcalm monument, in company with Sir Louis Jette, Hon. A. Turgeon, Lieutenant-Colonel Wood, George Bellevire and M. Raymond, French vice-consul at Montreal, deposited on the base of the monument to Gen. Wolfe a beautiful crown of flowers. The crown bore the inscription: "Hommage des delegues du comite Francais du Monument a Montcalm, a la memoire du General Wolfe."

In depositing the crown, M. Beanquet spoke of the distinguished honor which he felt rendering homage to the memory of the great British general.

Lieutenant-Colonel Wood made an appropriate reply thanking the French delegates on behalf of the English populace for their thoughtful act.

Will Put Up a Fight.

Berlin, Oct. 19.—It is said here on reliable authority that it is the intention of both the South and North Waterloo Liberal executives to put men in the field in the forthcoming Ontario general elections. It is known that a meeting was held yesterday afternoon in the Bowman House here, which was attended by leading Liberal workers in South and North Waterloo, at which it was decided to enter the fray. In North Waterloo there is a likelihood of a three-cornered fight, ex-Mayor Allan Huber yesterday afternoon announcing himself as a candidate.

Tampered With Switch.

Cobourg, Oct. 19.—Two boys from Grafton, 9 and 10 years of age, appeared before Magistrate Boggs here yesterday charged with tampering with the C.N.R. switch at Grafton.

It will be remembered that the switch was opened and a special train on the C.N.R. ran into it on the day of the opening of the new Toronto to Trenton line, fortunately without loss of life.

The boys were let go and the case dismissed.

Welland Liberals.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Oct. 19.—The Liberals will hold their county convention on Friday, when it will be decided who shall be the standard bearer in the provincial campaign. Mayor Dorce was named some time ago, but it is rumored that he will not run. He stated yesterday that he would make an announcement for a few days, but he did not deny the rumor.

Bigamist Gets Eighteen Months.

Toronto, Oct. 19.—William Donnelly was sent to prison for 18 months for bigamy from the police court yesterday. He had already admitted a plurality of wives. His justification was that his first wife had refused to live with him. His second wife swore that she knew nothing of her predecessor, and has two children by him.

"The Gun Runner"

By ARTHUR STRINGER

"I'm no fool—I saw 'em—I caught you at it!"

"Will you leave my cabin?"

"Then explain what you've got stuck down your waist there!"

"It's nothing of yours."

"Hand it out, or I'll rip those clothes off your back!"

"There's nothing to hand out."

"Hand it out—or I'll blow it out!" came the low-toned threat, driven home with an oath.

"I can't," came the woman's answer, scarcely more than a whisper.

"Hand it out!"

Then came a second or two of unbroken silence.

"You're going to shoot!" gasped the woman. It was only too evident that Ganley had stepped closer to her.

"No," he said, his thick voice shaken a little with his close-held passion. "I'm not going to shoot. But I'm going to pound your lying head in with this gun-grip—I'm going to pound you till your own mother wouldn't know you!"

The woman uttered a little cry, not shrill enough to be a scream, not low enough to be called a moan. It was then that the waiting McKinnon swung open the door and sprang into the room.

He was barely in time to behold the infuriated Ganley, with his heavy black-handled Colt revolver held by its barrel, charge on the girl, who stood with her back against the cabin wall. He was not in time to prevent the blow that fell on the girl's out-thrust forearm, as blindly and instinctively she threw it up to guard her head. But as the clubbing gun-butt raised for its second frenzied blow the intruder sprang. As he sprang he caught the swinging revolver in his hand. One quick movement, one twist of the levering grip, wrenched it free. The next moment McKinnon's fingers were clamped on Ganley's fat and pendulous throat and he had the man in the black raincoat thrust flat back against the berth edge, gasping for breath, pawing the air with his thick, fat hands.

"You hound, to treat a woman like that!" was all the overwrought McKinnon could say.

"Let me breathe, you fool!" gasped Ganley. "Let me breathe!"

"You hound!" repeated McKinnon, thrown into a primitive and unreasoning passion of revolt against the brutality of the scene.

"I caught the she-cat—I caught her red-handed—I caught her coming through my door!" cried Ganley, getting his breath again.

"Are you hurt?" the operator demanded of the woman still motionless against the wall.

"No," she answered.

"Then I'll settle this with the gentleman myself, in his own cabin, or in the captain's, if he prefers."

But Ganley was on his feet at once.

"Nobody's going to leave this room," he declared with a gavel-like thud of an oath. "That woman's lifted documents o' mine that aren't going to get out o' this cabin."

McKinnon's less primordial instincts were slowly reasserting themselves. He looked from the one figure to the other, as though mystified by the case, as though uncertain of the charges being bandied back and forth.

"Who is this woman?" he demanded of Ganley with a sudden assumption of uncertainty.

"Who is she!" cried the exasperated Ganley. "I know who she is, and she knows I know!"

"Have you anything of this man's?" McKinnon deliberately demanded of the girl, realising that his intrusion had not yet amounted to a complete betrayal of his own position.

The upturned gaze of the girl against the wall and that of the wireless operator met. Ganley moved closer to the door, as though to guard it. No one spoke until McKinnon repeated the question.

"Yes," said the panting and pussled woman, "I have something of his."

"What is it?" asked the operator.

"A slip of paper."

"Where is it?"

"I have it," was all the girl answered.

"Then hand it out to me," ordered Ganley.

Her eyes were still on McKinnon's as her hand went to her breast.

"No, hand it to me," interposed McKinnon as he watched the slowly withdrawn hand that held a crumpled sheet of white paper. The wide, troubled eyes of the girl turned from one man to the other. Then she opened the slip of papr and glanced down at it. Ganley's hand went out for it authoritatively. The look in McKinnon's eyes was cually imperative.

It was then that the girl fell back a step or two along the cabin wall. She held the paper between her hands as she did so. Then, with a quick movement of her trembling fingers, and before either of the men could stop her, she tore the sheet in two, again and again.

"I'll kill you for that!" choked Ganley, his face contorted like a wrestler's, shaking and twitching, but not moving from where he stood.

McKinnon, with the revolver still in his hand, stepped between them.

"There's been enough of this prisering work," he cried as he faced Ganley. "I want to know what all this means."

"It means I'm going to get that woman." panted the other man, his face still grayish purple with rage.

"How get her?"

"Get her in irons, where she belongs."

"I stole nothing," interrupted the white-faced girl.

A stab of inopposite remorse went through McKinnon as he remembered that he himself was the cause of this last and unlovely scene.

"She lies!" Ganley was saying.

"Hold on there!" said McKinnon, getting a firmer grasp on both himself and the situation. "I came into this cabin and found you beating a girl over the head. Say what you've got to say about it. Then the girl can say what she has to say."

Ganley stared at his self-appointed judge.

"Are you the master of this ship?" he demanded.

"I'm the master of this situation," calmly replied the wireless operator with a pregnant thrust of the revolver which he still held in his hand. "And before our little party breaks up I'm going to understand what it means."

"Then ask this woman what she stole from me."

McKinnon had to feel and test his way as he went, like a man on thin ice.

"You mean for the woman to speak first?"

"Yes," retorted Ganley; "and she's going to do more than speak."

McKinnon turned to the woman, who still stood staring at him in unbroken and pussled silence.

"Well?" he said at last.

"What must I explain?" she finally asked, still studying his face.

"What you carried out of my cabin," answered Ganley.

"You want me to explain that?" she asked, her eyes on the younger man's face.

"Yes," answered the operator.

"Must I tell you?" still parried the perplexed woman.

"You must." McKinnon replied. this man and the wireless operator of

"It was the contract made between this ship," she deliberately answered.

"A contract!" said McKinnon.

"It was the agreement you signed to become a partner of this man."

"And you tore this agreement up?" demanded McKinnon with an assumption of incredibility. He waited for her glance of intelligence to show him that she had caught some vague inkling of his position, of the attitude of armed neutrality he was struggling to retain in that strange tangle of interests; but she did not seem to understand.

"You saw me tear it up," she replied, wondering in turn just what was expected of her, anxious not to endanger him by any foolish misstep on her part.

"Why?" asked McKinnon.

"I could not see anyone tied to a man whose hands are stained with blood."

Ganley laughed a heavy and mirthless laugh, as though resenting the theatricality of the woman's phrase.

"That's a hell of a reason!" he mumbled in his sullen guttural.

"I did it because I know what this man is," went on the woman, turning her slow and pussled stare from the operator to Ganley.

McKinnon, now in perfect control of himself, wheeled about to the Columbinelike figure in the black raincoat and the Chinese silk pajamas.

"You are Richard Duffy, acting with the Consolidated Fruit Concern and the authorities at Washington for the capture of a man named Ganley, are you not?"

"I am," answered the man in the raincoat, doggedly facing the young woman. McKinnon could see her lip pucker up with its little curl of unspeakable scorn.

"The man lies!" said the girl in her calm and deliberate tones. "This man is Ganley, 'Kingmaker Ganley,' himself!"

The man in the raincoat once more laughed his sullenly derisive laugh. His contemptuous defiance seemed to nettle and anger the woman into more coherent thought. When she spoke next she uttered her words more incisively, more quickly.

"This man," and her scorn was infinite, "is the buzzard of the tropics, the creature who waits and watches over sick republics, who prowls about after dying governments to pick their bones!"

"You're crazy!" scoffed the man she was accusing.

"He's called 'Kaiser Ganley,' the gun-runner, 'Pasha Ganley, the agent of every Central American patriot," she continued. "He's the fighter who never comes to do his own fighting. He's the man who sucks his living out of a blinded and ignorant people's gun-wounds."

"She lies!" declared Ganley, blinking up at McKinnon indifferently, as though to note the effect of her words on him.

"He drugs these simple-minded people with war talk and blinds them with the glitter of a little gilt braid," went on the woman, with increasing bitterness. "Then he turns and robs them. And there he is, the colleague, the intimado you have found, the man who made a tool of Juan Parra and murdered him or had him murdered in the swamps of the Magdalena, the man who was given twelve hours to make his way out of Brasil, the man that even Zelaya refused to stand by. He is the upholder of the weak who shipped twenty-five thousand rounds of ammunition into Locombia, embedded in lard, and twenty-eight hundred carbines crated and invoiced as laundry equipment, and nine cases of dynamite that went out of Mobile as land fertiliser for the Costa Rican coffee plantations."

The man in the raincoat, who had been squatting contemptuously on the berth-edge, swung forward to his feet at his. His many-lined, heavy, red face had lost its colour until it remained only a faded brick-dust tint.

"You see!" cried the woman more tumultuously. "He even confesses it is true. It surprises him that I should know so much. But there are other things I know. I know that he was the instigator of the Orinoco Colonisation frauds. I know he was once a Cuban blockade-runner, and once an agent of Don Carlos, the Spanish pretender. I know that he was a gun smuggler into the Balkans at the same time that he was being made a pasha by his friend, the Sultan of Turkey."

She paused for breath and pointed mockingly at her enemy's short, thick fingers as they slowly clenched and unclenched.

"Look at his hands and you will see! He went to Lhasa in the pay of a Russian secret agent. And they caught him and crucified him on one of their convent walls—they nailed him there through the hands. You can see the marks! He can't lie those away, for he hung there twelve hours until a tribesman set him free and spiritedhim across the frontier. And this is the great soldier who gave you money——"

Ganley once more broke in on her as she stopped to pant for breath.

"These are a pack o' lies!" he cried, and his voice was rasping and forced, as though it required a great effort for him to utter the words. "These are all damned lies!"

The woman pointed to the little particles of white paper scattered abou the floor.

"And that was not an agreement with this man?" she derisively asked.

"This man made an agreement with me, an open and honest agreement."

"Honest!" interpolated the scornful woman.

"And he had the right of saying yes or no to it. He's past the age of being wet-nursed into what he wants to do."

"Then he had the right to know what he was tied up with," parried the scoffing woman.

"He still has the right of saying yes or no to that agreement," declared Ganley as he brought his great, russet-coloured hand down on the berth-edge with a sudden blow. "But what's he to you, anyway?"

She looked from one to the other of the two men before her. But McKinnon gave her no chance to reply. The moment he had been waiting for had already arrived.

"I've had enough of this," he said as he held his hand out towards the sullen-faced Ganley. In this outstretched hand was a roll of bills held together by a rubber band.

"What's this?"

"It's your money!" said McKinnon.

"I won't take it!" retorted the other.

"You went take it?"

"Not until you show me a reason why we should split." He jerked a contemptuous thumb towards the staring woman. "And I don't call that a reason!"

"The whole thing's too tangled up for me," equivocated the operator.

"There's no tangle when it's pared down to the truth."

"But we can't argue about that all night, and I've got my key to attend to," complained the watchful McKinnon.

A new look of anxiety flashed across the other man's face at the mention of the key. It was a flash, and nothing more.

"Then you believe what she says?" asked Ganley more soberly, looking from the paper littered floor to the woman still standing motionless against the cabin wall.

"You haven't disproved it," said the operator with a gesture of simulated bewilderment.

"I'm proving and disproving nothing," was Ganley's reply. "I haven't been doing the talking. I'm not the talking kind. But I've come into touch with this kind o' women before. I know her, and she and her whole gang can't hoodwink me!"

"Well?" said McKinnon a little impatiently.

"Oh, I've known her ever since she hitched up with that crooked little concession hunter called Boynton."

"Stop!" cried the girl.

"For three years now shes been a feeder for that one-lunged climber, that Yankee renegade who's been trying to pose as a Spaniard. They're the team who went down yonder with a cooked up claim on the Cornruche Rubber Treaty territory."

"Stop!" cried the indignant girl, more shrilly. The scene in some way reminded McKinnon of a meeting between a cat and a mastiff. More and more he grew to resent the fact that this fragile and isolated figure should be dragged through such demeaning mires of scurrility. But Ganley was not to be stopped.

"And when they'd wrung their money out of that," he declared, "they dished up a Locombian nitrate claim and drained that dry. And when that was picked clean they wheedled their way into Duran's good graces. And then, to cinch her graft, this woman, this pink-and-white beauty right here before you, married a Santo Domingan half-caste filibuster who'd made a half million out of brandy smuggling and counterfeiting!"

CHAPTER XIV

THE PYRRHIC VICTOR
